Schaumburg's 'Outer Planets' development proposal lost in space

by PAUL GORES

The year 1968 was a time for extravagant dreams in Schaumburg.

Down at the old barn that then served as a municipal building, village officials were dreaming of turning their farming settlement into the capital of all Northwest suburbia.

At offices in Chicago, retail giants were planning to raise the world's largest shopping center out of a cornfield.

AND LEE N. Romano was dreaming his dream.

He called it "Outer Planets." It was to be a microcosmic city housing 70,000 in high-rise condominium units and employing 30,000 in high-rise office towers, including a 128-story skyscraper. There would be an 80-story hotel and a space needle for the sight-seers. And it would all be tied together by a monorail.

Romano's dream won initial support from Schaumburg officials, and his skyscraper even earned a place in the Guinness Book of World Records.

In the years that followed, the plans of the village officials and the businessmen took shape. The population swelled from 10,000 to 50,000. The Woodfield Shopping Center opened and soon was ringing up sales of more than $1 million per day. Schaumburg became the leading suburban marketplace.

BUT SOUTH OF Woodfield, near the I-90 interchange with Higgins Road, Romano's dream lay dormant.

His creditors tried to sell off pieces of his 238-acre tract, and in 1976 he filed a bankruptcy petition in an effort to stop them. The court battle has not been settled, but Schaumburg officials now have given up.

"Schaumburg is old enough not to believe in fairy tales," said Trustee Alan Larson, a member of the village development committee. That committee recently recommended that the land planned for Outer Planets be rezoned for a more conventional subdivision of single-family homes.

THE AREAS surrounding the Outer Planets site have been developed for residential use in the nine years since the project was approved initially, and village officials now say that Romano's project would no longer be compatible with its immediate surroundings.

Larson said the village wants to change zoning for Outer Planets in order to protect the bordering residential areas from other developers who might try to build on the site while it is still zoned for business.

Village Pres. Raymond Kessell said there is doubt whether Romano even owns all of the property any more because creditors are staking claim to

Library program abused

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Arlington Heights taxpayers are subsidizing library operations in several other Northwest suburbs whose inadequate collections force patrons to borrow books from the Arlington library by the thousands.

The Arlington Heights Memorial Library belongs to the North Suburban Library System — a cooperative of 41 public libraries in northeast Illinois which enables members to borrow and loan books between them. The program is called reciprocal borrowing.

When the service was initiated in 1966, area library officials expected a slight imbalance because of the varying growths and populations of the member communities.

Today, however, the program is being abused and a gross imbalance in the system is placing a strain on Arlington Heights. Its library, with the third largest circulation in the state, loans eight times as many books to nonresidents as it borrows. The library officials are concerned.

"IT'S A VERY sensitive issue," said Frank Dempsey, chief librarian in Arlington Heights. "It is certainly true that Arlington Heights loans more books than any others in the system. They come to us because we do have the largest book collection in the immediate geographical area. The success of someone finding what they want on our shelves is greater."

Arlington Heights last year received $39,000 from the system for books loaned in excess of those borrowed. That's how reciprocal borrowing works. The system pays 50 cents per book to member libraries who loan more items than they borrow. The money is appropriated in the system's $900,000 budget. The cooperative is totally funded by the state.

System director Robert McClarren said Arlington Heights library officials have indicated the imbalance payments are not adequate to cover the cost of providing service on a reciprocal borrowing basis. But neither McClarren nor Dempsey have circulation cost estimates.

Dempsey said he is not sure what the answer is. Pulling out of the system, he said, would deprive Arlington Heights residents of current programs provided by the cooperative. Those include access to a diverse 16 mm film collection, inter-library loan service, a microfilm collection, rotating exhibits which concentrate on specific topics of interest and a computer book location service.

ONE THING is certain, Arlington Heights taxpayers who have supported their library by approving two book referendums, are subsidizing neighboring libraries — facilities whose collections are inferior and whose patrons are forced to use Arlington's resources.

Arlington Heights now is building a $1.2 million addition to its library, 500 N. Dunton St. to relieve overcrowding.

While Arlington Heights continually leads the pack of loaners — 90,149 books last year — Mount Prospect library cardholders are the biggest nonresident borrowers, followed by Palatine and Indian Trails, serving Wheeling and Buffalo Grove.

Of the 42,668 books borrowed by Mount Prospect cardholders from other libraries during the system's last fiscal year (July 1976 to June 1977), 27,668 were checked out of the Arlington Heights library.

Gift rule for builders gets court's OK

The Illinois Supreme Court Tuesday ruled that municipalities may require residential developers to donate land or money for the purchase of land for school or park sites before approving the developer's construction plans.

The decision is a boon for rapidly expanding school and park districts that need sites to build additional facilities, but is of little value to school districts experiencing only slight growth, local officials said.

In these districts, developer contributions are needed not for land purchases but for building additions on existing schools or for funding the educational program.

UNDER THE TERMS of Naperville's 1972 land donation ordinance upheld by the court Tuesday, residential developers are required to donate land or money for the purchase or improvement of land for park or school district sites.

The money cannot be used for any other purpose and if it is not used as prescribed by the ordinance within seven years it reverts back to the developer, Marvin Glink, attorney for Naperville, said.

"The ordinance isn't worth 2 cents to us right now because it's too restrictive," Supt. Edward Grodsky of Prospect Heights Dist. 23 said. "We have a fairly stable enrollment and don't need any more school sites."

Instead, the district needs developers' monetary donations to support its educational program and make up for the tax lag experienced when new subdivisions are built, he said.

"THE STUDENTS arrive before the property tax revenues or state aid revenues arrive," Clarke Walser, member of the Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 Board of Education, said. "And the capital needs arrive even before the students."

Most school officials say they're better off with the land donation ordinances currently in effect in their area than they would be with a Naperville-type ordinance because these allow officials to use the money they receive from developers as they deem necessary.

The village of Wheeling, Prospect Heights, Streamwood and Bartlett, however, are planning hearings to change their ordinances and model them after Naperville's, a move officials in Dist. 23 nd Wheeling Township Dist. 21 find objectionable.

"If funds are specifically restricted for a site and a site only, it's probably not of much value to us," John Barger, associate superintendent in Dist. 21 said.

PROSPECT HEIGHTS Park District officials, however, are urging the ordinance change because they have very little land and believe the change can help their situation.

Byline report

Al Maurer writes poems.

He puts a record on the stereo in his small basement apartment in Hanover Park and writes McKuenesque poems about loves he's had and places he's been.

And someday his will be a household name, he says.

For now, he sends the poems to obscure literary magazines with names such as "Prairie Poets" and they publish them and send him a dollar or two or maybe just a couple of free issues.

OR HE SAVES the money he makes at his $140-a-week job in an Elgin plastics factory and pays $175 to a little-known publishing firm in Wisconsin for a few hundred booklets of his work that he hawks to friends and neighborhood bookstores at $1.25 apiece.

Maurer is a struggling writer.

He is 26 and single, and he wears a beard and dresses in blue jeans and smokes two or three cigarets a day.

He lives in a world of beer signs and John Wayne posters and pictures of Ann-Margret, of Cubs power and afternoons in Wrigley Field's bleachers, of parties and chicks and few commitments.

And of quiet aspirations.

"MY BIG AMBITION is to have a big, hard-cover volume published by a big publisher," he says, "and maybe they'll put it up in Kroch's and Brentano's or someplace like that and it'll go nationwide."

As a child, he had no inclination toward the typewriter. He was bored with poetry and spent his time playing baseball and worshiping Ernie Banks.

But by the time he was 18, he found that poems don't have to rhyme and that "there was something inside me I had to get out," he says.

But he wasn't sure why.

SO HE WENT OFF to college to find out what to do with his life. He went to Scotts Bluff, Neb., home of Hiram Scott College, but it gave him no answers, so he returned to Chicago and Elgin Community College and a bunch of odd jobs. And he wrote.

People would ask what his goals were and he would reply he was going to be a writer. Finally, in 1973, somebody asked him when he was going to start doing something about it. He decided to publish a book.

It was a small, blue booklet called "A Song of Loneliness." Maurer paid a Wisconsin publishing company to print 400 copies of it, and for 1½ years, he sold them at $1.75.

He flirted for a while with the idea of settling down, about getting married, climbing the ladder, working 9-to-5 and making a good living, but "I would feel like I'm stuck."

So Maurer has decided he just has to make sure he is good enough and he has returned to his aspirations. He went back to the publishing house, paid $175 and had another 32-page booklet printed, "Night Train Through Nebraska."

"IF THIS ONE doesn't work, the next one will. If it doesn't, then the next one will. Sooner or later, I'll have so many books out that somebody will recognize me."

Meanwhile, he waits. Maybe someone will read it and give him a chance. Maybe someone will want to take one of his poems and set it to music.

It is a business of maybes.

Illinois' best a stocking stuffer

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

Neiman-Marcus Co. department stores have made it easier for Illinoisans who want to find a gift for the person who has everything.

Spurning the usual exotic travel spots, the 1977 Neiman-Marcus Christmas catalog is offering a seven-day trip to the Lincoln shrines in Central Illinois.

No box lunch and bus ride affair, the "excursion to Lincolnland" costs $30,000 and includes enough lore about the nation's 16th President to satisfy even the most avid Lincoln buff.

"WE THINK IT will be quite popular and continue the Americana theme we started several years ago," said Neiman-Marcus official Keith Nix. The Lincoln tour replaces mundane items such as Carribean islands and his and her airplanes that have dotted the catalog in the past .

The Lincoln "safari" is a seven-day tour for five persons conducted by noted Lincoln scholar and actor Richard Blake and his wife. The couple will conduct the tour in costume and character and dramatize many of the historic events that took place here.

Neiman-Marcus officials said the itinerary brings the group from anywhere in the world to tour Lincoln's home and tomb — which normally have no admission price — a trip to New Salem and breakfast with Gov. James R. Thompson at governor's mansion.

The safari also will include a campout on a 40-acre farm once owned by Lincoln in Coles County. The campers will be housed in Civil War era tents.

Besides the Blakes, the group will be escorted by the Illinois' 5th Calvary Regiment, a group of Civil War buffs who perform regularly in full military regalia.

PROCEEDS from the sale of the trip in excess of the actual costs will be donated to Lincoln College in Lincoln. The college was the only institution named for the former President while he was alive.

Lincoln College officials said the trip was the brain child of Ray Phipps, a Springfield entrepreneur who was best known for selling deeds to 1-inch square plots at the Lincoln farm.

The excursion is scheduled to end with the planting of a red oak tree on the farm with a plaque honoring the lucky quintet that makes the trip.

But if the Lincoln trip does not suit the wealthy stocking stuffer's fancy, other items such as his and her windmills costing $16,000 and a ruby and diamond necklace, bracelet and ring ensemble costing $150,000 and a selection of 12 trees for $800 are available. The mini forest features trees each month of the year such as Witchhazel for October and sweet Cherry for February.

Packaged by Neiman-Marcus

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

Neiman-Marcus Co. department stores have made it easier for Illinoisans who want to find a gift for the person who has everything.

Spurning the usual exotic travel spots, the 1977 Neiman-Marcus Christmas catalog is offering a seven-day trip to the Lincoln shrines in Central Illinois.

No box lunch and bus ride affair, the "excursion to Lincolnland" costs $30,000 and includes enough lore about the nation's 16th President to satisfy even the most avid Lincoln buff.

"WE THINK IT will be quite popular and continue the Americana theme we started several years ago," said Neiman-Marcus official Keith Nix. The Lincoln tour replaces mundane items such as Carribean islands and his and her airplanes that have dotted the catalog in the past .

The Lincoln "safari" is a seven-day tour for five persons conducted by noted Lincoln scholar and actor Richard Blake and his wife. The couple will conduct the tour in costume and character and dramatize many of the historic events that took place here.

Neiman-Marcus officials said the itinerary brings the group from anywhere in the world to tour Lincoln's home and tomb — which normally have no admission price — a trip to New Salem and breakfast with Gov. James R. Thompson at governor's mansion.

The safari also will include a campout on a 40-acre farm once owned by Lincoln in Coles County. The campers will be housed in Civil War era tents.

Besides the Blakes, the group will be escorted by the Illinnois' 5th Calvary Regiment, a group of Civil War buffs who perform regularly in full military regalia.

PROCEEDS from the sale of the trip in excess of the actual costs will be donated to Lincoln College in Lincoln. The college was the only institution named for the former President while he was alive.

Lincoln College officials said the trip was the brain child of Ray Phipps, a Springfield entrepreneur who was best known for selling deeds to 1-inch square plots at the Lincoln farm.

The excursion is scheduled to end with the planting of a red oak tree on the farm with a plaque honoring the lucky quintet that makes the trip.

But if the Lincoln trip does not suit the wealthy stocking stuffer's fancy, other items such as his and her windmills costing $16,000 and a ruby and diamond necklace, bracelet and ring ensemble costing $150,000 and a selection of 12 trees for $800 are available. The mini forest features trees each month of the year such as Witchhazel for October and sweet Cherry for February.

Social Security bill to hike taxes, benefits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Ways and Means Committee Wednesday finished drafting a bill to raise Social Security taxes sharply over the next decade and set up a new method of computing benefits for generations to come.

The measure is expected to receive final, formal approval by the committee today and then go to the House floor.

It is designed to put the system back on a sound financial basis well into the next century.

THE BILL also would:

- Bring federal, state and local government workers and employes of nonprofit organizations under mandatory Social Security coverage in 1982.
- Raise the amount of wages retirees can earn before losing part of their Social Security benefits, from the present $3,000 to $4,000 next year and $4,500 in 1979. The increase would apply only to retirees 65 and over.
- Eliminate instances in which present law treats men and women differently. For example, a man who takes care of a disabled child could receive benefits that now go only to women.

Beginning next year, the bill would raise Social Security payroll taxes equally for employers and employes — above and beyond increases already scheduled under existing law. The specific increases, nearly doubling the rate for some high-income workers by 1981, were approved by the committee and made public Tuesday.

High-income workers would be hit harder than low. A person making $10,000 now pays an annual Social Security tax of $585 this year. Under existing law this will increase to $645 in 1986. Under the bill, it would increase further to $690 in 1986.

A worker earning $37,500 nw pays $965 a year in tax. This would go to $1,896 in 1986 under existing law; to $2,586 in 1986 under the bill.

WHEN CONGRESS last overhauled Social Security in 1972, it linked benefits to inflation in a way that most congressmen now concede was a mistake. As a result, under present law, some future retirees will receive more in retirement benefits than they did working.

To correct this, the bill contains a new method of "indexing" benefits to a retiree's past wages, adjusted for inflation.

This is intended to preserve, generation after generation, the present "replacement rates" — the percentage of a person's working income which he can expect to get in retirement from Social Security.

At present a low-income worker receives in retirement 60 per cent of his working income; average pay workers get back 42 per cent; high-income workers, 30 per cent.

Under present law, these would rise to 106 per cent for low wage earners in the year 2050; 70 per cent for average wage earners and 48 per cent for high wage earners.

Retirees would lose these large increases under the bill, remaining at about today's percentages.

Republicans on the committee said the bill doesn't fully put Social Security on a sound financial basis, but in fact leaves an $800 billion deficit when income and outgo are averaged over the next 75 years.

Murder was like 'swatting a fly' to 'Kojak' fan

MIAMI (UPI) — Ronny Zamora attached no more significance to shooting an elderly neighbor "that swatting a fly" after watching thousands of television killings, according to the star expert witness for the defense.

"This child was exposed to thousands and thousands of situations where, when you are threatened, bang, you shoot," Dr. Michael Gilbert said Wednesday.

Gilbert, a psychiatrist, spent 20 hours interviewing the 15-year-old murder defendant, accused in the robbery-slaying of 82-year-old Elinor Haggart June 4.

ATTORNEY Ellis Rubin is offering the unusual defense that Zamora was insane at the time of the slaying because he suffered from "involuntary subliminal etlevision intoxication."

Gilbert said, "When a child sees that many killings, the death of a human being in that type of situation has no more significance than swatting a fly." He said Zamora could have shot Mrs. Haggart at any time after she surprised him while robbing her house. But the gun went off, he added, only when she threatened to call police.

The psychiatrist also said Zamora described the scene to him "as a 'Kojak' television show." Prosecutor Tom Headley objected and Circuit Judge Paul A. Baker ordered the statement stricken from the record.

Earlier, Wednesday, Rubin, unexplainedly, called two Court-appointed psychiatrists who had examined Zamora for the state. They both testified they believed the boy knew right from wrong at the time of the crime and realized the consequences of his act — the legal test of sanity under Florida law.

BUT GILBERT disagreed. He said Zamora knew the difference between right and wrong "up until the time the trigger was pulled."

Zamora, he said, "has been conditioned that the thing to do is to shoot."

Gilbert said Zamora did not suffer from a psychosis but from two other disorders — a serious personality defect and the distortion of his concept of "what goes on in the world" by "the bad consequences of over saturation with television violence."

He said Zamora was emotionally disturbed and "more prone to influence by television violence than other children.

"AT THE TIME OF the shooting, he did not know what he was doing and therefore could not know the nature and consequences of his act," Gilbert said.

The prosecution objected strenuously to Gilbert's testifying. With the jury excused, Headly contended the psychiatrist obtained his information after giving Zamora the hypnotic drug, sodium amytal ,at the Dade County jail.

Headley claimed Gilbert told him he was unsure of his opinion of the boy before administering the drug. But Gilbert said he had formed an opinion and only used the drug to confirm it and Baker allowed his testimony.

"I'm not about to sit here and rob a 15-year-old boy of a defense," the judge said.

The young defendant was led from the courtroom before the psychiatrists began testifying after Rubin said it would be cruel to make him listen to their evaluations.

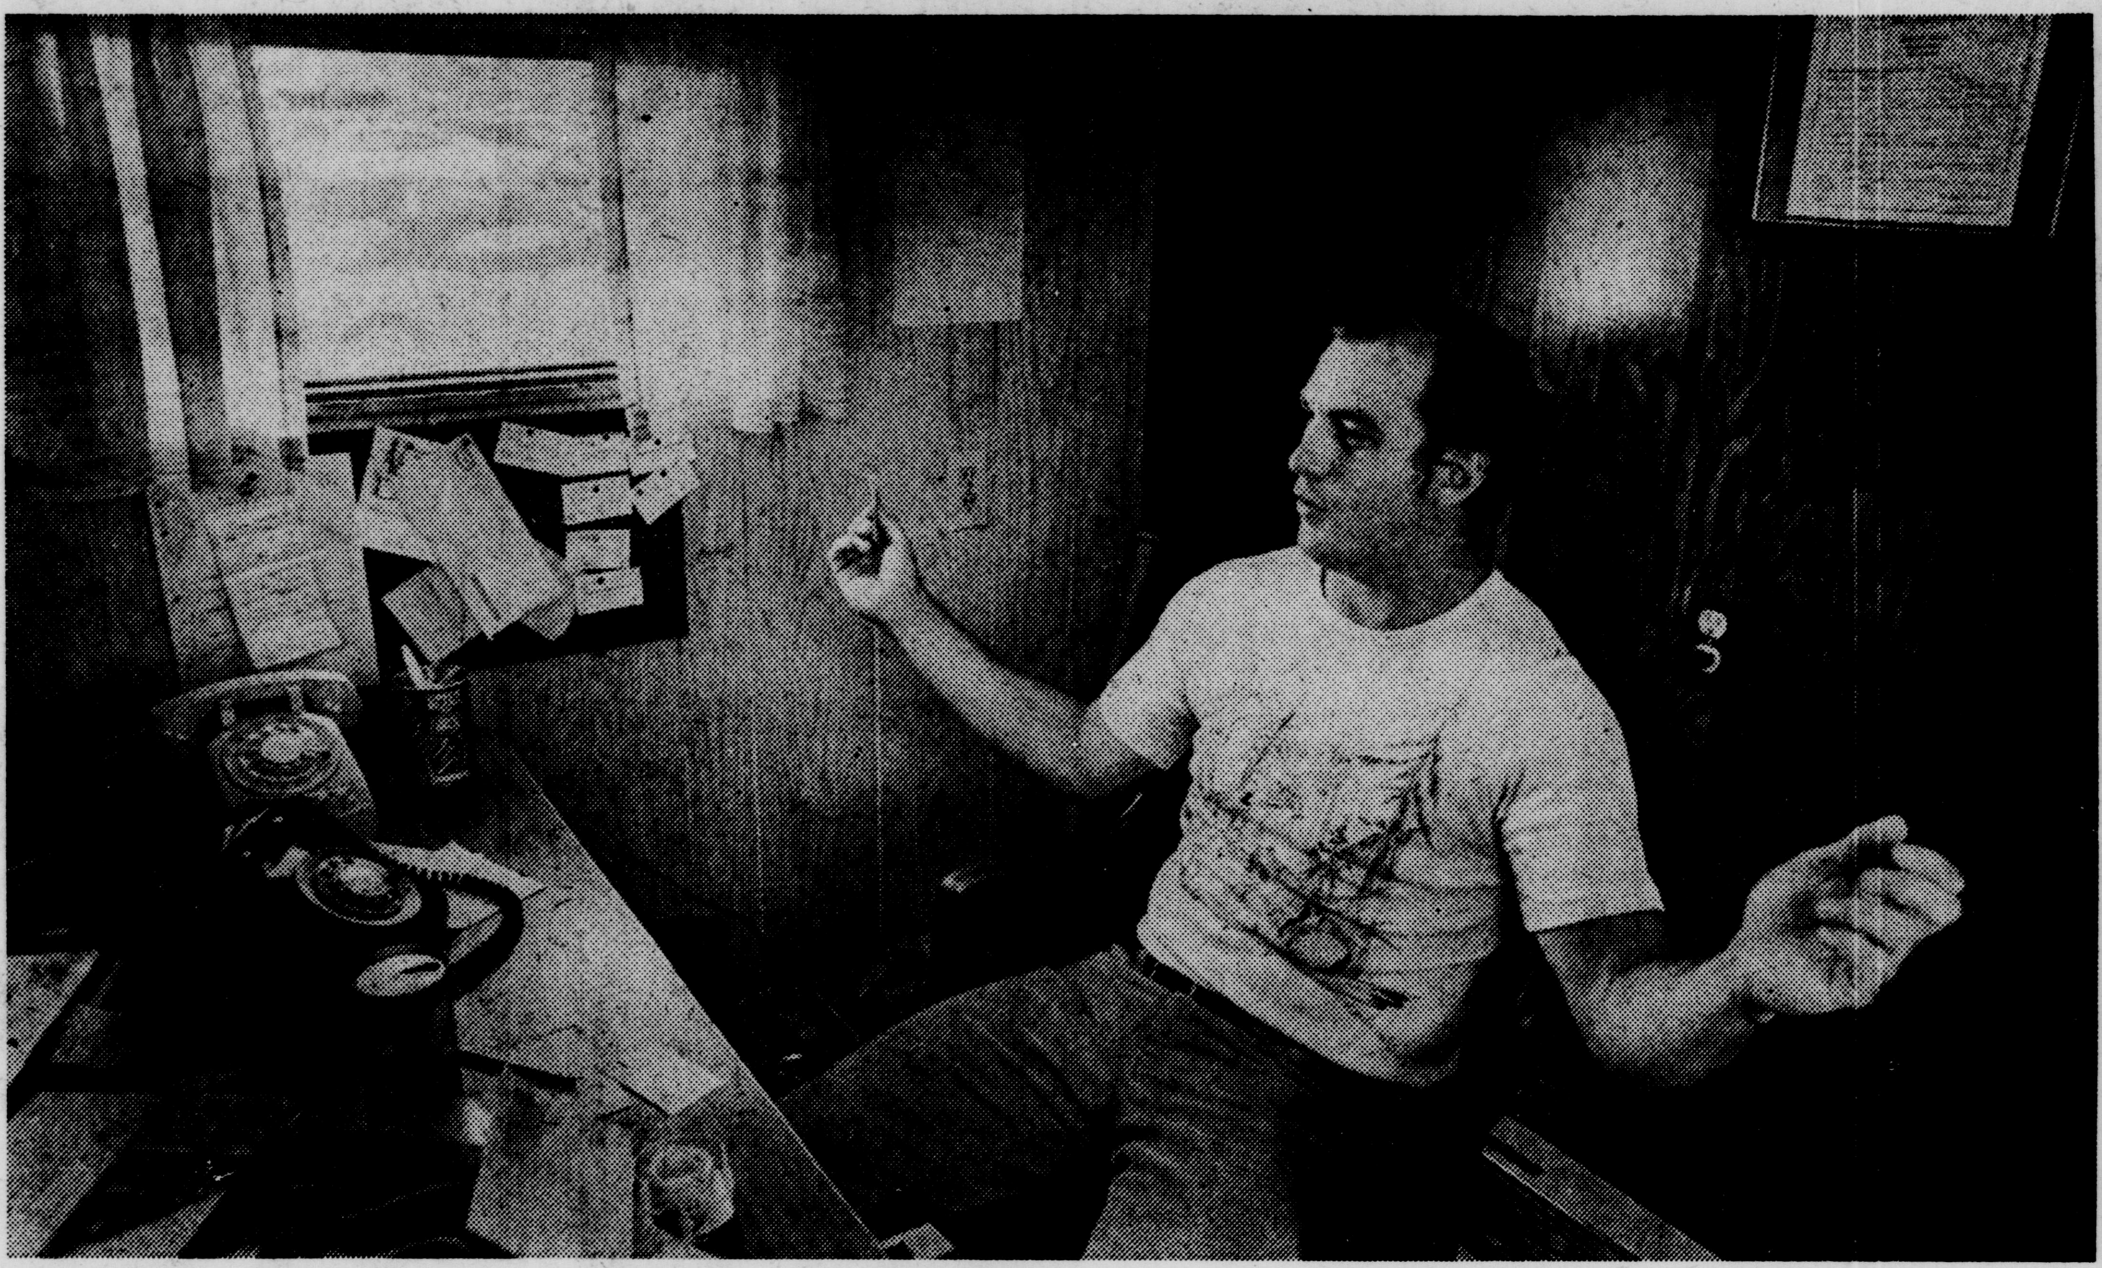
FBI refuses classified info to Jaworski

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief investigator Leon Jaworski has been denied any access to classified information in Congress' Korean influence peddling probe because he still needs security clearance, the FBI disclosed Wednesday.

An FBI spokesman said that, for reasons unknown to him, the House Ethics Committee did not ask the bureau until last Thursday to run the necessary security clearance checks on either Jaworski, the former Watergate prosecutor, or his top aide on the House panel.

Jaworski was named chief counsel to the ethics panel's bribery investigation 2½ months ago. He brought a Houston law firm associate, Peter White, along with him as his deputy counsel.

The FBI spokesman said the background investigation was begun as soon as the committee requested, and "we are hoping to have it completed by Friday."



THE WAY Rick Kwasinski of Century Towing sees it, the world needs towing companies. "Without them there is not going to be such a thing as law," he said, noting that a recent court ruling is going to make it difficult for towing companies to make a profit.

Rosemont firm stays open

Ruling fails to tow business away

by LYNN ASINOF

Century Towing in Rosemont was open for business Wednesday, and owner Rick Kwasinski said it's going to stay that way.

Never mind the Illinois Appellate Court ruling issued Tuesday that makes it illegal for Century to demand payment for the return of a car towed from a private lot.

Kwasinski said that ruling hasn't stopped any of the Chicago towing firms. "None of them are closed. All of them are pulling," he said. And so is Century Towing.

After all, Kwasinski said, there's a need for people in his line of work.

"IT IS A NECESSARY thing you got to do," Kwasinski said.

For example, Kwasinski talked of a drug store owner located across from a movie theatre. When movie-goers park in the drug store lot, Century Towing is the one that makes sure drug store patrons have a place to park.

Kwasinski makes it sound like a public service, but hapless suburban drivers towed by Century have had to cough up $45 before they get their cars back. And despite the Tuesday court ruling, it was business as usual at Century Wednesday.

Kwasinski was purposely vague about how he is going to turn a profit if he can no longer hold cars ransom. He said there are ways to get people to pay, but said he didn't want to talk about it.

THE COURT SAYS towing companies can either bill the drivers or the property owners whose lots are cleared. But if the drivers refuse to pay, the only recourse is to sue.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said Century and four Chicago towing companies were notified late Wednesday by messenger that they would be charged with theft if they refuse to release cars until payment is made. The letter from Carey promised "prompt and vigorous prosecution."

A court appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court could delay such prosecution, but Carey's office noted that no appeal has yet been filed. "All we can speak for is the law today," said spokesman David Cuprisin.

KWASINSKI ADMITTED there have been some abuses in the towing business, and he's all for regulation. "If they are taking cars wrongfully, then they are wrong," he said, maintaining that his firm only tows cars that are parked improperly.

"We attempted to contact the largest towing companies first," Cupricin said. "Century is one of the larger ones."

The ruling is aimed at Lincoln Towing Service, an infamous firm on the North Side of Chicago that has inspired songs about its high-handed practices. Carey, however, said the ruling will apply to all towing firms. It will not affect police towing.

CENTURY OPERATES throughout the Northwest suburbs, contracting with private property owners. Although Kwasinski says he operates a clean business, some local officials say Century is "the Lincoln Towing of the Northwest Suburbs."

Kwasinski said he's already been contacted by some of the Chicago towing firms, and he says he will join in an appeal of the case. Although he's not anxious to be associated with Lincoln Towing, he figures there is strength in numbers.

"You're stronger when you're a team," Kwasinski said.

AND KWASINSKI said he is well aware that his future hinges on the outcome of the case. "If they knock them down they are going to knock everyone else down," he said.

If worse comes to worst, Kwasinski says Century Towing will find other ways to turn a profit.

"We'll never have to close our doors because we sell auto parts and do regular towing," Kwasinski said, noting that regular towing is done at the request of the car owner.

But Kwasinski says the world will be the worse for the loss of his kind of towing service. He said though no one likes towing outfits, "without them there is not going to be such a thing as law."

2 out of 3 prefer no law over cancer risks: survey

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two out of three Americans think they, not the government, should decide whether saccharin or other alleged cancer causing substances should be allowed on the market, an industry-sponsored survey said Wednesday.

The poll also said nearly half of those surveyed still agree with the philosophy of the Delaney amendment — the federal cancer law under which saccharin was banned — and two-thirds believe they do not have enough information to decide for themselves on potential cancer risks.

The Cambridge Reports survey, paid for by Union Carbide which said it had nothing to do with the way it was conducted or written, concluded:

"If regulatory agencies feel they have enough data to support a ban, they ought to be able to make that information available to the public and let the public decide.

"This is precisely what is done in the case of cigarets. Americans are aware of the risks of cancer and believe it is increasing; however they are not willing to support federal bans on substances they want to use."

UNION CARBIDE ALSO emphasized that it does not make saccharin. "We're not in that business at all," a spokesman said.

The spokesman said saccharin was chosen as an example because, since the ban had just been announced when the survey was made, it was fresh in people's minds.

Sherwin-Williams is the only domestic manufacturer of saccharin, according to the Food and Drug Administration.

The survey drew a mixed reception at a Consumer Product Safety Commission meeting where it was presented by Union Carbide official J. B. Browning and Gene Pokorny of the survey firm.

"I reject almost all of the conclusions," said commissioner David Pittle. "I give a failing grade to it" because the conclusions were not supported by the data.

ABSENT FELLOW commissioner Lawrence Kushner sent word he thought the conclusions "in some cases were so foolish he didn't want to spend the time coming down here to discuss it."

Commission Chairman John Byington said he agreed with the survey's final conclusion the sense regulatory agencies should not ask the public to take decisions to ban products on "faith." The public wants and deserves better information, he said.

The June survey of 1,500 persons cited the case of the saccharin ban and mentioned tobacco, asking, "would you favor allowing individuals to make their own risk-benefit decisions or do you favor bans at the federal level?"

Sixty-six per cent of those responding favored individual risk, 22 per cent federal bans and 12 per cent were undecided.

But 49 per cent agreed "no substance or chemical should be permitted to be sold if it is found to induce cancer" — as mandated for food additives by the Delaney amendment — while 34 per cent disagreed and 18 per cent didn't know.

High-income workers would be hit harder than low. A person making $10,000 now pays an annual Social Security tax of $585 this year. Under existing law this will increase to $645 in 1986. Under the bill, it would increase further to $690 in 1986.

A worker earning $37,500 nw pays $965 a year in tax. This would go to $1,896 in 1986 under existing law; to $2,586 in 1986 under the bill.

WHEN CONGRESS last overhauled Social Security in 1972, it linked benefits to inflation in a way that most congressmen now concede was a mistake. As a result, under present law, some future retirees will receive more in retirement benefits than they did working.

To correct this, the bill contains a new method of "indexing" benefits to a retiree's past wages, adjusted for inflation.

This is intended to preserve, generation after generation, the present "replacement rates" — the percentage of a person's working income which he can expect to get in retirement from Social Security.

At present a low-income worker receives in retirement 60 per cent of his working income; average pay workers get back 42 per cent; high-income workers, 30 per cent.

Under present law, these would rise to 106 per cent for low wage earners in the year 2050; 70 per cent for average wage earners and 48 per cent for high wage earners.

Retirees would lose these large increases under the bill, remaining at about today's percentages.

Republicans on the committee said the bill doesn't fully put Social Security on a sound financial basis, but in fact leaves an $800 billion deficit when income and outgo are averaged over the next 75 years.

Murder was like 'swatting a fly' to 'Kojak' fan

MIAMI (UPI) — Ronny Zamora attached no more significance to shooting an elderly neighbor "that swatting a fly" after watching thousands of television killings, according to the star expert witness for the defense.

"This child was exposed to thousands and thousands of situations where, when you are threatened, bang, you shoot," Dr. Michael Gilbert said Wednesday.

Gilbert, a psychiatrist, spent 20 hours interviewing the 15-year-old murder defendant, accused in the robbery-slaying of 82-year-old Elinor Haggart June 4.

ATTORNEY Ellis Rubin is offering the unusual defense that Zamora was insane at the time of the slaying because he suffered from "involuntary subliminal etlevision intoxication."

Gilbert said, "When a child sees that many killings, the death of a human being in that type of situation has no more significance than swatting a fly." He said Zamora could have shot Mrs. Haggart at any time after she surprised him while robbing her house. But the gun went off, he added, only when she threatened to call police.

The psychiatrist also said Zamora described the scene to him "as a 'Kojak' television show." Prosecutor Tom Headley objected and Circuit Judge Paul A. Baker ordered the statement stricken from the record.

Earlier, Wednesday, Rubin, unexplainedly, called two Court-appointed psychiatrists who had examined Zamora for the state. They both testified they believed the boy knew right from wrong at the time of the crime and realized the consequences of his act — the legal test of sanity under Florida law.

BUT GILBERT disagreed. He said Zamora knew the difference between right and wrong "up until the time the trigger was pulled."

Zamora, he said, "has been conditioned that the thing to do is to shoot."

Gilbert said Zamora did not suffer from a psychosis but from two other disorders — a serious personality defect and the distortion of his concept of "what goes on in the world" by "the bad consequences of over saturation with television violence."

He said Zamora was emotionally disturbed and "more prone to influence by television violence than other children.

"AT THE TIME OF the shooting, he did not know what he was doing and therefore could not know the nature and consequences of his act," Gilbert said.

The prosecution objected strenuously to Gilbert's testifying. With the jury excused, Headly contended the psychiatrist obtained his information after giving Zamora the hypnotic drug, sodium amytal ,at the Dade County jail.

Headley claimed Gilbert told him he was unsure of his opinion of the boy before administering the drug. But Gilbert said he had formed an opinion and only used the drug to confirm it and Baker allowed his testimony.

"I'm not about to sit here and rob a 15-year-old boy of a defense," the judge said.

The young defendant was led from the courtroom before the psychiatrists began testifying after Rubin said it would be cruel to make him listen to their evaluations.

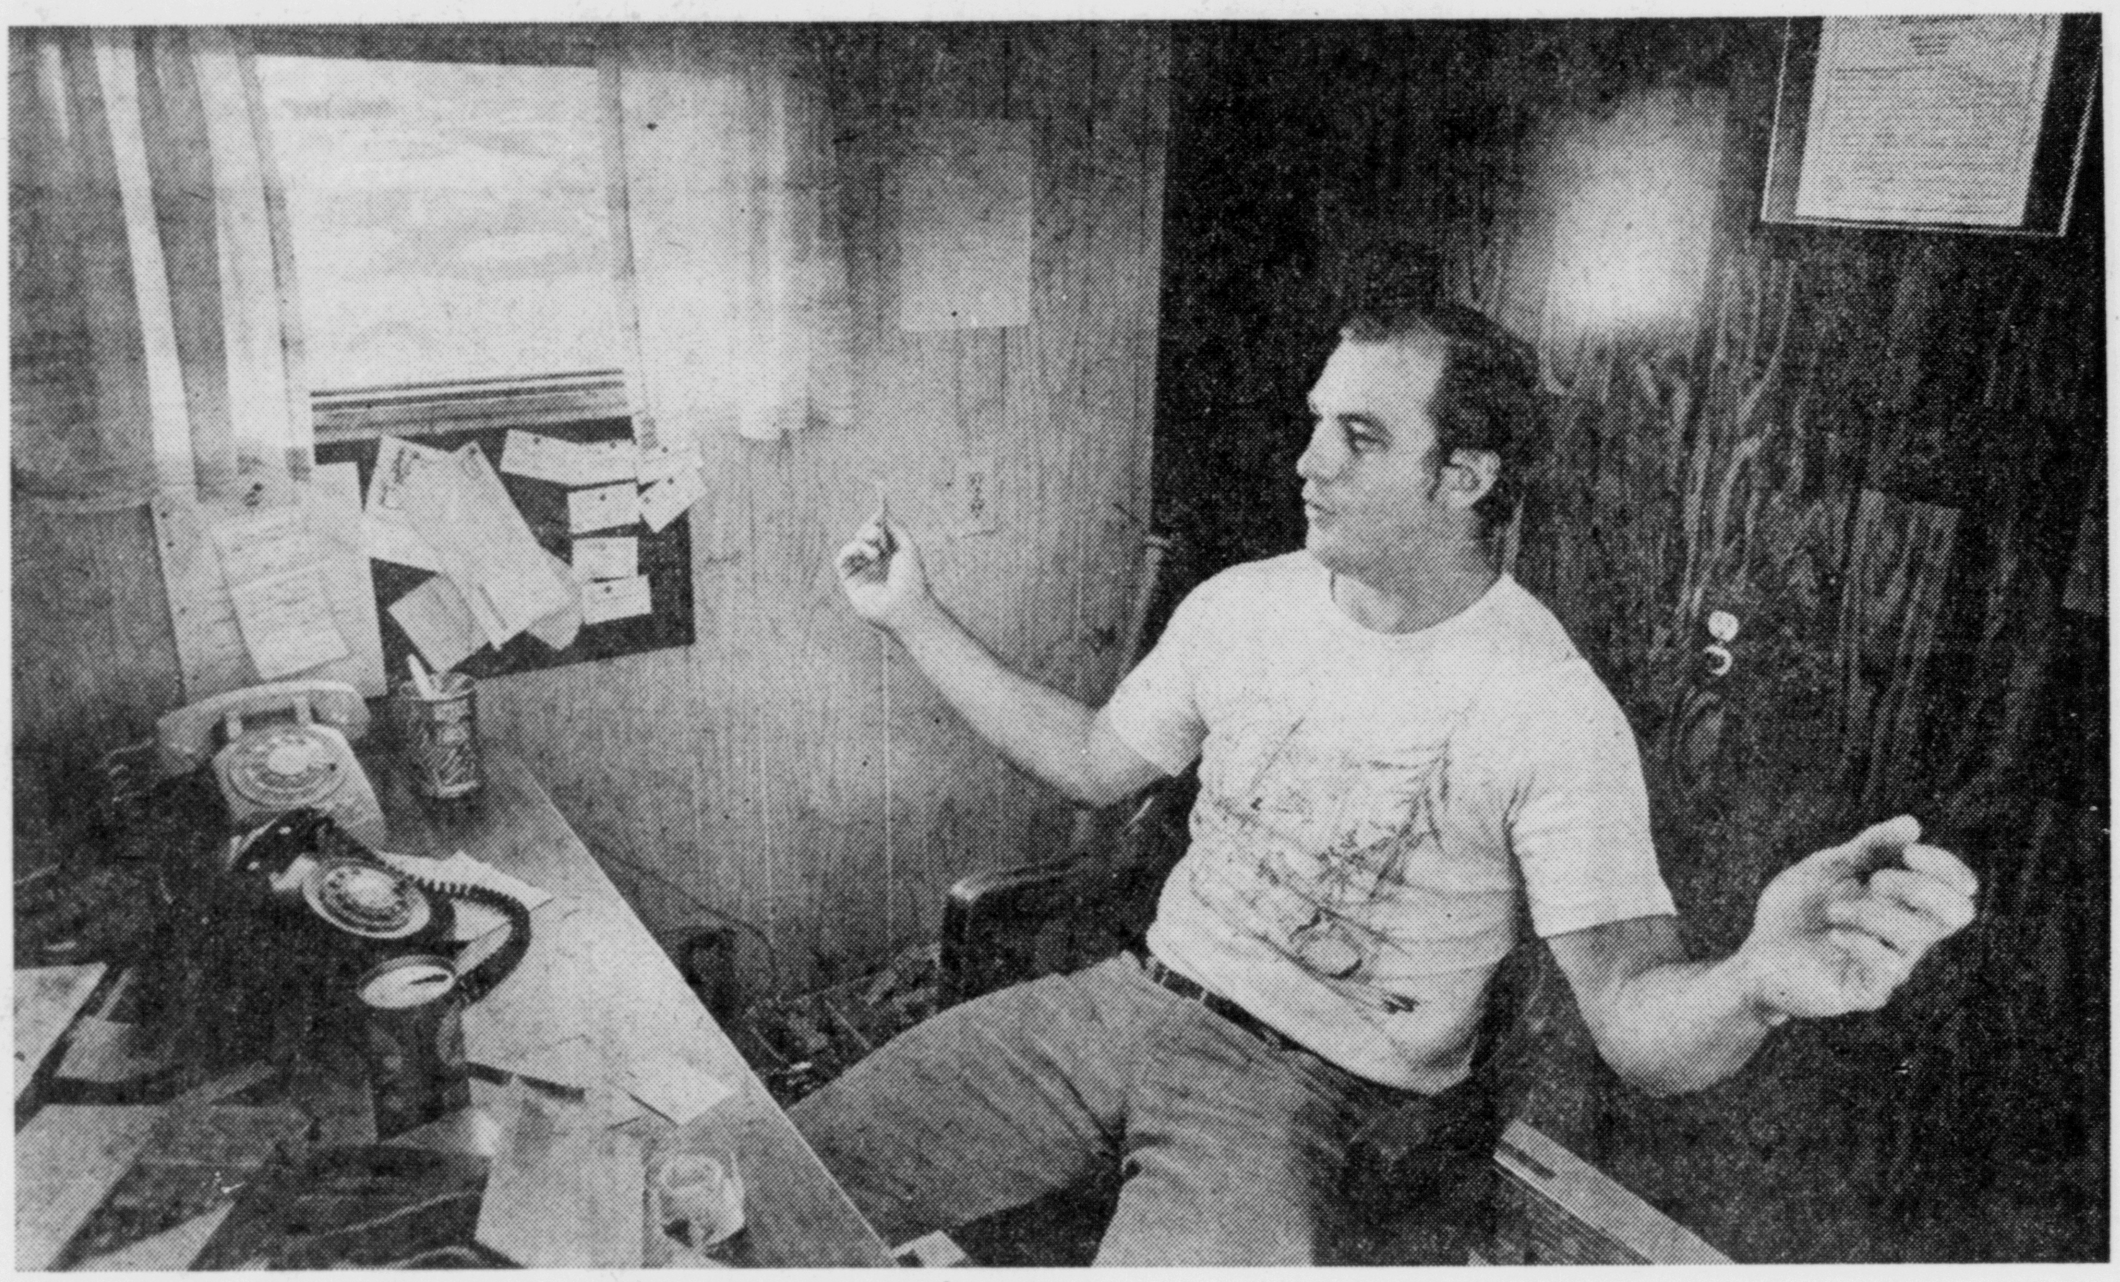
FBI refuses classified info to Jaworski

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Chief investigator Leon Jaworski has been denied any access to classified information in Congress' Korean influence peddling probe because he still needs security clearance, the FBI disclosed Wednesday.

An FBI spokesman said that, for reasons unknown to him, the House Ethics Committee did not ask the bureau until last Thursday to run the necessary security clearance checks on either Jaworski, the former Watergate prosecutor, or his top aide on the House panel.

Jaworski was named chief counsel to the ethics panel's bribery investigation 2½ months ago. He brought a Houston law firm associate, Peter White, along with him as his deputy counsel.

The FBI spokesman said the background investigation was begun as soon as the committee requested, and "we are hoping to have it completed by Friday."



THE WAY Rick Kwasinski of Century Towing sees it, the world needs towing companies. "Without them there is not going to be such a thing as law," he said, noting that a recent court ruling is going to make it difficult for towing companies to make a profit.

Rosemont firm stays open

by LYNN ASINOF

Century Towing in Rosemont was open for business Wednesday, and owner Rick Kwasinski said it's going to stay that way.

Never mind the Illinois Appellate Court ruling issued Tuesday that makes it illegal for Century to demand payment for the return of a car towed from a private lot.

Kwasinski said that ruling hasn't stopped any of the Chicago towing firms. "None of them are closed. All of them are pulling," he said. And so is Century Towing.

After all, Kwasinski said, there's a need for people in his line of work.

"IT IS A NECESSARY thing you got to do," Kwasinski said.

For example, Kwasinski talked of a drug store owner located across from a movie theatre. When movie-goers park in the drug store lot, Century Towing is the one that makes sure drug store patrons have a place to park.

Kwasinski makes it sound like a public service, but hapless suburban drivers towed by Century have had to cough up $45 before they get their cars back. And despite the Tuesday court ruling, it was business as usual at Century Wednesday.

Kwasinski was purposely vague about how he is going to turn a profit if he can no longer hold cars ransom. He said there are ways to get people to pay, but said he didn't want to talk about it.

THE COURT SAYS towing companies can either bill the drivers or the property owners whose lots are cleared. But if the drivers refuse to pay, the only recourse is to sue.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said Century and four Chicago towing companies were notified late Wednesday by messenger that they would be charged with theft if they refuse to release cars until payment is made. The letter from Carey promised "prompt and vigorous prosecution."

A court appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court could delay such prosecution, but Carey's office noted that no appeal has yet been filed. "All we can speak for is the law today," said spokesman David Cuprisin.

KWASINSKI ADMITTED there have been some abuses in the towing business, and he's all for regulation. "If they are taking cars wrongfully, then they are wrong," he said, maintaining that his firm only tows cars that are parked improperly.

"We attempted to contact the largest towing companies first," Cupricin said. "Century is one of the larger ones."

The ruling is aimed at Lincoln Towing Service, an infamous firm on the North Side of Chicago that has inspired songs about its high-handed practices. Carey, however, said the ruling will apply to all towing firms. It will not affect police towing.

CENTURY OPERATES throughout the Northwest suburbs, contracting with private property owners. Although Kwasinski says he operates a clean business, some local officials say Century is "the Lincoln Towing of the Northwest Suburbs."

Kwasinski said he's already been contacted by some of the Chicago towing firms, and he says he will join in an appeal of the case. Although he's not anxious to be associated with Lincoln Towing, he figures there is strength in numbers.

"You're stronger when you're a team," Kwasinski said.

AND KWASINSKI said he is well aware that his future hinges on the outcome of the case. "If they knock them down they are going to knock everyone else down," he said.

If worse comes to worst, Kwasinski says Century Towing will find other ways to turn a profit.

"We'll never have to close our doors because we sell auto parts and do regular towing," Kwasinski said, noting that regular towing is done at the request of the car owner.

But Kwasinski says the world will be the worse for the loss of his kind of towing service. He said though no one likes towing outfits, "without them there is not going to be such a thing as law."

2 out of 3 prefer no law over cancer risks: survey

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two out of three Americans think they, not the government, should decide whether saccharin or other alleged cancer causing substances should be allowed on the market, an industry-sponsored survey said Wednesday.

The poll also said nearly half of those surveyed still agree with the philosophy of the Delaney amendment — the federal cancer law under which saccharin was banned — and two-thirds believe they do not have enough information to decide for themselves on potential cancer risks.

The Cambridge Reports survey, paid for by Union Carbide which said it had nothing to do with the way it was conducted or written, concluded:

"If regulatory agencies feel they have enough data to support a ban, they ought to be able to make that information available to the public and let the public decide.

"This is precisely what is done in the case of cigarets. Americans are aware of the risks of cancer and believe it is increasing; however they are not willing to support federal bans on substances they want to use."

UNION CARBIDE ALSO emphasized that it does not make saccharin. "We're not in that business at all," a spokesman said.

The spokesman said saccharin was chosen as an example because, since the ban had just been announced when the survey was made, it was fresh in people's minds.

Sherwin-Williams is the only domestic manufacturer of saccharin, according to the Food and Drug Administration.

The survey drew a mixed reception at a Consumer Product Safety Commission meeting where it was presented by Union Carbide official J. B. Browning and Gene Pokorny of the survey firm.

"I reject almost all of the conclusions," said commissioner David Pittle. "I give a failing grade to it" because the conclusions were not supported by the data.

ABSENT FELLOW commissioner Lawrence Kushner sent word he thought the conclusions "in some cases were so foolish he didn't want to spend the time coming down here to discuss it."

Commission Chairman John Byington said he agreed with the survey's final conclusion the sense regulatory agencies should not ask the public to take decisions to ban products on "faith." The public wants and deserves better information, he said.

The June survey of 1,500 persons cited the case of the saccharin ban and mentioned tobacco, asking, "would you favor allowing individuals to make their own risk-benefit decisions or do you favor bans at the federal level?"

Sixty-six per cent of those responding favored individual risk, 22 per cent federal bans and 12 per cent were undecided.

But 49 per cent agreed "no substance or chemical should be permitted to be sold if it is found to induce cancer" — as mandated for food additives by the Delaney amendment — while 34 per cent disagreed and 18 per cent didn't know.

Body found where woman last seen

The decomposing body of a young woman was found near the University of South Florida golf course in Tampa Wednesday in the same general area where a missing 22-year-old woman last was seen jogging Sept. 14. Paul Uravich, director of public safety at USF, said officers were working to identify the body and declined to comment on whether it might be that of Eleanor Peters. "All we know right now is that it is the body of a young white woman" Uravich said. "The medical examiner says the woman had been dead two to two and a half weeks." Miss Peters, daughter of a wealthy Chicago stock speculator and whose mother was an heir to a well-known advertising firm, last was seen when she was taken to the area of the golf course by a friend with the intention of jogging back to his house.

MSD prosecution rests case

The prosecution rested its case Wednesday following nearly four weeks of testimony from some two dozen witnesses in the $1.2 million Metropolitan Sanitary District sludge hauling bribery trial- After the prosecution rested, U.S. District Court Judge John F. Grady said he would hear arguments on motions of acquittal for E. Bronson Ingram, a co-owner of the Ingram Corp. of New Orleans, and MSD Commissioner Chester P. Majewski. Ingram is charged with participating in a $1.2 million conspiracy to bribe Chicago officials to obtain a lucrative contract for his firm to haul sludge from Stickney to downstate Fulton County. Majewski, who voted in favor of awarding Ingram the sludge contract, has been accused of accepting an electric generator from a construction firm owned by the Ingram Corp.

Nude dancing ban ruled invalid

City ordinances banning nude dancing and drink solicitation at night clubs have been ruled invalid and police will not enforce them, city officials say. Police department legal expert Richard Brzeczek said Wednesday he and city attorneys are considering taking to the Illinois Supreme Court the cases in which the laws were invalidated. Another possibility, he said, is passing a new ordinance that will meet the specifications of the appeals court."For right now," he said, "we must abide by the court ruling."

Treatment ordered defendant

A judge Wednesday criticized the state mental health code and then ordered mental health officials to treat Philip Zahn, charged with killing his psychiatrist, until his upcoming trial. Zahn, 24, is charged with murder in the slaying of Dr. Charles W. Schlageter, 57, in the doctor's office last July at Northwestern Memorial Hospital. Prosecutors contended state law makes no provision for a state hospital to treat a defendant who is awaiting trial and has been found fit for trial. Overriding their objections, Cook County Circuit Court Judge Fred G. Suria said he was ordering state mental health officials to treat Zahn under "the equal-protection clause of the U.S. Constitution."

Kusper's image rated as poor

Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., said Wednesday Chicago Republican Party Chairman Louis J. Kasper "doesn't have the record, the image" to be a good GOP candidate for Cook County sheriff in 1978. "Lou (Kasper) is a good No. 2, 3 or 4 man, but he doesn't have the record, the image, the oratorical aptitude or the intangibles to run for that office," Derwinski said on the eve of the start of the Cook County Republican slatemaking. Noting that former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie is backing Kasper, Derwinski said, "The present governor, not the former governor, ought to be calling the shots. This could be turned around effectively if (Gov. James R.) Thompson discovered politics."

Only three men still able to make it to club

EFFINGHAM, Ill. (UPI) — Only three members of the Effingham Last Man's Club formed 43 years ago were able to make it to the annual meeting Tuesday night and speculate who would get to drink a bottle of cognac.

R. K. Volts, 85, Russell Michaelree, 80, and Alfred Underriner, 79, ate the meat loaf and baked potato banquet prepared by the American Legion Auxiliary.

The other two club members, Henry Bursig and Alfred Greuel, are hospitalized.

"Volts says he's going to get that bottle because he says he's the most active," said Michaelree. "He drives 250 miles a week and still bowls."

"But they're just talking. I'm the one who's going to get the bottle," said Michaelree, an attorney who still goes to the office every work day and plays a round or two of golf a week.

The cognac is kept in a vault at the First National Bank and will go to the last surviving member of the World War I veterans club. The club had 146 members in 1934.

Village board wrapup

Plans to build bank rejected

Plans by the Suburban Bank of Rolling Meadows to build a branch facility next to the Arlington Heights Post Office have been rejected by the Arlington Heights Village Board because of traffic congestion near the proposed site.

Bank officials had sought rezoning on a one-acre site at the southwest corner of Euclid and Kennicott avenues for a one-story building and a four-lane drive-in facility.

Residents from the area opposed the proposal, saying traffic in the area already is excessive because of the post office and Arlington Park Race Track.

Bank officials offered to station a police officer at the site to direct traffic but the village board agreed Monday that the rezoning request should be denied.

84-acre rezoning approved

Rezoning was approved for an 84-acre site bounded by Windsor Drive, Burr Oak Drive, Buffalo Grove Road and Suffield Drive where Miller Builders, Skokie, plans to build 174 houses, 174 apartment units and a small commercial center.

The property had been zoned for 900 apartments.

Norman Myerson, president of Miller Builders, said he hopes construction of the development will begin next spring and be finished in about two years.

The houses, which will be build on vacant land both north and south of Hintz Road, will have three and four bedrooms and be priced at about $100,000.

Liquor laws changed for wine

Arlington Heights liquor laws were changed Monday by the village board to allow package liquor stores to apply for a special license for wine tasting.

Wine tasting privileges have been requested by Charles Karavidas, president of Teddy's Liquors, 135 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The village recently created a new liquor license to handle the request from the Brookside Winery & Tasting Room, 1013 S. Arlington Heights Rd., to offer wine tasting.

Backstretch slaying leads police to tracks in South

Police believe it is just a matter of time before they catch the murderer of a 26-year-old groom Sept. 16 at Arlington Park Race Track.

"Most people associated with race tracks are very transient and the life they lead is the only kind they know," said Det. Andy Blumenthal of the Arlington Heights Police Dept. "Sooner or later, they will show up at a race track,"

Police believe that race track may be somewhere in the South, where the search for two men wanted in connection with the murder has concentrated in recent weeks.

POLICE AND RACE track officials in more than 100 counties in Illinois and the south central states are on the alert for Jules A. Sider Jr., 25, of Metraire, La., and Dennis Lee Forst, 26, of Columbus, Ohio, for the stabbing murder of Robert R. Scroggins in his dormitory at the track's backstretch. Sider is wanted for murder and Forst as an accomplice.

The suspects, also employed as grooms at the track, were last seen running from Scroggins' dormitory in the backstretch area. The car in which they reportedly fled was found the same day in Lake Zurich.

"We've got this case pretty well pinned down," Blumenthal said. "It's just a question of time when they will show up."

MORE THAN 100 persons, including Arlington Park Race Track employes, have given information on the suspects.

Several of them have placed the two suspects at the scene of the crime said Capt. Paul Buckholz.

"We got a tip recently that the men are probably somewhere in the Deep South, maybe Louisiana," he said.

Buckholz described the scene leading up to the murder, saying witnesses told police that Scroggins had been waiting in his room with a friend for his brother to arrive.

When Scroggins heard a knock on the door he opened it thinking it was his brother, Buckholz said.

"Sider supposedly rushed in, saying, "I'm going to kill you," Buckholz said.

Scroggins friend, whom police would not identify, was not hurt.

Buckholz said Sider and Scroggins had a fist fight at the track a couple of months ago and that vengeance may have been a motive.

Carter sees Mideast talks reconvening

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Carter wound up his two day visit to the United Nations Wednesday with an optimistic forecast that there would be a Middle East peace conference opening in Geneva.

Carter told reporters the joint U.S.-Israeli agreement emerging from a long evening of talks with Israeli Foreign Minister Moyshe Dayan has "enhanced the possibility of a Geneva peace conference."

Carter said the agreement was "very productive" in aligning policy on how to remove roadblocks to the projected conference between Israel and her Arab neighbors.

But, he said, "We've obviously got a difficult job."

The President flew back to Washington Wednesday night.

HIS TWO DAYS IN New York were filled with meetings with U.N. dignitaries and government officials in an unprecedented promotion of the world body by a U.S. President.

In his one side trip from the international scene, he drove through Manhattan and across the Harlem River Wednesday morning to tour the south Bronx — one of America's urban eyesores, infamous for its burned out neighborhoods, youth gangs and violent crime.

Despite the devastation, Carter, accompanied by Mayor Abraham Beame, stressed the happy side.

rowed 15,154 books from Arlington Heights, and Indian Trails cardholders borrowed 14,017 books from Arlington Heights.

Library officials attribute the imbalance to Mount Prospect's deficient book collection and say there is little sign of relief for Arlington Heights by its neighbors to the west in the immediate future.

The Mount Prospect Library Board attempted to relieve the strain on Arlington by holding a referendum to buy additional books and increase taxes for operating their facility. Voters, however, rejected the two propositions last Saturday.

"I THINK reciprocal borrowing will be an increased burden on all of the libraries around us. There's no doubt about that," said Mary Jo Hutchings, Mount Prospect's head librarian. "We just don't have the money to buy materials. Our circulation is bound to go down."

The Mount Prospect Public Library, caught in a financial crunch, has had a nine-month freeze on book purchases. Its current book collection is 89,698. The Arlington Heights library houses 214,436 volumes.

Although the rate of reciprocal borrowing continues to climb, Arlington's load is tapering off slightly.

"At one time Arlington Heights accounted for almost 50 per cent of the imbalance payments," McClarren said. "That has dropped now to about 35 per cent."

McClarren said Arlington's burden has been eased somewhat because of new libraries and additions constructed in neighboring communities including Rolling Meadows, Palatine, Elk Grove and Prospect Heights. He agreed with Mrs. Hutchings, however, that Mount Prospect, despite its new facility will continue to put pressure on Arlington Heights. "You can have the nicest restaurant in the world," McClarren said. "But unless it's got something nice to put on the table, it isn't going to draw any patrons."

Leaked cable may cause Senate to reject Canal pact

by DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The acting head of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said Wednesday the Senate may reject the Panama Canal treaties unless it gets answers to troubling questions raised in a leaked State Dept. cable.

Acting chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, issued his warning after Sen. Robert Dole cited the confidential, potentially damaging document as proof that Panama denies U.S. claims that the treaties guarantee U.S. defense and security rights in the waterway.

"Let's be clear," Church said. "The Senate is not likely to ratify these treaties if crucial provisions are being interpreted differently by Panama and the United States. This is a matter which must be clarified."

CHURCH SAID "There isn't any question that the Panamanian views expressed in the leaked cable contradict assurances given the panel by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on the issues of defense guarantees and the treatment to be accorded U.S. warships in emergency periods."

He made it clear he is dissatisfied with the explanations offered by State Department officials so far on the meaning of the cable, which Dole obtained from an undisclosed source Tuesday and cited in his committee testimony Wednesday.

State Department officials angrily accused Dole of breaching security, but said they were seeking "clarification" from Panama on the views expressed in the cable.

The document in question is a confidential report filed last week by the acting chief of the U.S. Embassy in Panama, Raymond Gonzalez.

In it, Gonzalez quotes Panamanian treaty negotiator Carlos Lopez Guevara as telling embassy officials, "Panama cannot agree to the U.S. right to intervene. Intervention is simply forbidden by international law."

IT ALSO said Lopez Guevara had scoffed at U.S. claims that Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's national leader, had acknowledged U.S. intervention rights by making a reference to the scope of U.S. military power during the speech.

"The general was stating a fact, not giving the United States any right to intervene," it quoted Lopez Guevara as saying.

It also said the Panamanian official had disputed the U.S. view that American warships would get head-of-the-line privileges in the waterway in times of emergency, saying "expeditious passage" does not guarantee top priority.

In their efforts to persuade the Senate to ratify the controversial pacts, Carter administration officials have argued that the treaties legally guarantee the United States the right to intervene militarily, if necessary, to keep the waterway open and operating once Panama assumes full control at the turn of the century.

"THIS DOCUMENT" Dole testified, "shows beyond a doubt the vast differences in interpretation of the most important part of the treaties — that portion which bears directly on our vital national defense interests.

"It appears that the Panamanian officials are trying to sell one version of the Canal treaties to their people, and that the President is presenting a totally different picture."

In a move expected to be followed by other anti-treaty senators, Dole recommended a string of amendments designed to spell out U.S. intervention rights, guarantee shipping priorities and correct other "grossly unacceptable" provisions covering payments to Panama and the transition of power in the Canal Zone.

SEN. ROBERT DOLE, appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, displays cable which he said showed Panama rejects the U.S. claim of a right to intervene to protect the canal's neutrality.

Return of hijackers nixed by Algeria

Algeria Wednesday rebuffed Japan's indirect request for the return of five Red Army hijackers and a $6 million ransom paid for 151 hostages, saying it "will not tolerate that its good faith and good will be exploited." The Tokyo government earlier expressed the "hope" Algeria would send back the terrorists who seized a Japanese airliner over Asia and took it on a 6,000-mile odyssey to Algiers. But the Japanese refrained from demanding outright the extradition of the leftist guerrillas because a lower level foreign ministry official waived the right to do so in negotiations at the height of the hijacking drama.

Algeria said it would abide by the conditions agreed upon with Japan under which the five were allowed to land Monday. "In all its action in this affair, Algeria faithfully put into action measures and modalities which were decided in common (with Japan)," a statement issued by the Algerie Presse Service said. "Algeria will not tolerate that its good faith and good will be exploited to distort its action and attack its prestige."

'Sting' operations don't foster thefts

The Justice Department's "sting" operations — in which lawmen buy stolen goods with taxpayers' money — do not encourage more thefts, said an independent report released Wednesday. The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which paid for the survey, has financed 32 stings in 23 cities, spending $1.5 million to recover goods worth an estimated $57 million and made more than 3,000 arrests. In a typical sting — named after the movie — agents of the FBI and other federal agencies join local police to pose as fences in rented store fronts. Thieves and robbers swarm in to sell stolen wares.

The headquarters is rigged so each purchase is recorded on sound and film. This evidence is so good that most of the arrested plead guilty rather than face trial, the report said. In fact, second and third stings have succeeded in some cities despite the widespread publicity of earlier operations.

Boston areas hit by blackout

A power failure blacked out more than three square miles of Boston Wednesday night, sending residents out into the darkened streets with matches and candles. Police said the Back Bay, Park Square, downtown theatre district, South End and Kenmore Square areas were affected. Sgt. Albert Dennehey said "three or four square miles" of the city was affected by the blackout.

Police said a manhole explosion was reported on Stuart Street in the theatre district at the time the blackout began. An Edison spokesman said all the company's computers were out and no estimate on how many residents were affected was immediately available.

FDA again recalls liquid protein

The Food and Drug Administration Wednesday announced another recall of predigested liquid protein, the current diet fad — this time involving more than 14,000 bottles which may be contaminated. The brand involved is "Hudson Liquid Predigested Protein" in 16 and 32-ounce sizes. It was distributed nationwide by the Hudson Pharmaceutical Corp., Hackensack, N.J. As was the case in a similar recall announced two weeks ago, the FDA said the product was packaged in swollen bottles which may indicate "microbiological contamination." As was the case in the previous recall, the action is a low-priority one and consumers are not being advised to return the products to the place of purchase, since any actual threat to health is considered remote. The product was made by Peer Park Corp. of Hackensack, which is conducting the recall.

Hint heat exhaustion killed bears

Stress and heat exhaustion may have killed two young polar bears within 12 hours of their arrival at the Greater Baton Rouge Zoo, a veterinarian said Wednesday. Three bears, a male and a female from the Seneca Park Zoo at Rochester, N.Y., and a female from Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo, arrived last Friday at 6 p.m. Early Saturday zoo attendants discovered the female from Chicago and the male from Rochester were dead. "In our preliminary autopsy the only thing that was there was pulmonary endema and congestion," said Dr. E. D. Roberts of the Louisiana State University veterinary school. "It's a nonspecific thing you see with heat exhaustion, stress, anemia — that sort of thing." It probably will be Monday before a final diagnosis can be made.

Leaked cable may cause Senate to reject Canal pact

by DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The acting head of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said Wednesday the Senate may reject the Panama Canal treaties unless it gets answers to troubling questions raised in a leaked State Dept. cable.

Acting chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, issued his warning after Sen. Robert Dole cited the confidential, potentially damaging document as proof that Panama denies U.S. claims that the treaties guarantee U.S. defense and security rights in the waterway.

"Let's be clear," Church said. "The Senate is not likely to ratify these treaties if crucial provisions are being interpreted differently by Panama and the United States. This is a matter which must be clarified."

CHURCH SAID "There isn't any question that the Panamanian views expressed in the leaked cable contradict assurances given the panel by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on the issues of defense guarantees and the treatment to be accorded U.S. warships in emergency periods."

He made it clear he is dissatisfied with the explanations offered by State Department officials so far on the meaning of the cable, which Dole obtained from an undisclosed source Tuesday and cited in his committee testimony Wednesday.

State Department officials angrily accused Dole of breaching security, but said they were seeking "clarification" from Panama on the views expressed in the cable.

The document in question is a confidential report filed last week by the acting chief of the U.S. Embassy in Panama, Raymond Gonzalez.

In it, Gonzalez quotes Panamanian treaty negotiator Carlos Lopez Guevara as telling embassy officials, "Panama cannot agree to the U.S. right to intervene. Intervention is simply forbidden by international law."

IT ALSO said Lopez Guevara had scoffed at U.S. claims that Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's national leader, had acknowledged U.S. intervention rights by making a reference to the scope of U.S. military power during the speech.

"The general was stating a fact, not giving the United States any right to intervene," it quoted Lopez Guevara as saying.

It also said the Panamanian official had disputed the U.S. view that American warships would get head-of-the-line privileges in the waterway in times of emergency, saying "expeditious passage" does not guarantee top priority.

In their efforts to persuade the Senate to ratify the controversial pacts, Carter administration officials have argued that the treaties legally guarantee the United States the right to intervene militarily, if necessary, to keep the waterway open and operating once Panama assumes full control at the turn of the century.

"THIS DOCUMENT" Dole testified, "shows beyond a doubt the vast differences in interpretation of the most important part of the treaties — that portion which bears directly on our vital national defense interests.

"It appears that the Panamanian officials are trying to sell one version of the Canal treaties to their people, and that the President is presenting a totally different picture."

In a move expected to be followed by other anti-treaty senators, Dole recommended a string of amendments designed to spell out U.S. intervention rights, guarantee shipping priorities and correct other "grossly unacceptable" provisions covering payments to Panama and the transition of power in the Canal Zone.

SEN. ROBERT DOLE, appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, displays cable which he said showed Panama rejects the U.S. claim of a right to intervene to protect the canal's neutrality.

Return of hijackers nixed by Algeria

Algeria Wednesday rebuffed Japan's indirect request for the return of five Red Army hijackers and a $6 million ransom paid for 151 hostages, saying it "will not tolerate that its good faith and good will be exploited." The Tokyo governrment earlier expressed the "hope" Algeria would send back the terrorists who seized a Japanese airliner over Asia and took it on a 6,000-mile odyssey to Algiers. But the Japanese refrained from demanding outright the extradition of the leftist guerrillas because a lower level foreign ministry official waived the right to do so in negotiations at the height of the hijacking drama.

Algeria said it would abide by the conditions agreed upon with Japan under which the five were allowed to land Monday. "In all its action in this affair, Algeria faithfully put into action measures and modalities which were decided in common (with Japan)," a statement issued by the Algerie Presse Service said. "Algeria will not tolerate that its good faith and good will be exploited to distort its action and attack its prestige."

'Sting' operations don't foster thefts

The Justice Department's "sting" operations — in which lawmen buy stolen goods with taxpayers' money — do not encourage more thefts, said an independent report released Wednesday. The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which paid for the survey, has financed 32 stings in 23 cities, spending $1.5 million to recover goods worth an estimated $57 million and made more than 3,000 arrests. In a typical sting — named after the movie — agents of the FBI and other federal agencies join local police to pose as fences in rented store fronts. Thieves and robbers swarm in to sell stolen wares.

The headquarters is rigged so each purchase is recorded on sound and film. This evidence is so good that most of the arrested plead guilty rather than face trial, the report said. In fact, second and third stings have succeeded in some cities despite the widespread publicity of earlier operations.

Boston areas hit by blackout

A power failure blacked out more than three square miles of Boston Wednesday night, sending residents out into the darkened streets with matches and candles. Police said the Back Bay, Park Square, downtown theatre district, South End and Kenmore Square areas were affected. Sgt. Albert Dennehey said "three or four square miles" of the city was affected by the blackout.

Police said a manhole explosion was reported on Stuart Street in the theatre district at the time the blackout began. An Edison spokesman said all the company's computers were out and no estimate on how many residents were affected was immediately available.

FDA again recalls liquid protein

The Food and Drug Administration Wednesday announced another recall of predigested liquid protein, the current diet fad — this time involving more than 14,000 bottles which may be contaminated. The brand involved is "Hudson Liquid Predigested Protein" in 16 and 32-ounce sizes. It was distributed nationwide by the Hudson Pharmaceutical Corp., Hackensack, N.J. As was the case in a similar recall announced two weeks ago, the FDA said the product was packaged in swollen bottles which may indicate "microbiological contamination." As was the case in the previous recall, the action is a low-priority one and consumers are not being advised to return the products to the place of purchase, since any actual threat to health is considered remote. The product was made by Peer Park Corp. of Hackensack, which is conducting the recall.

Hint heat exhaustion killed bears

Stress and heat exhaustion may have killed two young polar bears within 12 hours of their arrival at the Greater Baton Rouge Zoo, a veterinarian said Wednesday. Three bears, a male and a female from the Seneca Park Zoo at Rochester, N.Y., and a female from Chicago's Lincoln Park Zoo, arrived last Friday at 6 p.m. Early Saturday zoo attendants discovered the female from Chicago and the male from Rochester were dead. "In our preliminary autopsy the only thing that was there was pulmonary endema and congestion," said Dr. E. D. Roberts of the Louisiana State University veterinary school. "It's a nonspecific thing you see with heat exhaustion, stress, anemia — that sort of thing." It probably will be Monday before a final diagnosis can be made.

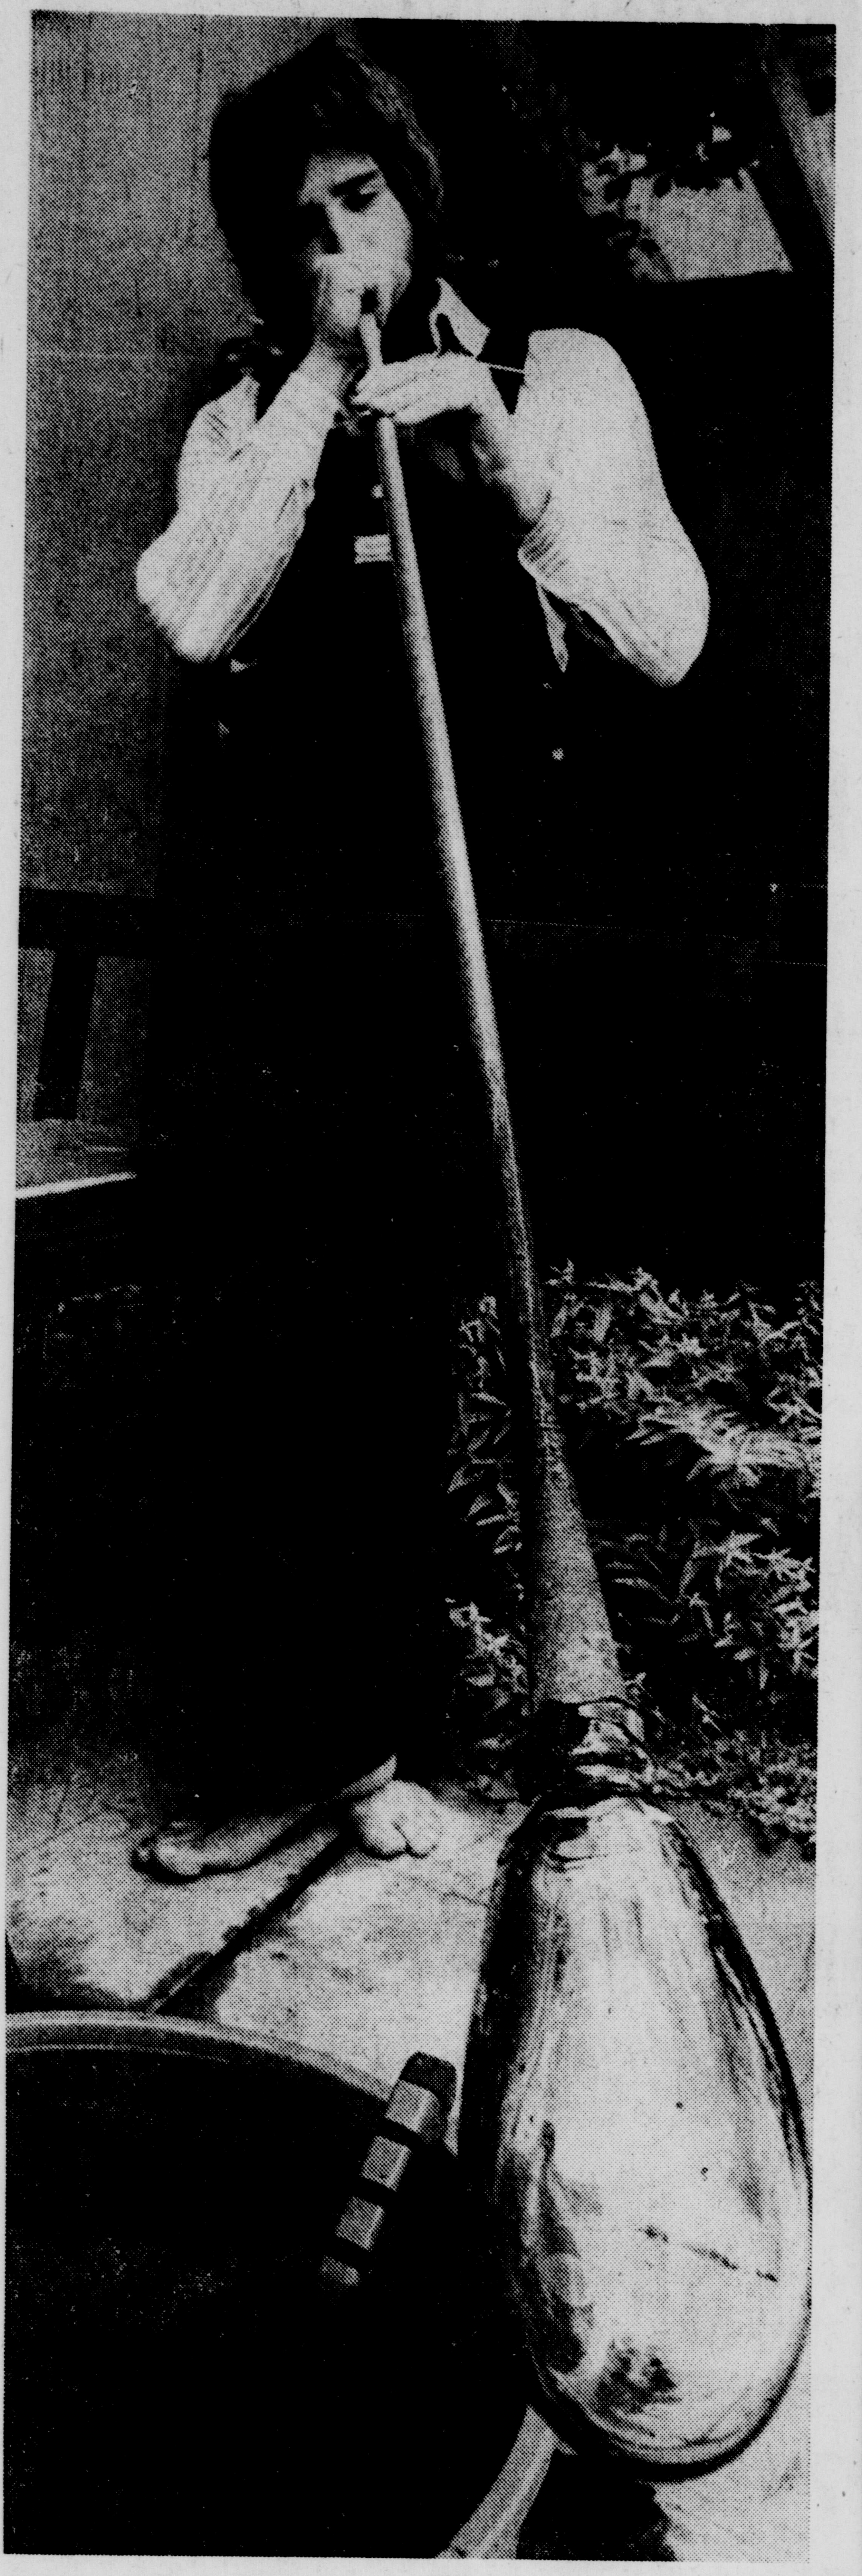
Creative feelings await winter cold



AUGUST PUSATERI of Hanover Park uses his blowpipe to begin forming his glass artwork. He and his sister, Jacqueline, built their own private studio and have been glass blowing for four years.

by JOHN LAMPINEN

It is a special feeling August Pusateri gets.

It is provided by the night.

A patio light burning soft yellow into the darkness. Heat pouring from the glow of the furnace up against stinging football cold. An occasional howl of the wind or crunch of footsteps in the snow imposing on the silence. Time. Solitude. Creation.

"It's a good feeling," he says. "The stars are out. The moon is there. You're out there alone, and it's quiet. It's inspiring."

August, 21, and his sister Jacqueline Pusateri, 23, get a lot of special feelings.

MOSTLY THE feelings are about glass blowing.

Not lampworking — blowing into a thin Pyrex tube held over a Bunsen burner — but glass blowing, the kind with long, iron blowpipes and hot brick furnaces that began along the Mediterranean Coast about 30 B.C.

It is an art, Jackie says. Some may call it a craft, she says, but it means more to her; personal expression is involved.

"It's very hard to put into words," she observes. "There's something fascinating about the glass itself, the material you work with, the color and the heat. It's glass, but it's not cold any more."

Yet, it is an art they stumbled across.

THEIR CHILDHOOD in Arlington Heights was largely devoid of artistic endeavor.

August likes sports and Jackie liked scholastics and they both liked canoeing and horseback riding and occasionally they dabbled in ceramics.

But they also had a mother who liked to give them a taste of everything, and when they were in their late teens, she sent them off to a Young Artists Studio at the Art Institute in Chicago.

There was a pilot course in glass blowing and it showed a similarity to ceramics and it grabbed them.

"I just got to the point where I had to do it," August says. "It just sort of happened."

LATER THEY both finished with school and got jobs, August with a wrecking crew and Jackie as a secretary-bookkeeper, but that special feeling would not go away.

Jackie spent her lunch hours researching information on equipment, how to build a furnace that would heat to the required 2,300 degrees and when to get the parts needed for an annealing oven and they pooled their resources and time to build a studio behind the Hanover Park house that they moved into four years ago.

THE PROCESS takes about an hour, and then Pusateri is ready to apply the final finishing to the glass.

Now, they have business cards made out that say "Freeblown Glass" and they give demonstrations by appointment and they delve further into the art, wishing always they had more time.

And August dreams of blowing glass and traveling the country selling his pieces and living a meager, pioneer existence that allows him that time.

"I have always had a goal of supporting myself by glass blowing," he says. "Somehow, I don't think it's too realistic."

SO THEY WAIT for the winter.It is their time to feel those special feelings.

Because, for them, glass blowing is a seasonal preoccupation.

They do little work with molten glass in the summer because they work regular hours and a furnace that requires 24 hours before it is ready does not encourage compulsive artwork.

AND BECAUSE IT is hot work, too hot for the summer.

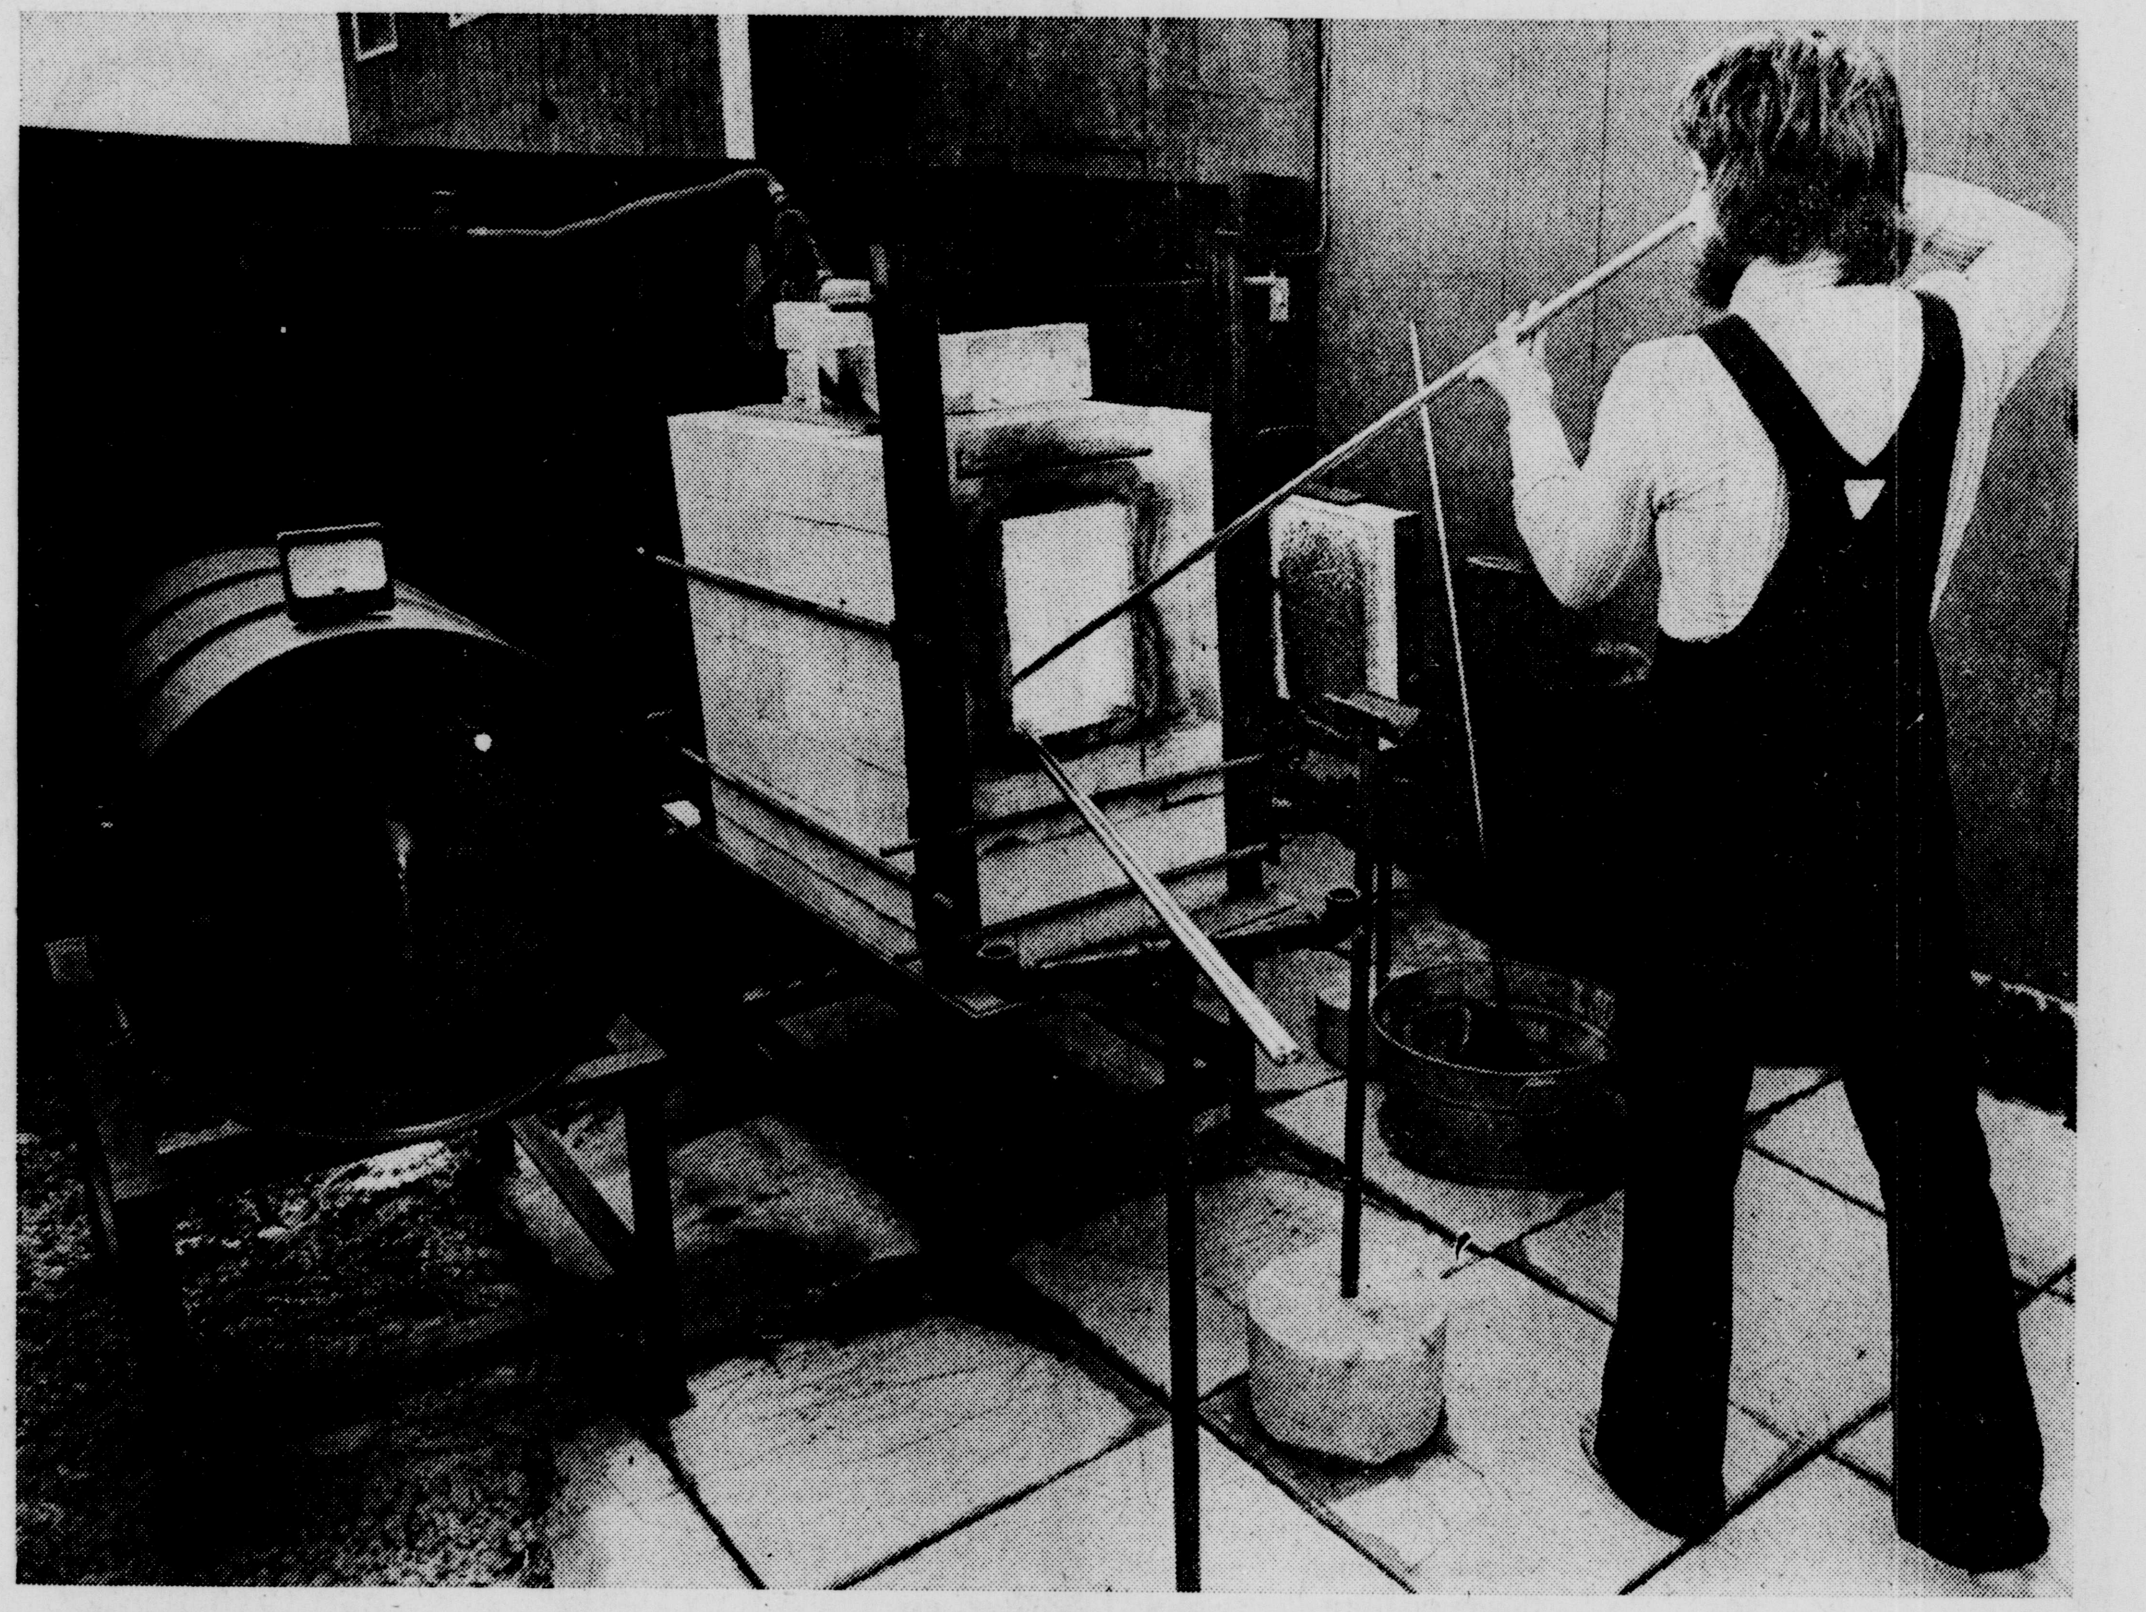
"It's an exhausting thing for me," Jackie says. "The heat and the furnace, it's a physical drain."

So they do most of their work in the winter. It is a time August has off from the wrecking crew and it is cold and the furnace doesn't seen so hot.

The furnace runs full time, and Jackie takes it on the weekend, when she is away from work.

The rest of the week, August uses it. He makes things that are made of glass but they are more than glass.

They give him that special feeling, and he likes to make them during the night.



AFTER WORKING on the piece for about a minute, Pusateri places it in the furnace to be reheated so it will continue to be pliable. Gauging the temperature of the glass, he says, is the most critical part of the technique.

Warrant issued for arrest of theater owner

A warrant for the arrest of Stanford Kohlberg, owner of the Meadows Theatre in Rolling Meadows, has been issued by a Cook County Circuit Court judge.

The warrant charges that Kohlberg is responsible for the showing of an X-rated film, "Cinderella," which was confiscated by Rolling Meadows detectives Friday for violating a local ordinance that prohibits obscene or pornographic films.

Bill Farber, manager of the theater, 3265 Kirchoff Rd., was arrested Friday and charged with obscenity.

Sgt. Charles Smith said police will arrest Kohlberg as the man responsible for the film since he is the theater owner.

Alfred Teton, an attorney for Kohlberg, said he was notified of the arrest of Farber and confiscation, but does not know if he will represent Farber at a court hearing Oct. 17 in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

Farber said Wednesday night he had no comment concerning the arrest. If convicted, Farber could be fined $500.

Farber was charged with violating an anti-obscenity law passed in June after a three-month movement to ban pornographic books and movies from Rolling Meadows.

City Atty. Donald Rose, who spent several months researching obscenity laws and court cases dealing with obscenity, wrote the ordinance that he believes is the only one of its kind in the area.

'Outer Planets' plan lost in space

Romano is appealing the dismissal of bankruptcy petitions he filed in 1976 in order to reorganize his real estate and other personal possessions legally.

EARLY IN THE legal proceedings Romano said he had not given up plans to build Outer Planets. But an attorney for Romano said this week that he believes the developer does not have "any present plans to go along with it at this time."

Romano could not be reached for comment on the fate of Outer Planets.

If the project had materialized, Outer Planets would have fit nicely into Schaumburg's claim as the industrial hub of the Northwest suburbs, former Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said.

He said that from "a design standpoint, it would have been outstanding." Atcher said he believes the Outer Planets development was more than a fairy tale.

"It still could work if we had a little different economy," he said. "We still haven't really recovered from a few years ago (the recession). A thing of that nature just wouldn't appeal right now."

Romano once described his proposed development as a complex "for people who want to live the good life and can afford it."

HE SAID Outer Planets would cater to "people who want to live, work and socialize in one area; those who don't want to spend two hours a day traveling, burning gas and getting irritated and sick."

But Romano's dream has been replaced with what the village board considers a more realistic approach to development of the 238-acre site.

As Larson said, "There isn't a place on the face of the earth that would support the kind of development planned over there."

Gift rule for builders OK: court

modeled after Naperville's was adopted in February 1976, neither school nor park officials have any complaints and all are pleased with the court ruling.

"It simply confirms my feeling that builders who come into an area and produce a lot of homes and children have some financial responsibility to help the school district," Joseph Kiszka, deputy superintendent in Palatine Township Dist. 15 said. "The burden should not be on the local taxpayer when these people come in with big developments."

Palatine Park Comr. Waldon Degner said he hopes the court's ruling will make developers more "civic-minded" and encourage them to donate larger, more usable parcels of land.

"IN A COUPLE of cases, developers have tried to donate land that is of little use, such as creek banks and retention basins," he said. "Maybe as a result of the ruling, developers will realize they will have to bend a little more."

Generally, the practice in Palatine has been to accept money rather than land from developers because most of the developments have been small and land donations would have been too small to be practical, Village Mgr. Anton Harwig said.

In Hoffman Estates, Village Mgr. George Longmeyer said, "open negotiations" with developers get the parks and schools more land than any Naperville type ordinance would.

"Each piece of property has different circumstances," he said. "You can't write everything in an ordinance."

the land in lieu of debts.

Romano is appealing the dismissal of bankruptcy petitions he filed in 1976 in order to reorganize his real estate and other personal possessions legally.

EARLY IN THE legal proceedings Romano said he had not given up plans to build Outer Planets. But an attorney for Romano said this week that he believes the developer does not have "any present plans to go along with it at this time."

Romano could not be reached for comment on the fate of Outer Planets.

If the project had materialized, Outer Planets would have fit nicely into Schaumburg's claim as the industrial hub of the Northwest suburbs, former Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher said.

He said that from "a design standpoint, it would have been outstanding." Atcher said he believes the Outer Planets development was more than a fairy tale.

"It still could work if we had a little different economy," he said. "We still haven't really recovered from a few years ago (the recession). A thing of that nature just wouldn't appeal right now."

Romano once described his proposed development as a complex "for people who want to live the good life and can afford it."

HE SAID Outer Planets would cater to "people who want to live, work and socialize in one area; those who don't want to spend two hours a day traveling, burning gas and getting irritated and sick."

But Romano's dream has been replaced with what the village board considers a more realistic approach to development of the 238-acre site.

As Larson said, "There isn't a place on the face of the earth that would support the kind of development planned over there."

Gift rule for builders OK: court

modeled after Naperville's was adopted in February 1976, neither school nor park officials have any complaints and all are pleased with the court ruling.

"It simply confirms my feeling that builders who come into an area and produce a lot of homes and children have some financial responsibility to help the school district," Joseph Kiszka, deputy superintendent in Palatine Township Dist. 15 said. "The burden should not be on the local taxpayer when these people come in with big developments."

Palatine Park Comr. Waldon Degner said he hopes the court's ruling will make developers more "civic-minded" and encourage them to donate larger, more usable parcels of land.

"IN A COUPLE of cases, developers have tried to donate land that is of little use, such as creek banks and retention basins," he said. "Maybe as a result of the ruling, developers will realize they will have to bend a little more."

Generally, the practice in Palatine has been to accept money rather than land from developers because most of the developments have been small and land donations would have been too small to be practical, Village Mgr. Anton Harwig said.

In Hoffman Estates, Village Mgr. George Longmeyer said, "open negotiations" with developers get the parks and schools more land than any Naperville type ordinance would.

"Each piece of property has different circumstances," he said. "You can't write everything in an ordinance."

75% property tax cut urged here

Real estate tax bills in suburban Cook County should be cut by 75 per cent, and Chicago taxes reduced by 50 per cent, County Board Pres. George W. Dunne said Wednesday.

Illinois lawmakers ought to increase the state income and sales taxes to permit the property tax cuts, Dunne told an Illinois House subcommittee on real estate assessments and taxation meeting in Chicago.

Increasing state taxes, particularly the income tax, while lowering property taxes, "would create a more equitable system of over-all taxation," Dunne said.

The income tax most accurately reflects an individual's ability to pay taxes because it is based on consumer spending, he said.

County Assessor Thomas M. Tully supported Dunne's suggestion and also urged state legislators to provide more tax breaks for the elderly.

A taxpayers protest of high property tax reassessments and sky-rocketing tax bills this year prompted the county board to lower the home assessment level to 16 per cent of fair market value, the lowest level allowed by state law.

Both Dunne and Tully appointed citizens committees to study the tax system.

Gov. James R. Thompson, however, has promised not to raise general state taxes during his term.

UPI photograph gets Polanski in more trouble

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Roman Polanski, who has pleaded guilty to having sexual intercourse with a 13-year-old girl, may be ordered to face a special court hearing to determine if he has violated a court order by traveling to Munich, Germany, as a "tourist," it was reported Wednesday.

Polanski must enter a state prison Dec. 19 for a 90-day psychiatrist examination stemming from his admission of having sex with a minor. But Judge Laurence J. Rittenband has allowed the Polish-born filmmaker to remain free until that time on the condition that Polanski's travels be only of a business nature.

At the center of the new conflict is a photograph distributed by UPI which showed Polanski puffing on a cigar and relaxing with several young women at the Munich Oktoberfest Sept. 28.

THE CAPTION ON the photograph said: "Sources say Polanski came to Bavaria's capital as a tourist and just wants to relax."

The photo caught Polanski's attorney, Douglas Dalton, by surprise when he saw it printed in a newspaper. The attorney and Rittenband were scheduled to meet later this week to determine if and when the hearing would be held on the director's junket to Germany.

If Polanski was in Munich as a tourist and for the purpose of relaxation, it would constitute a violation of the spirit of Rittenband's order, according to sources close to the court.

"Mr. Polanski has told me he was not in Munich as a tourist," Dalton said, "and that he wasn't even aware that a picture was being taken."

The attorney said Polanski went to the Geman city as a guest of potential distributors for a forthcoming movie Polanski has been assigned to direct.

"He went to Munich himself because there was no completed script and therefore he had to describe the film in person to the distributor," Dalton said.

Ask these pharmacists why they recommend NaturSlim... ...and use it themselves!

Pharmacist Dick Wieser, owner of the Skyline Plaza Pharmacy in Daly City expresses his opinion on the NaturSlim Weight Control Program: "As a pharmacist for over 23 years, I have seen many weight loss products come and go. None, have ever produced the interest and results that NaturSlim has."

After seeing the successful results many of his customers had with the program, Dick decided to try it.

..."I followed the program, taking NaturSlim twice a day in juice or lowfat milk and ate a normal dinner—even including potatoes! I did not have to count calories or limit my portions either. After 30 days I had lost a total of 23 pounds painlessly and effortlessly. I feel ten years younger!"

..."I have the responsibility to provide my customers with the very best products—NaturSlim is! I would recommend NaturSlim to anyone with a minimum amount of will power. It's the easiest and safest way to lose weight that I know of today!"

Pharmacist Dan Smith of Burger's Drug Store in St. Charles, Illinois is a NaturSlim "believer" after losing 18 pounds in just two weeks. After hearing so much about the NaturSlim program from customers and seeing the excellemt results they were having, Dan decided to try it himself.

"In my many years as a pharmacist, I've seen and tried numerous weight-loss plans, but none have worked as well for me as NaturSlim. And NaturSlim is very nutritional too!"

After three months, Dan has not regained any of the lost pounds either, as so often happens when "rebounding" from starvation diet plans. He maintains his weight by taking NaturSlim once daily . . . and eating normally otherwise.

Dan says, "It was surprisingly easy, too! I didn't have to attend any weigh-ins, starve myself or do any special exercises."

With the NaturSlim program, there are no shots, drugs or long lists of forbidden foods. In fact, you are encouraged to eat a normal, well-balanced dinner every day.

The next time you are in the St. Charles area, stop by Burger Drugs and see Dan yourself. He'll tell you personally about NaturSlim!

Both Dunne and Tully appointed citizens committees to study the tax system.

Gov. James R. Thompson, however, has promised not to raise general state taxes during his term.

UPI photograph gets Polanski in more trouble

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Roman Polanski, who has pleaded guilty to having sexual intercourse with a 13-year-old girl, may be ordered to face a special court hearing to determine if he has violated a court order by traveling to Munich, Germany, as a "tourist," it was reported Wednesday.

Polanski must enter a state prison Dec. 19 for a 90-day psychiatrist examination stemming from his admission of having sex with a minor. But Judge Laurence J. Rittenband has allowed the Polish-born filmmaker to remain free until that time on the condition that Polanski's travels be only of a business nature.

At the center of the new conflict is a photograph distributed by UPI which showed Polanski puffing on a cigar and relaxing with several young women at the Munich Oktoberfest Sept. 28.

THE CAPTION ON the photograph said: "Sources say Polanski came to Bavaria's capital as a tourist and just wants to relax."

The photo caught Polanski's attorney, Douglas Dalton, by surprise when he saw it printed in a newspaper. The attorney and Rittenband were scheduled to meet later this week to determine if and when the hearing would be held on the director's junket to Germany.

If Polanski was in Munich as a tourist and for the purpose of relaxation, it would constitute a violation of the spirit of Rittenband's order, according to sources close to the court.

"Mr. Polanski has told me he was not in Munich as a tourist," Dalton said, "and that he wasn't even aware that a picture was being taken."

The attorney said Polanski went to the Geman city as a guest of potential distributors for a forthcoming movie Polanski has been assigned to direct.

"He went to Munich himself because there was no completed script and therefore he had to describe the film in person to the distributor," Dalton said.

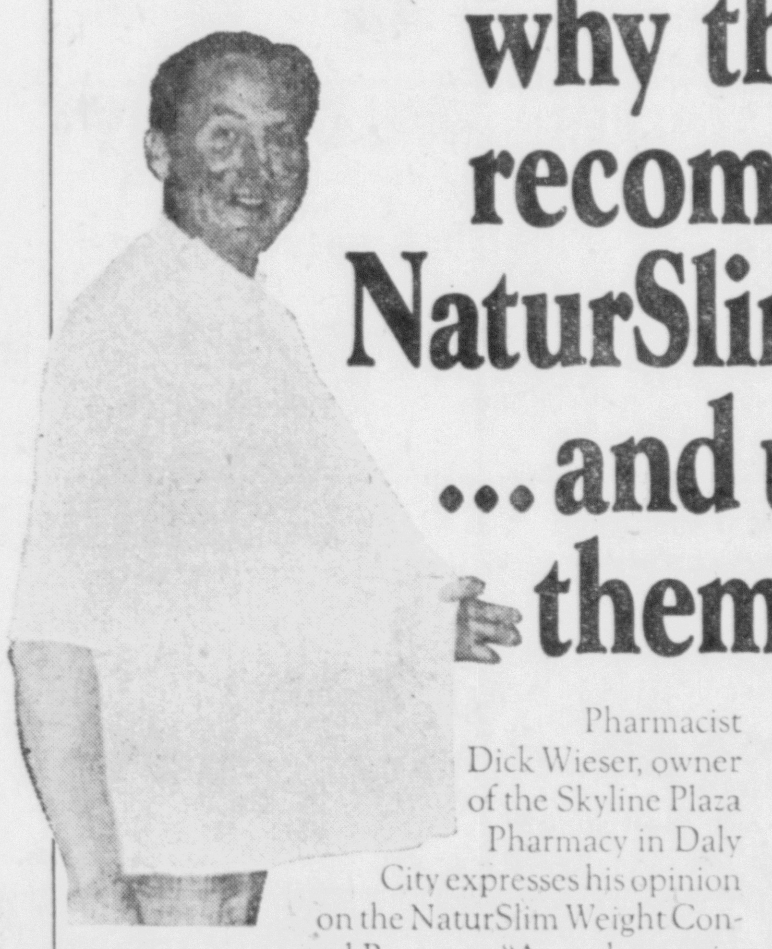
Ask these pharmacists why they recommend NaturSlim... ...and use it themselves!



Pharmacist Dick Wieser, owner of the Skyline Plaza Pharmacy in Daly City expresses his opinion on the NaturSlim Weight Control Program: "As a pharmacist for over 23 years, I have seen many weight loss products come and go. None, have ever produced the interest and results that NaturSlim has."
After seeing the successful results many of his customers had with the program, Dick decided to try it.
..."I followed the program, taking NaturSlim twice a day in juice or lowfat milk and ate a normal dinner—even including potatoes! I did not have to count calories or limit my portions either. After 30 days I had lost a total of 23 pounds painlessly and effortlessly. I feel ten years younger!"
..."I have the responsibility to provide my customers with the very best products—NaturSlim is! I would recommend NaturSlim to anyone with a minimum amount of will power. It's the easiest and safest way to lose weight that I know of today!"
Pharmacist Dan Smith, of Burger's Drug Store in St. Charles, Illinois is a NaturSlim "believer" after losing 18 pounds in just two weeks. After hearing so much about the NaturSlim program from customers and seeing the excellemt results they were having, Dan decided to try it himself.
"In my many years as a pharmacist, I've seen and tried numerous weight-loss plans, but none have worked as well for me as NaturSlim. And NaturSlim is very nutritional too!"
After three months, Dan has not regained any of the lost pounds either, as so often happens when "rebounding" from starvation diet plans. He maintains his weight by taking NaturSlim once daily . . . and eating normally otherwise.
Dan says, "It was surprisingly easy, too! I didn't have to attend any weigh-ins, starve myself or do any special exercises."
With the NaturSlim program, there are no shots, drugs or long lists of forbidden foods. In fact, you are encouraged to eat a normal, well-balanced dinner every day.
The next time you are in the St. Charles area, stop by Burger Drugs and see Dan yourself. He'll tell you personally about NaturSlim!

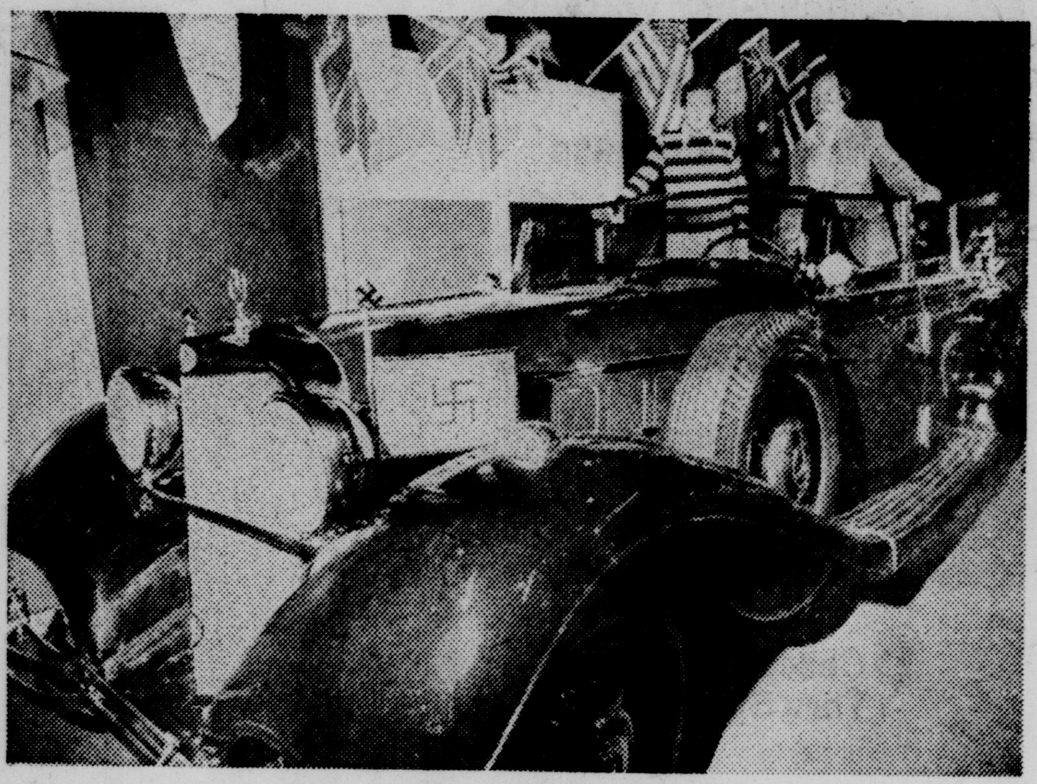
$1 million limo on display

Most expensive car? Hitler had it

The most expensive car in the world — valued at $1 million — has more than leather seats and luxury options. It claims Adolf Hitler as the original owner.



ADOLF HITLER'S car, valued at $1 million, is now on display at the Chicago Historical Antique Automobile Museum in Highland Park. The bullet-proof car weights five tons and can reach speeds of 135 miles per hour.

Two young American car collectors stumbled across the car, and its unusual family tree at a Veterans of Foreign Wars Post in Greenville, Tenn., in August 1976. It now is being displayed at the Chicago Historical Antique Automobile Museum Inc., Highland Park.

The bullet-proof, armorplated convertible Mercedes limousine weighs five tons, yet is capable of reaching speeds of 135 miles per hour and seats eight comfortably. It gets only three miles to the gallon.

IT ALSO HAS a platform in the passenger seat designed to make the 5-foot-7 Hitler appear taller and a slit in the dashboard to accommodate his German Luger pistol

The owners, Joe Ogden and Steve Munson, Pewee Valley, Ky., bought it for an undisclosed price from the VFW Post.

Until the museum received Hitler's car, the top price tag for a car there was the $228,000 figure attached to a Duesenberg model SSJ-515 earlier this year. But the museum said the Hitler car is fully documented and its link with history drives the price over the million dollar mark.

The VFW commander told Ogden and Munson the car had belonged to Nazi General Heinrich Himmler, who was captured in it by Belgian freedom fighters. The Belgians hated the car so much the government prohibited it from being displayed.

IN AN ATTEMPT to verify the connection with Himmler, they telephoned the Mercedes Museum in Stuttgart, Germany. Armed with photos and serial numbers, the museum crawled through war archives and surfaced with the original purchase order.

The date was Sept. 30, 1938, and the English translation read: Buyer: The leader and chancellor.

The car took two years to build, and its bullet-proofness was tested by the Fuehrer himself. Before delivery, Hitler fired two bullets at close range to test the armor plating, which was one-half inch thick.

Although the car is in perfect running condition, it follows the rule that most cars depreciate in value. It originally cost $2.5 million.

Nobel Prize literature winner to be named today

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — The Swedish Academy, in a surprise announcement designed to prevent any leak of the winner, Wednesday said the 1977 Nobel Prize for literature will be named today.

The Academy said it would announce the winner at 1 p.m., 7 a.m. CDT today. It said the 1977 prize will be worth $145,000, $5,000 less than last year.

There have been no leaks this year on possible literature winners. Last year's winner, American writer Saul Bellow, was leaked a few days ahead of the official announcement, much to the academy's anger.

THIS YEAR the academy gave just 24 hours notice of the award.

The academy said the Nobel prizes for physics and chemistry will be announced Tuesday, Medicine Oct. 13 and economics Oct. 14. The Norwegian Academy announced the peace Prize would be disclosed Monday.

All awarded prizes last year went to Americans. The 1976 peace prize was withheld.

The weakening Swedish economy means the prizes will be worth less than last year. Although each prize is increased by about $4,000 each year, theree devaluations of the Swedish kronor in the past year reduced its 1977 value to $145,000 compared with $150,000 last year.

"THE 1977 PRIZE would have to be 1.2 million kronor ($249,000) if you wanted the real value of the 1901 prize," said Lars Gyllensten, permanent secretary of the Swedish Academy.

The five original Nobel prizes — medicine, physics, chemistry, peace and literature — were first awarded in 1901, an endowment in the will of Alfred Nobel, a chemical engineer and inventor of dynamite who died in 1896. The economics prize was established in 1968 by the Central Bank of Sweden.

Nobel said the awards should be given annually "To those who, during the preceding year, shall have conferred the greatest benefit on mankind."

Assassin kills IRA chief in renewed feud

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — An assassin firing through a car window Wednesday killed Seamus Costello, chief of the militant Irish Republic Socialist party, in a new outbreak of feuding among factions of the outlawed IRA..

Police said the gunman escaped into the lunchtime traffic after firing two blasts from a shotgun at Costello as he sat in his car on the city's north side.

"He must have died instantly," a police spokesman said.

Costello, 38, the father of three children, had been target of assassination attempts in the past. Two years ago he escaped with minor injuries when his automobile was sprayed with bullets.

A police spokesman said Costello was sitting in the driver's seat when he was shot at point blank range.

Mulack to seek GOP nod in crowded sheriff race

Donald G. Mulack, assistant attorney general for consumer fraud, today will announce he is a candidate for Cook County sheriff.

Mulack, 34, will be in at least a five-way race for endorsement by Republican slatemakers, who begin candidate screening at 1:30 p.m. today at the Midland Hotel, Chicago.

Lou Kasper, 52, director of records for State's Atty. Bernard Carey, has declared his candidacy, and John Hoeger, 34, a Chicago police investigator, has pledged to run in the March primary with or without party slating.

PETER HARLIB, a retired Chicago policeman, has asked to go before the slatemakers, and so has Dan Webb, an assistant in former U.S. Atty. in James R. Thomspon's office.

DONALD MULACK

Mulack ran unsuccessfully for Cook County coroner in 1972 on a platform abolishing the office in favor of creating a medical examiner's position.

Although Mulack lost the 1972 election for former coroner Dr. Andrew Toman, the referendum he supported to abolish the coroner's office passed, and last Dec. 6 a new county medical examiner, Dr. Robert J. Stein, was sworn into office.

County Republicans have set their sights on the sheriff's office as one which they especially want to capture next November. Sheriff J. Elrod is vulnerable because of widely publicized abuses at the county jail which is under the sheriff's control, Republicans say.

"I'm very centain the jail will be an issue," said Harold L. Tyrrell, chairman of the Cook County Republican party.

BUT TYRRELL SAID taxes will be the big county issue in 1978.

"Of course the election is still a year away. But you have to look at what's on peoole's minds and right now I'd say it is taxes," he said.

A second round of Republican late-making interviews is scheduled Tuesday at the Midland Hotel. At that time, slatemakers will decide about future meetings, Tyrrell said.

He said he hopes to have the Republican county slate endorsed by Thanksgiving.

State to look into costly kids' home

by STEVE BROWN

From our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services has formed an "in-house" task force to study the future of a little used, but costly children's home in Normal.

DCFS officials confirmed the existence of the task force after the Daily Herald detailed the operations of the Illinois Soldiers and Sailors Children School and reported the facility spends more than $35,000 per year on each of the 60 students there, about three times more per child than other comparable facilities.

Besides the state inquiry, Mirl Whitaker, executive director of the Child Care Assn. of Illinois, said the questions raised about the cost of operating the home need to be explored.

"I THINK IT IS quite appropriate for the department or the legislature to evaluate the need for the facility," Whitaker said. His group represents about 75 organizations around the state that specialize in child welfare programs.

Whitaker cited figures obtained from DCFS that showed the average cost per foster child being paid by the state is $34.96 per day or around $12,000 per year.

"Gov Thompson said recently the state should be providing more money for foster children, but the state does not have the funds. More money is needed and maybe the money spent at ISSCS could be spread around," he said.

DCFS spokesman Tom Teague said the department team has visited the school and discussed the operation. He indicated that a decision on the future of the school will not be made for several months.

"You can be sure we will have some decision by the time budget hearings start next year," Teague said. At least one state lawmaker, State Rep. Pete Peters, R-Chicago, has already called for the closing of the school as part of a series of recommendations to streamline the operation of the massive DCFS system.

Peters said he plans to visit ISSCS and the Maryville Academy in Des Plaines to compare operations before the budget hearings begin in March. Maryville, which operates with a state funding plan that provides about $10,300 per child, houses more than 150 wards of the state.

Mulack to seek GOP nod in crowded sheriff race

Donald G. Mulack, assistant attorney general for consumer fraud, today will announce he is a candidate for Cook County sheriff.

Mulack, 34, will be in at least a five-way race for endorsement by Republican slatemakers, who begin candidate screening at 1:30 p.m. today at the Midland Hotel, Chicago.

Lou Kasper, 52, director of records for State's Atty. Bernard Carey, has declared his candidacy, and John Hoeger, 34, a Chicago police investigator, has pledged to run in the March primary with or without party slating.

PETER HARLIB, a retired Chicago policeman, has asked to go before the slatemakers, and so has Dan Webb, an assistant in former U.S. Atty. in James R. Thomspon's office.

DONALD MULACK

Mulack ran unsuccessfully for Cook County coroner in 1972 on a platform abolishing the office in favor of creating a medical examiner's position.

Although Mulack lost the 1972 election for former coroner Dr. Andrew Toman, the referendum he supported to abolish the coroner's office passed, and last Dec. 6 a new county medical examiner, Dr. Robert J. Stein, was sworn into office.

County Republicans have set their sights on the sheriff's office as one which they especially want to capture next November. Sheriff J. Elrod is vulnerable because of widely publicized abuses at the county jail which is under the sheriff's control, Republicans say.

"I'm very centain the jail will be an issue," said Harold L. Tyrrell, chairman of the Cook County Republican party.

BUT TYRRELL SAID taxes will be the big county issue in 1978.

"Of course the election is still a year away. But you have to look at what's on people's minds and right now I'd say it is taxes," he said.

A second round of Republican latemaking interviews is scheduled Tuesday at the Midland Hotel. At that time, slatemakers will decide about future meetings, Tyrrell said.

He said he hopes to have the Republican county slate endorsed by Thanksgiving.

State to look into costly kids' home

by STEVE BROWN

From our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services has formed an "in-house" task force to study the future of a little used, but costly children's home in Normal.

DCFS officials confirmed the existence of the task force after the Daily Herald detailed the operations of the Illinois Soldiers and Sailors Children School and reported the facility spends more than $35,000 per year on each of the 60 students there, about three times more per child than other comparable facilities.

Besides the state inquiry, Mirl Whitaker, executive director of the Child Care Assn. of Illinois, said the questions raised about the cost of operating the home need to be explored.

"I THINK IT IS quite appropriate for the department or the legislature to evaluate the need for the facility," Whitaker said. His group represents about 75 organizations around the state that specialize in child welfare programs.

Whitaker cited figures obtained from DCFS that showed the average cost per foster child being paid by the state is $34.96 per day or around $12,000 per year.

"Gov Thompson said recently the state should be providing more money for foster children, but the state does not have the funds. More money is needed and maybe the money spent at ISSCS could be spread around," he said.

DCFS spokesman Tom Teague said the department team has visited the school and discussed the operation. He indicated that a decision on the future of the school will not be made for several months.

"You can be sure we will have some decision by the time budget hearings start next year," Teague said. At least one state lawmaker, State Rep. Pete Peters, R-Chicago, has already called for the closing of the school as part of a series of recommendations to streamline the operation of the massive DCFS system.

Peters said he plans to visit ISSCS and the Maryville Academy in Des Plaines to compare operations before the budget hearings begin in March. Maryville, which operates with a state funding plan that provides about $10,300 per child, houses more than 150 wards of the state.

U.S. cancels state defense program

by STEVE BROWN
Of our Springfield bureau

Federal officials canceled a high priority nuclear civil defense program in Illinois because documents supposedly worked on for two years at a cost of $165,000 have been lost or destroyed.

Federal auditors discovered the missing reports and ordered further funds withheld in Illinois, making this state the only one in the nation to be barred from the program. The action was taken by the U.S. Defense Civil Preparedness Agency.

The missing reports were under the jurisdiction of E. Eire Jones of Palatine, Illinois Emergency Services Disaster Agency director. Two planners were fired at the time the federal action was taken in August.

State officials acknowledged that the reports were either missing or destroyed and could give no explanation as to why.

BEFORE THE FUNDS were cut off from Illinois, they were to be used for a six-year program designed to prepare civilian evacuation plans for all major urban centers in Illinois. The state effort is part of a national program.

The planners were to have completed preliminary evacuation plans for a number of cities, but Bruce Bishop, director of the U.S. Defense Civil Preparedness, Region 4 said plans were not submitted for Rockford, Peoria, Rock Island, Freeport, Moline and Jo Daviess County. The federal civil preparedness agency refused further payment to Illinois as a result of the missing plans.

Planners had not started work on Chicago or suburban Cook County yet. The work was scheduled to take place this year.

The canceled Illinois contract is part of a little publicized and somewhat controversial effort by the federal government to design plans that reportedly would save 100 million lives in an all-out nuclear attack. The plan calls for the evacuation of all urban centers and establishes temporary refuges in rural areas.

JONES SAID HE has been talking with federal officials about funding a revised program, but there is no firm indication the agency will accept the plan. Jones, who has been critical of the Nuclear Civil Preparedness plan, wants federal financing for a plan that encompasses all disasters, not just nuclear attacks.

Besides his criticism for the NCP program, Jones has been lobbying for reorganization of the 38 federal agencies that now oversee disaster planning and relief programs.

Although Jones expressed confidence his alternate plan would be financed, a telegram from Bishop obtained by The Daily Herald indicates the government still has several questions about the new plan and does not appear to be willing to forget about the missing documents.

JONES SAID HE has been opposed to the nuclear civil defense program because federal officials never have developed a consistent policy.

"This program has been a major source of problems. I think we have got some less than honest answers" from the agency recently, Jones said. Both Jones and Bishop admit there has been some personal friction in their dealings, but both men said they were willing to work out problems.

Bishop said he does not think a new contract could be negotiated with Illinois before Jan. 1, 1978 at the earliest, because of the questions over the new plan and the lingering problems connected with the missing reports.

Jones said even if the new contract is approved planning for some areas of the state would have to be started from scratch.

"We don't have a situation like Illinois anywhere else in the country," said John McConnell, director of plans and operations for the civil defense agency in Washington.

He noted that planners have bypassed the Chicago area, because additional feasibility studies were being conducted in the Northeast to determine if the evacuation of the nation's largest cities was feasible.

McConnell said preliminary reports indicate such evacuations would be more difficult, but feasible.

"It would take a little more time, maybe three and one-half days," McConnell said. An essential premise for the success of the evacuation plan involved a two to three day advance indication of a nuclear attack. Civil preparedness officials have developed a scenario that calls for a slow developing international situation preceding any all out nuclear attack on the U.S.

While federal officials defend the plan, Jones questions the feasibility of efforts that would force some people to flee more than 300 miles into predetermined "host" areas. He questioned how people would be housed and fed once they got there. The federal plan is designed to establish housing and supply resources.

Auditors hit use of funds here

From our Springfield bureau

SPRINGFIELD — Federal officials have charged that the Illinois Emergency Services Disaster Agency and several other civil defense groups have misspent nearly $13,000 on various projects.

The Daily Herald has learned federal auditors are objecting to state claims for reimbursement for a number of projects — including the use of chartered aircraft by E. Erie Jones of Palatine.

The auditors have questioned the use of federal money on several projects in Springfield, Peoria and Joliet.

Audit reports obtained by The Daily Herald show Jones, state disaster agency chief, chartered planes from companies in Jacksonville and Poplar Grove near Belvedere to travel around the state.

AUDITORS questioned the use of the planes because state travel regulations require that the costs of charter airplanes not exceed the cost of normal transportation.

Also being questioned are claims for cabs, parking and tolls paid by Jones, the installation of a warning siren in Peoria and the conversion of a van for civil defense use.

Jones and his aides label the misspending claims as "nit-picking" by the U.S. Defense Civil Preparedness Agency. They suggest the criticism is in response to Jones' effort to get the federal government to reorganize disaster assistance agencies.

QUESTIONS WERE raised about Jones' travel expense in 1975, but the government eventually allowed the charges. The 1975 complaints appeared to be centered around the expense claims related to motel and restaurant bills.

AUDITORS ALSO question the use of federal funds to outfit an emergency operations center truck. While a federal grant was awarded for some work on the project, the auditors questioned costs for the purchase of a 19-inch color television set, refrigerator and some repair work on an older van. Those expenses were not listed on the original grant application.

State officials initially argued about the objections to payments for the $187 television set, stating that it could be used "as a means of ensuring proper public information programs relating to the disaster" are being aired.

The most recent federal audit findings came as federal officials canceled a nuclear civil defense planning contract with Illinois after documents supposedly prepared under the $165,000 contract either were lost or destroyed.

Although some of the funds the federal auditors say were misspent are being disputed, it appears Peoria officials have lost $4,000 for installation of a warning siren. Auditors reported city officials there incorrectly used federal revenue-sharing funds in 1976 to pay for their share of an $8,000 siren. Use of the revenue-sharing funds on other federal grant project was prohibited then.

Top court hears pregnancy cases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Wednesday heard arguments on whether a woman who goes on maternity leave has as much right to sick pay as an employe who suffers a heart attack.

Attorney Charles Wray, who represents the Nashville (Tenn.) Gas Co., told the nine justices his firm withholds sick pay for pregnancy because of a woman's desire to "exalt her personal life above the interests of her employer'' by absenting herself through a "voluntary condition."

A worker who suffers a heart attack or who is involved in an automobile accident is not staying out for reasons of personal preference, he said.

WRAY ACKNOWLEDGED Mrs. Nora Satty, who sued the company on charges of sex discrimination, lost sick pay and more than three years' seniority when she took maternity leave in 1972.

The case is a sequel to the Supreme Court's 1976 General Electric Co. decision that pregnancy may be excluded from a private employer's disability insurance program without violating federal civil rights law.

The Nashville case and a second from Richmond, Calif., involved only ordinary sick leave and not an insurance program.

Attorney Robert W. Weismueller Jr. of Nashville, who represented Mrs. Satty, said what the company in effect did was to fire her.

"She has lost her competitive seniority forever, even if she gets another permanent job,'' he said.

WRAY INSISTED the General Electric decision is controlling because it said a distinction based on pregnancy is neutral on its face. There is no evidence that Nashville has more than "a straightforward pregnancy policy,'' he said.

The California case was brought by Sonja Lynn Berg, a teacher who originally was required to stop working during her seventh month of pregnancy, sooner than she and her doctor believed necessary. She sued on behalf of all teachers in her situation.

Arthur W. Walenta Jr., assistant county counsel for Contra Costa, argued Mrs. Berg did not follow the rules for filing discrimination suits and the case should be dismissed on that ground.

Her attorney, Mary C. Dunlap of San Francisco, urged the court to find purposeful discrimination against teachers who were denied sick pay between 1973 and 1975, when the state changed its law to allow maternity pay for sick leave.

The two cases will be decided by written opinion before the end of the term next June.

Carter energy plan may have to be done over

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee, still badly split on President Carter's energy tax plans, adjourned after only an hour of debate Wednesday with some members suggesting that perhaps Carter should start over.

The failure to reach a compromise despite more than a week of behind the scenes negotiations added further problems to Carter's energy program, which was buffeted Tuesday by a Senate vote to decontrol the price of natural gas.

The major issue before the committee is Carter's crude oil tax, designed to raise the price of domestic oil to the world price and thus discourage its use. The panel tentatively defeated the tax earlier, but is considering its revival if it can find an acceptable way to spend the tax or use it as a method of gradually decontroling oil prices.

BUT COMMITTEE members could not agree Wednesday even on whether to vote first on a tax and then decide how to spend it, or whether to decide on new energy programs and then devise a tax to pay for them.

A frustrated chairman Russell Long, D-La., said, "We're up against the old problem of which comes first, the hen or the egg. If you don't have the hen or the egg, then you have to be the Almighty to get the other one."

Long, who normally maintains control of his committee, publicly bemoaned, "All I've done so far is prove how little influence I have with my colleagues."

Long said it was obvious that "at the moment we're so far apart" that the committee should adjourn until Thursday morning.

"I'M WONDERING if the administration shouldn't admit that its energy program is in shambles," said Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., suggesting that perhaps Carter should start over and Congress should remain in session until late December if necessary to deal with it.

Others on the committee expressed similar sentiments. Sen. John Danforth, R-Md., said he could not see any program emerging from the committee unless Carter came up with a new plan.

"It's a miserable pittance of a plan," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., who favors decontrol of oil prices.

Packwood pushed hard for a vote on a plan to revive Carter's crude oil tax, but to phase it out by Sept. 30, 1981, in a manner that would amount to decontrol of oil prices.

After several minutes of debate, as the issue neared a vote, Packwood announced, "It's obvious it's going to be voted down, and I don't want it to be voted down, so I withdraw the motion."

Hope for future of Superblock

After two years of construction and more than 12 years of planning, Des Plaines downtown redevelopment project — Superblock — will come to life today.

The 10 story office building opened earlier this year. Today, the Des Plaines Mall, the companion of the office building, will be open for business. The mall's centerpiece, Spiegler's Department Store, and several other small shops will be the first to move into the modernistic facility at Lee and Prairie streets.

The $15 million project, a cooperative venture by J. R. Gotlieb and Associates, a Chicago development firm, and Erickson and Stevens, a Des Plaines architectural firm, is the first major downtown redevelopment project in the area.

Many other communities are either contemplating similar revitalization programs, or taking their first steps toward construction. Citizens in these communities are keeping close tabs on Superblock to see whether it succeeds or fails.

There is no question that the taxpayers of Des Plaines, the developers and the merchants have a tremendous stake in the success of the project.

The citizens of Des Plaines have invested $1.2 million to build a parking deck adjacent to Superblock for shopper parking. The developers have invested millions, and the merchants have put their futures — and the future of downtown Des Plaines in general — on the line by leasing space there.

There have been problems. Superblock has been expensive. Many merchants and residents object to the modern facade which contrasts with the old fashioned look of many existing buildings. The parking deck has generated a furor in Des Plaines. Residents and merchants alike complain that its location splits the downtown area in two.

Despite the problems, Superblock remains a bold and imaginative attempt to stem the shopper migration to the regional shopping centers. If it succeeds, suburban downtown business districts will have a new lease on life. And that can only enhance the quality of life in the community.

RTA trips link to Chicago

It was an idea whose time had come — a field trip for culturally deprived suburbanites to show them the wonders of the "big city."

The Regional Transportation Authority transported 111 Palatine women and senior citizens into Chicago Tuesday in an effort to reintroduce them to the wonders of shopping in the Loop or North Michigan Avenue.

For many of those making the trip, it was a first. One woman said she had lived in the Chicago suburbs for eight years and had visited downtown Chicago just once.

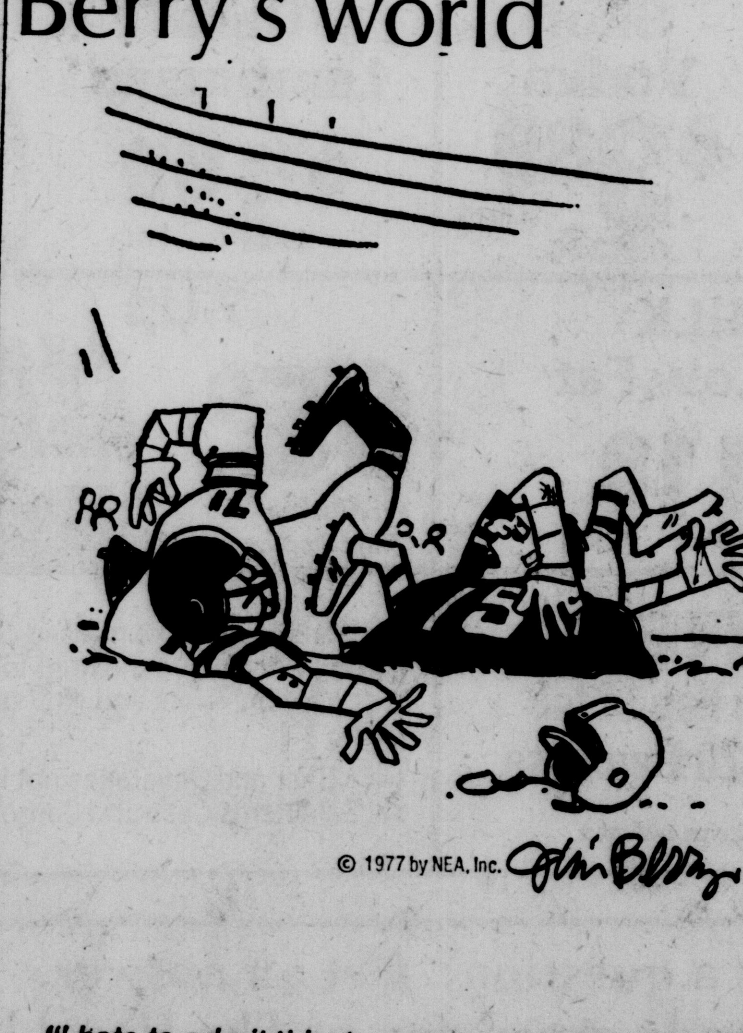
Still others confessed that they were frightened of the very idea of going to Chicago. One woman, convinced her purse would be snatched, tucked her money into her clothes to protect it.

All of this indicates the gulf that has grown over the years between the city and the suburbs. And while suburban residents often justifiably express the opinion that city dwellers don't understand them, suburbanites can be — and often are — extremely isolated from the city.

For the RTA, the field trip was good publicity — a good way to tempt new riders into the system.

For those who took part, it was a good opportunity to widen their interests. While Woodfield and other area shopping plazas make this area self-sufficient in many respects, the city does have unique things to offer the suburban resident.

The RTA program is a good one. It should be extended beyond Palatine in the months ahead as a step toward improving the relationship between city and suburbs.



"I hate to admit this, but maybe Rozelle was right about 'unnecessary violence'!"

This school gives students a truly liberal education

(First of two related columns)

Paul Greenberg

SANTA FE, New Mexico — What is it that Americans expect of a college education? An important step up the ladder of success, a ticket to the good life. One can tell that much by the usual college curriculum, with its general courses the first couple of years aimed like a road sign for some specialized field — physical therapy, journalism, or education as a specialized technique of its own independent of whatever is being taught.

Of course it would be nice if along the way the student picked up some culture. The "of course" indicates how optional that objective is. A parent might want a child to learn at college but, well, not to learn too much. Taking ideas seriously can disrupt a well-ordered life.

There is a college that still takes that risk — St. John's. Its entire four-year curriculum is "limited" to the study of great books from Homer to Einstein. Classes resemble small discussion groups. The only lectures allowed are those given by a guest scholar every Friday evening here at St. John's second campus. The first campus is at Annapolis, Maryland. That's where a couple of Robert Hutchins' disciples took over a Depression-riddled school forty years ago and began to put their vision of a truly liberal education into practice.

THIS CAMPUS at Santa Fe is only 13 years old but the curriculum is the same. The study of secondary works and scholarly commentaries is actively discouraged. There are no textbooks of the "Western Philosophy from Plato to Marx" variety, no handy lectures explaining "What Plato Really Meant."

Greek and French are required, so that students be able to read Plato's dialogue Meno in the original and Baudelaire without translation getting in the way. Two years of music are required.

The study of mathematics begins with Euclid and Ptolemy and by the senior year reaches Lobachevsky's non-Euclidean geometry and Einstein's theory of relativity. In science lab, students repeat the experiments of Lavoisier, Dalton and Millikan. "The conventional name for it," says Dean Robert Bart, "is chemistry."

Written examinations are the exception. Most exams are oral, and not for grading purposes but to determine whether the student has grasped the subject or needs more review. St. John's students, says Dean Bart, do "surprisingly well" on standardized exams out in the world, considering what a shock it must be to face an aptitude test for medical school or law school without any previous conditioning in computerized competition.

IF A STUDENT wants or needs a mass of information, Dean Bart advises reading a book. The dean remembers his own education at Harvard, where he was drilled in the great commentaries but never cracked the Iliad. At St. John's students may never hear a standard interpretation. They deal only with the original texts. Here, says the dean, and his eyes still light up at the prospect, the student gets "to open the book and actually read it."

The job of teachers at St. John's, where they are called Tutors, is to teach. And nothing else. Publication is irrelevant. The Publish or Perish Syndrome is unknown on campus. Dean Bart speaks of it as one would a distant plague. Teachers may bring specialties with them to the faculty, but are expected to study the St. John's curriculum until eventually they can teach any of the books in it. It is a formidable challenge to a teacher, and a direct one to the specialization that dominates so much of American education, and life.

ROBERT SPAETH, who was teaching a political science seminar in Thomas Hobbes' Leviathan when I visited the Santa Fe campus, originally came to St. John's as a teacher of physics and mathematics. The acid test for a teacher at St. John's is a willingness to learn classical Greek well enough to teach it. If so, the teacher is considered worthy of a chance to stay on and tackle the other volumes in the curriculum.

St. John's still takes the idea of a liberal education sufficiently seriously to devote four years to it and to nothing else. Once a familiarity with most of these works was considered the mark of an educated person. Now such a broad and deep acquaintance with ideas is so distinctive a form of education that St. John's may be its only remaining exemplar in the country.

Sneak play in Congress gets through

by GENE BERNHARDT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — They've done it again, those Congressmen who are so concerned about Congress' public image and complain that the press is always taking a cheap shot at them.

For the first time in slightly more than a decade a bill was introduced in the House and called up minutes later and passed by voice.

No reference to a committee for hearings, no debate, no explanation, no printed copies of the bill or an accompanying report, no record vote.

EVEN THE VENERABLE Congressional Record, in reporting the previous day's activities, showed only that Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., asked and got unanimous consent "for the immediate consideration of the bill H.R. 9262 . . ."

It was done that way, with the obvious planning of the Democratic leadership and the silent acquiesence of the 70 or 80 members on the floor at the time, because it gave a one shot increase in Congressmen's pensions to encourage the older members to retire and make room for younger blood.

It's the kind of thing that many members would say "the press would distort and not report objectively" if there had been public debate.

The purpose of the bill had merit. Even Common Cause, the citizens' lobbying group which has little favor among congressmen, supported the objective. It's doubtful, however, that it supported the method of passage.

WHAT IT DID was allow pensions for those retiring next year to be figured from the current salary base, rather than determining the base from the average of the three highest year's salaries, which is now in law and which will resume in January, 1979.

For any House or Senate member retiring with the maximum pension, it means a one-time $3,426 a year increase in his pension over what he would get under the regular system.

At last count, six Senators and 11 House members plan to retire next year and another nine are seeking other offices and could come under the pension if they lose.

Dan Glickman, a freshman Democrat from Kansas, said he wasn't aware of what happened until he read about it the next day in his hometown newspaper.

"I WAS ABSOLUTELY disgusted When I found out," said Glickman.

So were Reps. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., and Martha Keys, D-Kan.

The three immediately introduced a resolution to amend the rules of the House "to require that measures affecting the salaries, freebies or emoluments of Congress be adopted members of Congress be adopted by by roll call vote."

Glickman, in his freshman naiveness, said, "As far as other members agreeing with this position, I think it would be very embarrassing if they don't go along with it."

What they pass so quietly in Congress, they also kill.

'Library board head should quit'

The vote has been tallied and the library proponents have been soundly defeated. The citizens of Mount Prospect have spoken four to one against more money for new books and six to one against a larger tax base from which the library could have drawn to fill their every whimisical need. Yes, this is a mandate from the people and tells the board of trustees and library board to be careful how you spend our tax dollars.

A referendum should have been held over three years ago. This whole issue could have been avoided if those officials had simply agreed to it and not rammed the new library through. It is apparent the public feels the new library costs entirely too much for their individual pocketbooks. No one can argue that education is not extremely important and a library is not necessary, but many thought the old library was adequate, and a new one was not needed. In fact, three years ago a citizen survey was held and only one of 13 people thought the old library was inadequate.

In spite of these statistics, our mayor at the time, Bob Teichert, and library board president, Bob Parson took it upon themselves to abuse home rule power and push the library through even though the evidence was overwhelming not to build a new library. They both refused to conduct any further survey and both felt a referendum would be a waste of time and money.

Since then we have had an election. We have a new mayor, Carolyn Krause, and may I add a good one. All of the trustees who ran to be reelected were heavily defeated. Why were they defeated? Apparently the public felt they were being abused.

Bob Parson is not up for reelection until 1981. Personally, I feel Mr. Parson should step down as president of the library board, as I feel he is out of tune with the community. We should have a person who is dedicated to the principal of economizing. The library board choose to buy a computer and landscape before buying new books. This is further proof of misplaced priorities. Furthermore, I read that Mr. Parson feels the library could "fold" if they do not get enough public support.

Mr. Parson has served this community without pay, in his position as library board president, for which I personally want to thank him. Also, he surely has skills or he would not have been elected in the first place. However, it may now take a different type of library board president to overcome their present situation of having to tighten their belts. Perhaps what we need now is an administrator who can soundly work within the budget given to him nearly one-half a million dollars! $473,000 should be enough money to operate the library and not have to close on Sundays. It can be done.

'Crane's style fails to inspire public'

In the Oct. 1 Fence Post, Earl W. Lewis, representative for Congressman Crane, nearly said it all as he summarized the plight of the GOP in our country today — leadership. Trouble is, there isn't any even among the conservatives, which is why it's a 20 per cent party. But this should really surprise no one who has not been in a coma during the last 30 years.

Lewis goes on to outline some of the disastrous results of our one-party nation and then states his hope for the future with an alternative to the present GOP approach. Conservative philosophy, he says, via the likes of Reagan and Crane who are capable and "above all, believable." How nice.

I'm afraid Liewis suffers from the same affliction Crane carries, i.e., a distorted notion of what leadership means. Leadership always has and always will mean only one thing — inspiration. Some conservatives might have a dose of it — Reagan certainly has — but Crane?

It's axiomatic in politics that voters believe candidates whom they think they understand. Yet Crane, with his overly-intellectual and sometimes monotonous delivery can hardly hope to communicate to the broad segment of American voters. And I can't envision Crane inspiring urban liberals to rush forth with their support either.

The GOP isn't going to be reshaped with conservative leaders and that's too bad because this country needs a Phil Crane in the White House. But how will he get there? Who will understand and be inspired?

Hope for future of Superblock

After two years of construction and more than 12 years of planning, Des Plaines downtown redevelopment project — Superblock — will come to life today.

The 10 story office building opened earlier this year. Today, the Des Plaines Mall, the companion of the office building, will be open for business. The mall's centerpiece, Spiegler's Department Store, and several other small shops will be the first to move into the modernistic facility at Lee and Prairie streets.

The $15 million project, a cooperative venture by J. R. Gotlieb and Associates, a Chicago development firm, and Erickson and Stevens, a Des Plaines architectural firm, is the first major downtown redevelopment project in the area.

Many other communities are either contemplating similar revitalization programs, or taking their first steps toward construction. Citizens in these communities are keeping close tabs on Superblock to see whether it succeeds or fails.

There is no question that the taxpayers of Des Plaines, the developers and the merchants have a tremendous stake in the success of the project.

The citizens of Des Plaines have invested $1.2 million to build a parking deck adjacent to Superblock for shopper parking. The developers have invested millions, and the merchants have put their futures — and the future of downtown Des Plaines in general — on the line by leasing space there.

There have been problems. Superblock has been expensive. Many merchants and residents object to the modern facade which contrasts with the old fashioned look of many existing buildings. The parking deck has generated a furor in Des Plaines. Residents and merchants alike complain that its location splits the downtown area in two.

Despite the problems, Superblock remains a bold and imaginative attempt to stem the shopper migration to the regional shopping centers. If it succeeds, suburban downtown business districts will have a new lease on life. And that can only enhance the quality of life in the community.

RTA trips link to Chicago

It was an idea whose time had come — a field trip for culturally deprived suburbanites to show them the wonders of the "big city."

The Regional Transportation Authority transported 111 Palatine women and senior citizens into Chicago Tuesday in an effort to reintroduce them to the wonders of shopping in the Loop or North Michigan Avenue.

For many of those making the trip, it was a first. One woman said she had lived in the Chicago suburbs for eight years and had visited downtown Chicago just once.

Still others confessed that they were frightened of the very idea of going to Chicago. One woman, convinced her purse would be snatched, tucked her money into her clothes to protect it.

All of this indicates the gulf that has grown over the years between the city and the suburbs. And while suburban residents often justifiably express the opinion that city dwellers don't understand them, suburbanites can be — and often are — extremely isolated from the city.

For the RTA, the field trip was good publicity — a good way to tempt new riders into the system.

For those who took part, it was a good opportunity to widen their interests. While Woodfield and other area shopping plazas make this area self-sufficient in many respects, the city does have unique things to offer the suburban resident.

The RTA program is a good one. It should be extended beyond Palatine in the months ahead as a step toward improving the relationship between city and suburbs.

Sneak play in Congress gets through

by GENE BERNHARDT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — They've done it again, those Congressmen who are so concerned about Congress' public image and complain that the press is always taking a cheap shot at them.

For the first time in slightly more than a decade a bill was introduced in the House and called up minutes later and passed by voice.

No reference to a committee for hearings, no debate, no explanation, no printed copies of the bill or an accompanying report, no record vote.

EVEN THE VENERABLE Congressional Record, in reporting the previous day's activities, showed only that Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., asked and got unanimous consent "for the immediate consideration of the bill H.R. 9262 . . ."

It was done that way, with the obvious planning of the Democratic leadership and the silent acquiesence of the 70 or 80 members on the floor at the time, because it gave a one shot increase in Congressmen's pensions to encourage the older members to retire and make room for younger blood.

It's the kind of thing that many members would say "the press would distort and not report objectively" if there had been public debate.

The purpose of the bill had merit. Even Common Cause, the citizens' lobbying group which has little favor among congressmen, supported the objective. It's doubtful, however, that it supported the method of passage.

WHAT IT DID was allow pensions for those retiring next year to be figured from the current salary base, rather than determining the base from the average of the three highest year's salaries, which is now in law and which will resume in January, 1979.

For any House or Senate member retiring with the maximum pension, it means a one-time $3,426 a year increase in his pension over what he would get under the regular system.

At last count, six Senators and 11 House members plan to retire next year and another nine are seeking other offices and could come under the pension if they lose.

Dan Glickman, a freshman Democrat from Kansas, said he wasn't aware of what happened until he read about it the next day in his hometown newspaper.

"I WAS ABSOLUTELY disgusted When I found out," said Glickman.

So were Reps. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., and Martha Keys, D-Kan.

The three immediately introduced a resolution to amend the rules of the House "to require that measures affecting the salaries, freebies or emoluments of Congress be adopted members of Congress be adopted by by roll call vote."

Glickman, in his freshman naiveness, said, "As far as other members agreeing with this position, I think it would be very embarrassing if they don't go along with it."

What they pass so quietly in Congress, they also kill.

This school gives students a truly liberal education

(First of two related columns)

Paul Greenberg

SANTA FE, New Mexico — What is it that Americans expect of a college education? An important step up the ladder of success, a ticket to the good life. One can tell that much by the usual college curriculum, with its general courses the first couple of years aimed like a road sign for some specialized field — physical therapy, journalism, or education as a specialized technique of its own independent of whatever is being taught.

Of course it would be nice if along the way the student picked up some culture. The "of course" indicates how optional that objective is. A parent might want a child to learn at college but, well, not to learn too much. Taking ideas seriously can disrupt a well-ordered life.

There is a college that still takes that risk — St. John's. Its entire four-year curriculum is "limited" to the study of great books from Homer to Einstein. Classes resemble small discussion groups. The only lectures allowed are those given by a guest scholar every Friday evening here at St. John's second campus. The first campus is at Annapolis, Maryland. That's where a couple of Robert Hutchins' disciples took over a Depression-riddled school forty years ago and began to put their vision of a truly liberal education into practice.

THIS CAMPUS at Santa Fe is only 13 years old but the curriculum is the same. The study of secondary works and scholarly commentaries is actively discouraged. There are no textbooks of the "Western Philosophy from Plato to Marx" variety, no handy lectures explaining "What Plato Really Meant."

Greek and French are required, so that students be able to read Plato's dialogue Meno in the original and Baudelaire without translation getting in the way. Two years of music are required.

The study of mathematics begins with Euclid and Ptolemy and by the senior year reaches Lobachevsky's non-Euclidean geometry and Einstein's theory of relativity. In science lab, students repeat the experiments of Lavoisier, Dalton and Millikan. "The conventional name for it," says Dean Robert Bart, "is chemistry."

Written examinations are the exception. Most exams are oral, and not for grading purposes but to determine whether the student has grasped the subject or needs more review. St. John's students, says Dean Bart, do "surprisingly well" on standardized exams out in the world, considering what a shock it must be to face an aptitude test for medical school or law school without any previous conditioning in computerized competition.

IF A STUDENT wants or needs a mass of information, Dean Bart advises reading a book. The dean remembers his own education at Harvard, where he was drilled in the great commentaries but never cracked the Iliad. At St. John's students may never hear a standard interpretation. They deal only with the original texts. Here, says the dean, and his eyes still light up at the prospect, the student gets "to open the book and actually read it."

The job of teachers at St. John's, where they are called Tutors, is to teach. And nothing else. Publication is irrelevant. The Publish or Perish Syndrome is unknown on campus. Dean Bart speaks of it as one would a distant plague. Teachers may bring specialties with them to the faculty, but are expected to study the St. John's curriculum until eventually they can teach any of the books in it. It is a formidable challenge to a teacher, and a direct one to the specialization that dominates so much of American education, and life.

ROBERT SPAETH, who was teaching a political science seminar in Thomas Hobbes' Leviathan when I visited the Santa Fe campus, originally came to St. John's as a teacher of physics and mathematics. The acid test for a teacher at St. John's is a willingness to learn classical Greek well enough to teach it. If so, the teacher is considered worthy of a chance to stay on and tackle the other volumes in the curriculum.

St. John's still takes the idea of a liberal education sufficiently seriously to devote four years to it and to nothing else. Once a familiarity with most of these works was considered the mark of an educated person. Now such a broad and deep acquaintance with ideas is so distinctive a form of education that St. John's may be its only remaining exemplar in the country.

Mideast peace talks need Carter's tactful attention

by MARK A. BRUZONSKY

Israel's willingness to have Palestinians in a united Arab delegation at the first session of a resumed Geneva conference, though hedged with restrictions, may give the Carter administration the wedge it needs to fulfill its pledge to Saudi Arabia and Egypt to get the peace process moving during 1977.

Still, this peace process is not likely to proceed very far unless the U.S. is able to outmaneuver Israel's current government and return the process to substance rather than public relations and invalidate the obtrusive restrictions placed by Israel upon participation at Geneva. Last weekend's joint U.S.-Soviet statement may be the beginning of a major international effort to do just this.

Last Thursday, President Carter had lent his prestige to circumventing the main Israeli condition — refusal to deal with the Palestine Liberation Organization. He stated for the first time that the PLO "represents a substantial part of the Palestinians." He added that the U.S. will "begin to meet and work with the PLO" if the PLO adopts United Nations Resolution 242 — though such PLO recognition of Israel might be combined with the insistence that Palestinian self-determination be added to that resolution's reference to "a just settlement of the refugee problem."

ISRAEL'S GOALS, in what much of the press has wrongly regarded as a major policy shift designed to accommodate American diplomacy, appear to be fourfold:

- To block possible U.S. acquiescence at the United Nations to inclusion of the idea of "Palestinian national rights" in a new framework resolution for the Geneva conference which would reaffirm the centrality of Resolution 242 passed in 1967. A central condition placed by Israel on its willingness to attend Geneva is that there be absolutely no change in 242.
- To take the burden off Israel of refusing to attend the Geneva conference which the U.S. is making strenuous efforts to bring about. By phrasing Israeli policy in the positive rather than the negative the burden at least appears to have shifted to the Arabs.
- To further pressure the moderate Arab states — especially Egypt where President Sadat craves a foreign policy success even more than does President Carter — to distance themselves from the PLO.
- TO ALSO separate the PLO and the U.S. which have been cautiously courting each other through intermediaries for some months. Israel is desperately attempting to lessen the likelihood the PLO will take any further steps toward accepting American conditions that could lead to some form of American-PLO relationship.

Essentially, Israel has changed its position on only one, relatively minor, aspect of Geneva — the symbolism of a unified Arab delegation at the opening session. But even here the Israeli cabinet insists that the non-PLO Palestinian Arabs at this session be considered part of the Jordinian delegation which they will formally join in all negotiating sessions. This has actually been the Israeli view for some time.

Moshe Dayan, Israel's foreign minister, stated very clearly recently that Israel's views about the arrangements for the Geneva conference incorporated Israel's views about what would be discussable at the conference.

Israel is prepared only to negotiate peace treaties with the neighboring Arab states, essentially evading what has often been termed, by high U.S. Government officials, among others, the heart of the conflict — the Palestinian issue.

FACED WITH this situation, the Carter administration appears to be tactfully pursuing the following goals:

- To use the wedge provided by Israel to bring about a Geneva conference where the Palestinians will be represented (which means some role for the PLO) and where Palestinian self-determination will be on the agenda in addition to peace treaties between Israel and the four adjoining Arab states.
- To convince the PLO that the historical moment has come requiring a public and unambiguous willingness to acknowledge Israel's right to exist as a Jewish state if Israel will acknowledge the right of the Palestinians to a national existence as well.
- To continue acting as an honest intermediary gradually narrowing seemingly irresolvable differences and using persuasion as well as various forms of leverage to keep momentum in the general direction of an eventual settlement.
- To begin serious consideration of the types of assurances and guarantees the U.S. is willing and able to make to Israel to help give the Israelis sufficient courage to begin contemplating the kind of risky settlement the Carter administartion has been advocating for some months.

American and Israeli goals remain substantially at odds. Israel's recent policy announcements have not really altered this reality; in fact, they resulted from Israel's awareness of the dangerous gap that has been growing between Washington and Jerusalem. Still, Israel has provided something of an opening and it is now up to the Carter administration to adroitly exploit its small achievement.

Dodgers pull even while K.C. rips Yanks

by FRED McMANE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — In typical Hollywood fashion, Dusty Baker stole a dramatic script from teammate Ron Cey Wednesday night by belting a grand slam homer in the fourth inning which sparked the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 7-1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and evened the National League championship series at one game apiece.

After a travel day Thursday, the best-of-five series switches to Philadelphia's Veterans Stadium for the third game Friday night. The Phillies, however, must still be regarded as having the upper hand, since they won 60 of their 81 games played at home this year.

Baker's grand slam, which traveled into almost the same section of seats that Cey hit his into in a losing effort Tuesday night, snapped a 1-1 tie and made things easy for righthander Don Sutton, who stopped the Phillies in a route-going effort.

SUTTON, ONE OF baseball's "money" pitchers but unlucky this past season in compiling a 14-8 mark, was touched for nine hits but only one that did any damage — a solo homer to Bake McBride in the third inning — in posting his third victory without a loss in playoff competition.

The Dodgers, guilty of several fundamental mistakes in Tuesday night's 7-5 defeat, played a virtually flawless game defensively, while the Phillies saw their strategy backfire twice, which ended up costing them five runs.

Each time it was the intentional walk — that "book strategy" which so many managers employ — that hurt the Phillies. The first time they used it was in the fourth when Jim Lonborg, after discussing the situation with Manager Danny Ozark, elected to walk hard-hitting Steve Garvey intentionally to load the bases and pitch to Baker.

Bill Russell had led off the inning with a single and Reggie Smith also singled before Cey laid down a sacrifice bunt to move the runners to second and third bases. After Garvey was purposely passed, Baker slammed a 1-2 pitch on a low line into the left field pavilion to give the Dodgers a 5-1 lead.

BAKERS'S HOMER produced the same reaction that Cey's had the previous night — instant bedlam. The crowd of 55,973, which included comics Don Rickles and Jack Carter and actor Tom Bosley, rose to its feet screaming as Baker circled the bases. The roar of the crowd grew louder as he reached the dugout and he acknowledged the cheers by coming out and tipping his hat to the fans.

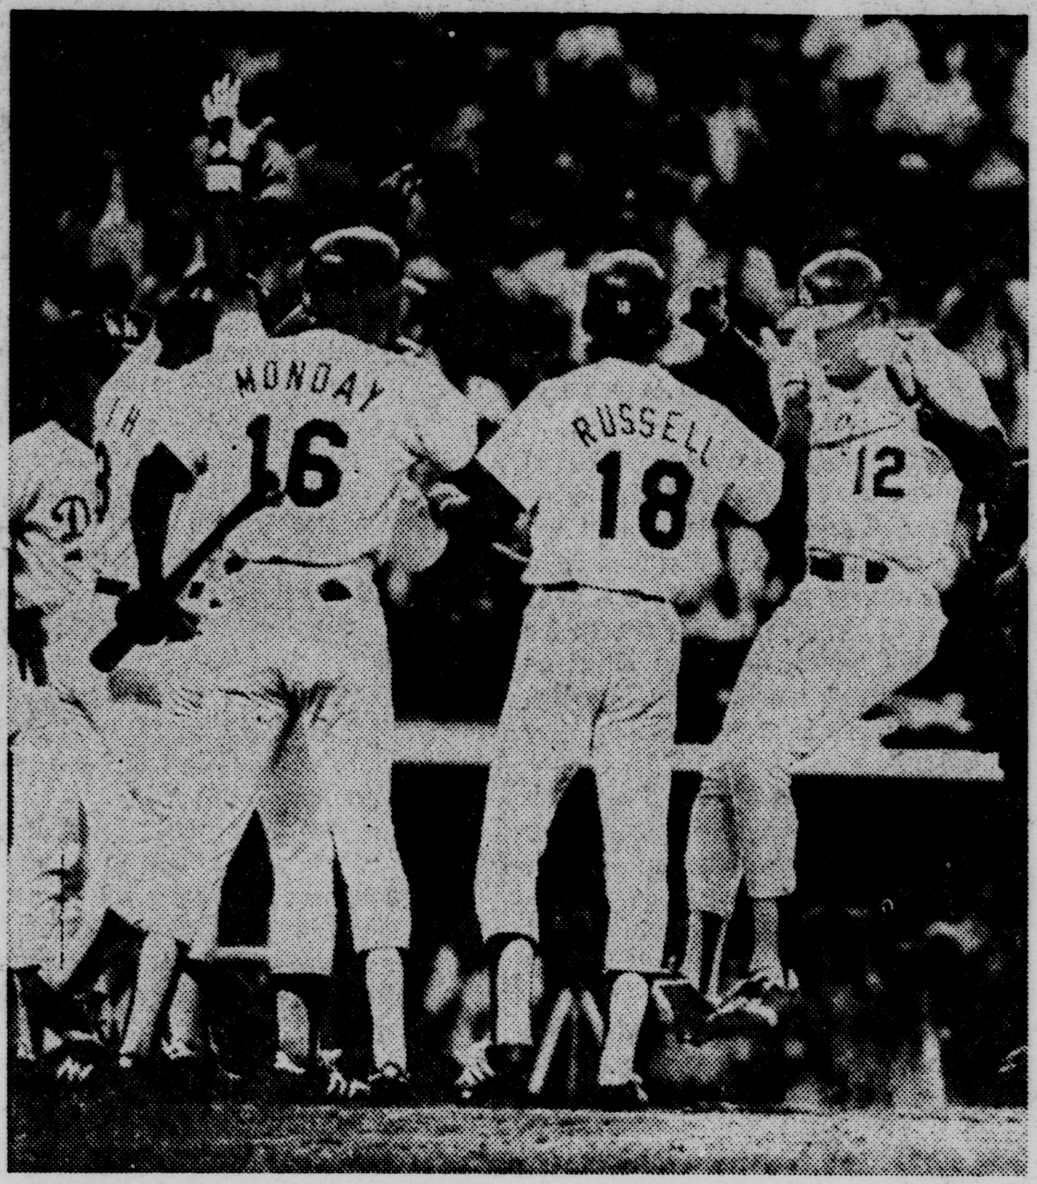
The Dodgers, who quit scoring after Cey's homer Tuesday night, didn't stop this time. In the sixth, with Ron Reed pitching, Cey singled and stole second as Baker fanned for the second out. Once again, the Phillies chose to set up a force play and walk Rick Monday intentionally. But Steve Yeager foiled the stategy by lining a single to center that scored Cey.

Los Angeles added its last run in the seventh when Russell singled with one out and scored as Reggie Smith drilled a triple off the left center field fence off reliever Warren Brusstar.

Prospect Heights native Greg Luzinski, who got a double in four trips, said flatly, "We've got the best team. It's not one guy who's going to win it, Our team is going to win it. We just play good ball at home. The crowd helps but we've just got a good ball club. I'm satisified with the split."

LUZINSKI SAID Sutton crossed the Phillies up because he did not throw as many fastballs as he usually does.

"He threw a lot of breaking stuff and spotted his fastball," Luzinski said. "At that, we hit rockets all over the field, but they made some good plays."



BAKER MAN. Los Angeles Dodger Dusty Baker stomps on the plate after clubbing grand slam homer — the Dodgers' second in two nights against the Philadelphia Phillies in the National League playoffs. The clout sparked the Dodgers to a 7-1 triumph to even the series at one game apiece.

Royals, hoping for a split in Big Apple, take charge

by BILL MADDEN

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Kansas City Royals' juggernaut, which stormed through the American League at a .786 pace after June 17, struck swiftly Wednesday with two-run homers by Hal McRae and John Mayberry and a "gift" two-run double by Fred Patek to shock the New York Yankees 7-2 in the first game of the league championship series.

The Royals, who had hoped for at least a split of the two games at Yankee Stadium in their best-of-five series, wasted no time in that effort by scoring six runs in the first three innings.

Don Gullett, the Yankees' $1.9 million southpaw, was the victim of most of the damage when he failed to fulfill his own formula for stopping the Royals —keeping their speed men off the bases.

GULLETT WALKED the Royals' first batter of the game, Patek, and McRae followed with a home run which just cleared the 387-foot sign in left field.

"I made a note in my Yankee folder the last time we were here that Gullett is a high bail pitcher and Freddie is only 5-foot-4 and I should have him leading off," said Royals' Manager Whitey Herzog. "I don't want to make myself out to be a genius, but Freddie walked on four straight pitches and Hal came up and hit a home run."

Gullett retired the first two Royals in the second inning before disaster struck again. Darrell Porter walked and Frank White had an infield single. Patek then hit a hard smash over third base against the stands along the left field line.

Porter scored easily and left fielder Lou Piniella, thinking the ball had been touched by a spectator, nonchalantly lobbed the ball back to the infield, allowing White to keep right on churning around third and score the second run of the inning for a 4-0 lead.

Gullett finished the inning but he was also finished for the game — and maybe even for the remainder of the playoffs.

"HE CAME IN and told us to get him out of there after the second inning," said Yankee Manager Billy Martin. "He said his arm is hurting him . . . it's the same thing that's been bothering him all year."

Gullett's successor, Dick Tidrow, was more successful in calming the rambunctious Royals, who led the major leagues in victories with 102 — but not until first allowing the second of three hits by Al Cowens and Mayberry's 400-foot rocket into the right field exit ramp, which made the score 6-0 in the third.

The Yankees, after being foiled by Arlington High School graduate Paul Splittorff in the first two innings, finally got on the scoreboard in the bottom of the third when Mickey Rivers, who had three hits, led off with a single and, one out later, Thurman Munson homered into the left field seats.

But Kansas City had already wreaked too much destruction. "Those early runs were very important, because Splittorff was struggling," said Herzog. "They enabled me to go as far as I did (into the ninth) with him. He was nervous and was hit hard early. The runs gave him something to work with."

SPLITTORFF, who was relieved by Doug Bird after a leadoff walk to Chris Chambliss in the ninth, escaped jams in the first, second and seventh innings.

In the first, he stranded Rivers at first base after the speedy center fielder led off with a single. Some deft fielding helped Splittorff in the second, when he twice snared comebackers and converged them into forceouts at second. In the seventh, Rivers doubled with two out but again was stranded by the Royals' lefthander when Graig Nettles hit a soft pop fly to Patek at short.

"I was very nervous since it was the first game of the playoffs," said Splittorff, who has beaten the Yankees three times this year without a loss. "I was struggling at times, but I made some good pitches when I had to — especially to (Reggie) Jackson and Nettles. I ran out of gas in the seventh inning, but I had a good eighth. I knew I was out of there in the ninth."

splittorff did exactly what Herzog wanted him to — handcuff both Jackson and Nettles, the Yankees' leading home run sluggers, without a hit in a combined eight at-bats.

IF THE EARLY runs weren't enough, Splittorff also got some big help — both offensively and defensively — from Cowens. The quiet slugger, who drove in 105 runs during the season, led off with a homer off Tidrow in the eighth for the final Royals' run and three innings earlier he robbed Rivers of a homer by leaping high against the right field wall to spear the ball as it was clearing the fence.

"I didn't think Rivers' ball was carrying that far," said Cowens. "The wind took it and carried it and I had to jump at the last minute to pull it back in."

Cowens also ended the third inning by going back to the wall to pull in a long drive by Piniella.

The Yankees made one last-gasp threat in the ninth. After Chambliss walked, Bird came on and gave up a single to Cliff Johnson. But George Brett speared a hard shot by Willie Randolph, stepped on third and fired to second to double Johnson. The speedy Randolph barely avoided a triple play when he beat the relay to first by a step.

The Yankees, who almost have to win Thursday night or face the unenviable prospect of sweeping the Royals in Kansas City, will send their other left-handed ace, Ron Guidry, to the mound while Herzog will go with Andy Hassler, also a southpaw.

Royal Cowens gets MVP support

by STEVE WILSTEIN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Al Cowens, Kansas City's choice for most valuable player, lifted the pressure off the Royals Wednesday with his bat, glove and spirit.

Cowens capped Kansas City's 7-2 victory over the New York Yankees in the opening game of the American League playoffs with a homer to left field in the eighth inning after a pair of earlier singles.

But it was Cowens' spectacular fielding that really deflated the Yankees and helped wipe out the memory of Kansas City's failure in the playoffs against New York last year.

COWENS NONCHALANTLY robbed Lou Piniella of extra bases in the third inning with a catch against the right field wall, nullified a sure homer by Mickey Rivers in the fifth and made a running catch of a Piniella blooper in the sixth.

"It was over the fence," Cowens said of Rivers' shot. "I jumped and reached over the wall. If I didn't time it just right, it would have been gone. But I thought I had it all the way."

"If you had to vote for the best baseball player, I'd vote for Al Cowens," said Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog.

John Mayberry, who also contributed a two-run homer, agreed totally.

"Al can do anything there is to do in baseball," Mayberry said. "He's got my vote."

AREA PRODUCT Paul Splittorff, who kept the Yankees under control until he tired and was replaced by Doug Bird in the ninth, said he was "honored" to have the confidence of Herzog in being named the opening game pitcher.

"I didn't have my best stuff today," Splittorff said, "but it was good enough. It's a thrill and I'm honored the manager and my teammates have confidence in me. I got a little tired in the seventh inning and I was glad he took me out when he did."

"Paul only threw about 70 pitches," Herzog said, "but he was getting tired. He pitched a fine game."

Don Gullett, who gave up Kansas City's first four runs Wednesday said he was unable to get his pitching arm loose, the same left arm which has bothered him periodically all season.

"I couldn't get loose in the bullpen," said Gullett, who left the game after the second inning with the Royals leading, 4-0. "I felt I was hurting the ball club going with that type of stuff. The trainer asked me how I was after the second inning and I told him I couldn't get loose. He told Billy (Martin) and he took me out."

Reggie Jackson, who was hitless in four tries, said the Yankees fell too far behind too early to catch up.

"You get behind, 6-0, with a good club and you're not going to catch them, I don't care who you are," said Jackson. "To take advantage of the fact we're a more experienced team, we've got to stay within one or two runs to be able to put the pressure on. There's no excuse. We got beat."

Elgin coaches keep in touch

Rick Christopher

Byline report

There's nothing secretive about their technique. One coach walks the sidelines relaying messages from the press box to the head coach.

Head phone sets and walkie-talkies have been an integral part of Elgin High School's coaching system in recent years. Assistants Irv Johnston and Stan Donegan position themselves comfortably each game in the warm, dry surroundings of the press box.

Johnston is responsible for the rushing game while Donegan keeps tabs on the passing attack for the 4-0 Maroons. Both coaches watch Elgin's offense and defensive alignments with a careful eye.

"A LOT OF TEAMS stay with their power attack the entire game," Donegan said. "We like to shy away from that stigma.

"Sitting up here gives you a wider scope of the field, so if one team gangs up on one particular site we'll call down and suggest an alternate approach."

The final say in any game plan changes still comes from head coach Dick Stephens, regardless of the assistants' suggestions. In the Maroons' romp over Joliet West earlier this season, Donegan spotted a flaw in the Tigers defensive secondary.

With 17 seconds remaining in the first half, Stephens was content to run out the clock as his team rested on its own 13 yard line with a comfortable lead. After the coaches informed Stephens of the weakness, Elgin scored two plays later.

"A lot of the plays we use aren't dreamed up right here on the sidelines," Stephens said. "They're sent down because the assistants can spot weaknesses a lot better than we can. We have the poorest seat in the house down here on the sidelines."

ELGIN'S THIRD assistant, Jack Teboda, has the unenviable job of informing Stephens of the plays as well as the mistakes.

Equipped with either a head phone at home or a walkie-talkie on the road, Teboda acts as the Maroons' liaison. He stays in constant communication with Stephens on the sidelines.

"We use this approach because of its importance," Teboda said. "We stress a certain game plan during the week and come every Friday night we see if its carried out.

"The walkie-talkie tells us if it is. And if they use a different plan than we scouted, we're ready to make adjustments."

TEBODA AND THE other coaches carefully scan a series of questions before and during the game. Are they in the particular defense they expected? Is the offensive alignment the same? Are there any changes in personnel? Have they done what they expected they would do?

"All the coaches have done a great job," Stephens said. "One is responsible to see if the backs are in the game while another watches the tackles. We all have to work together and so far we have.

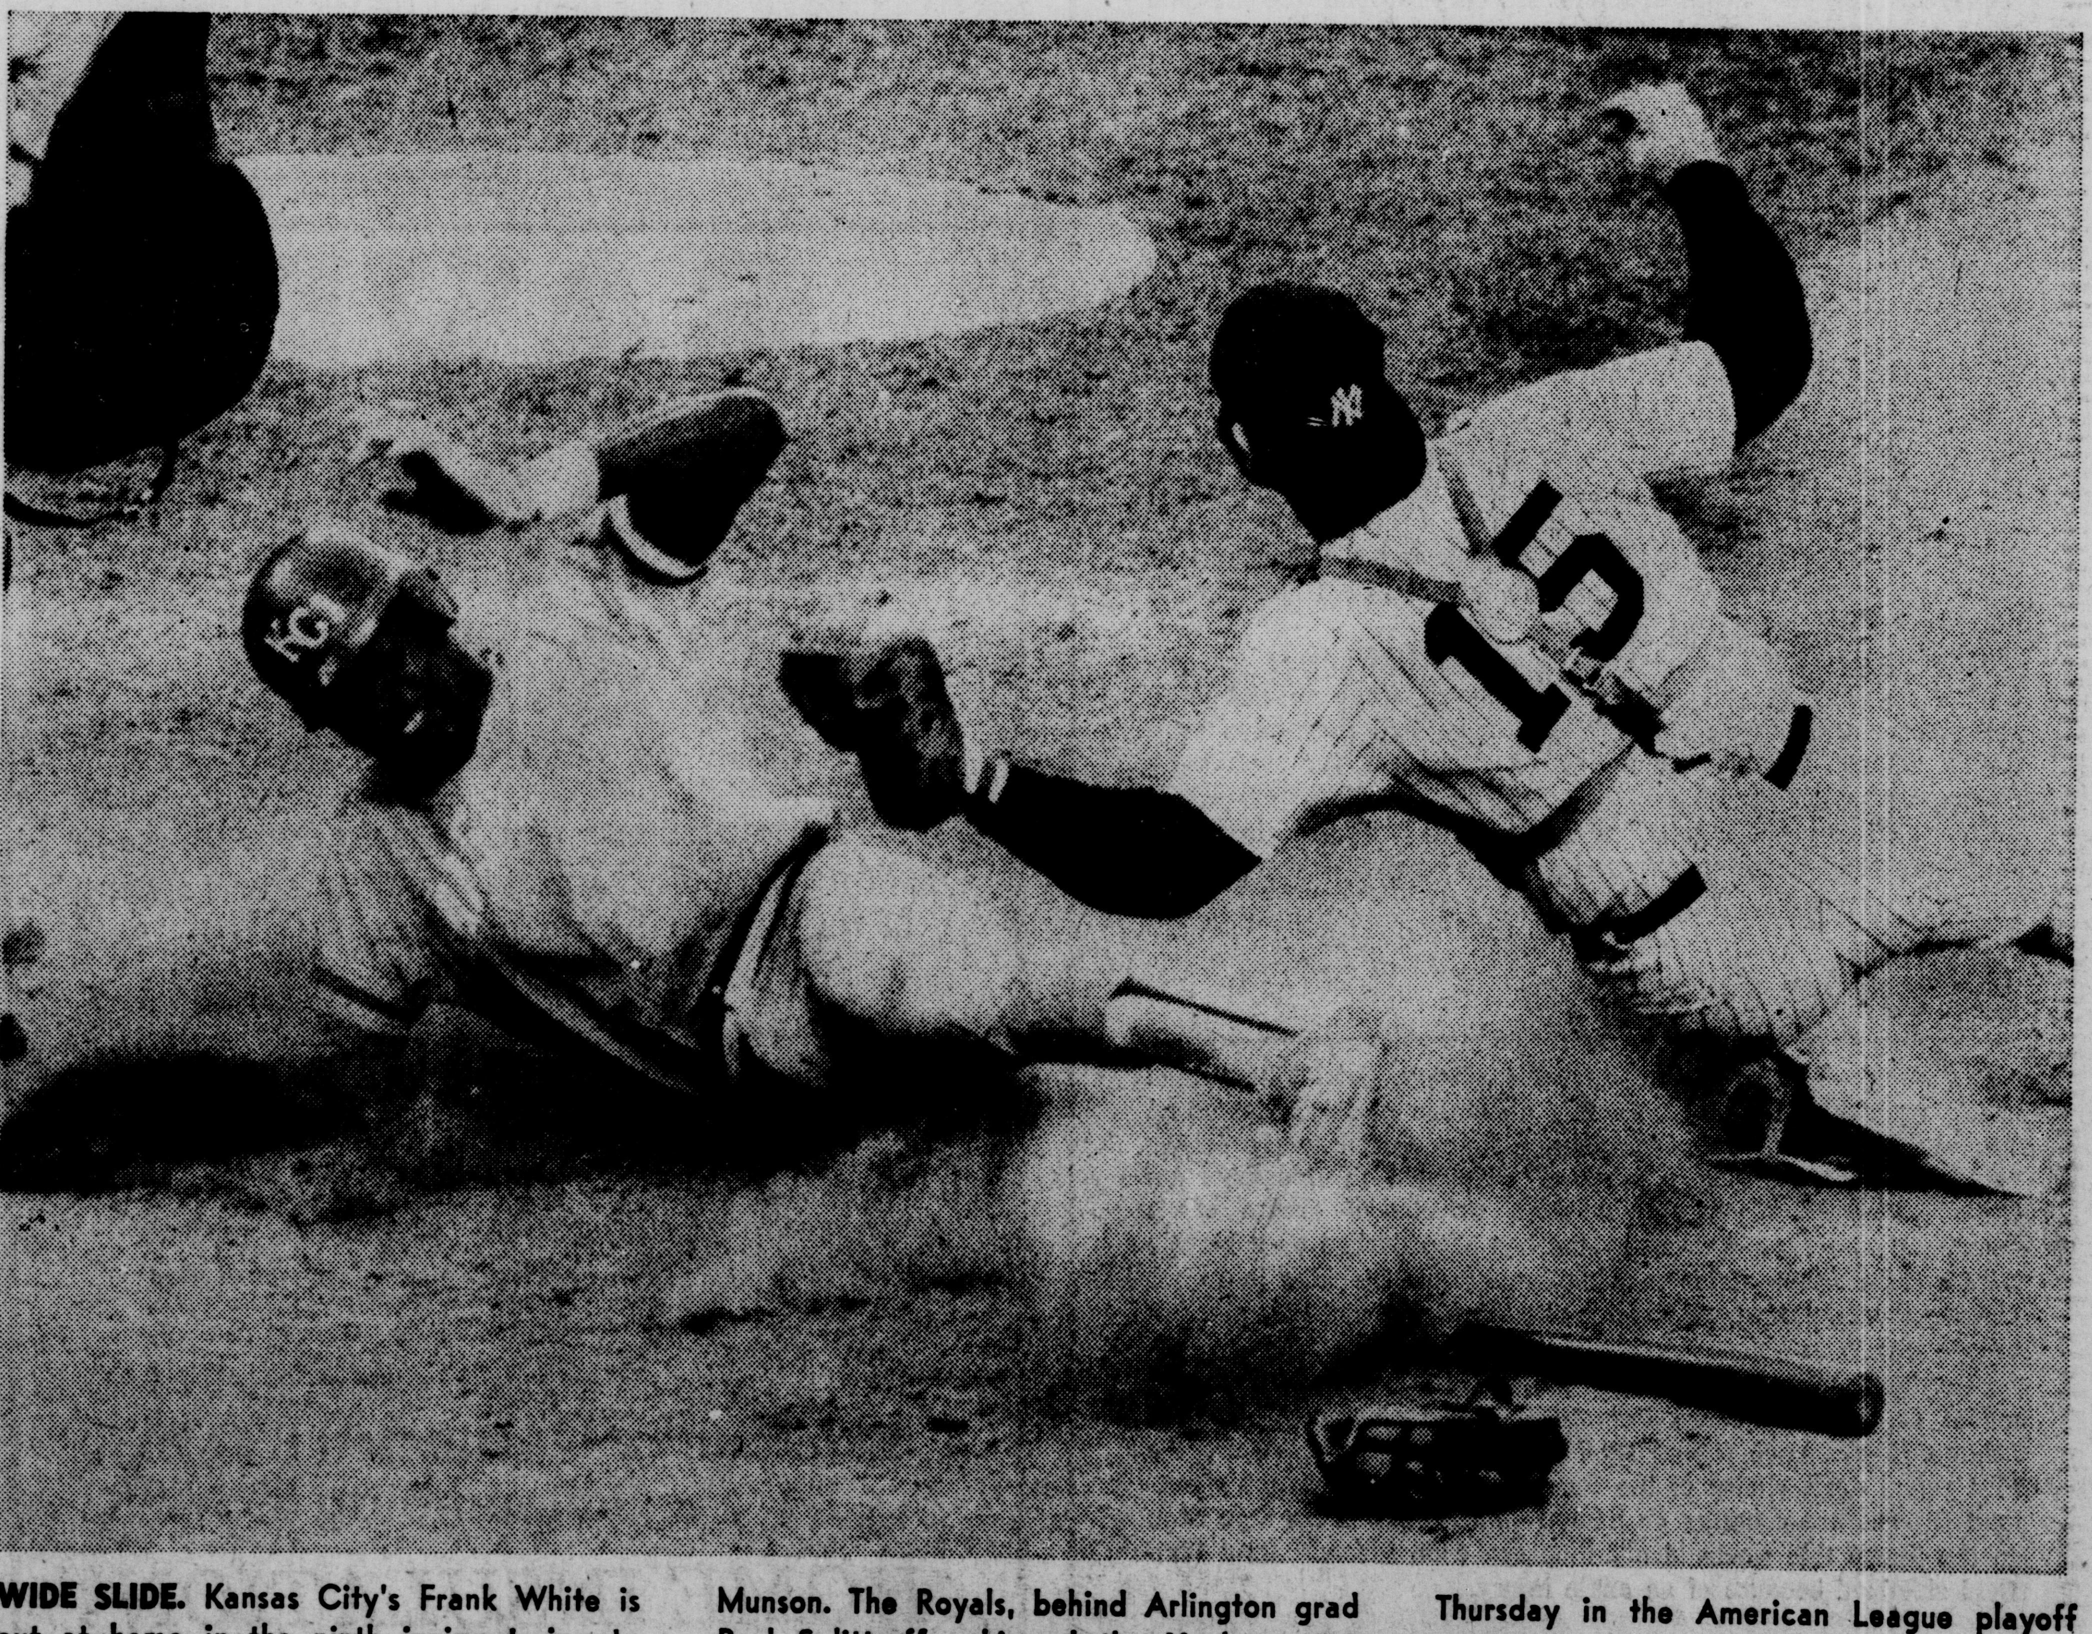
"And if one player isn't doing the job I want the coaches to tell me about it," Stepnens added.

"The guys upstairs can see if the quarterback is pivoting the right way. If not his timing is off and it will disrupt the play," Teboda explained. "And if a lieman misses a block because he wasn't doing his job I'm to tell Stephens."

"We know personally which player is doing the job and which one isn't," Donegan remarked. "And the players know that, too. If they don't perform like they're expected, Stephens won't hesitate to pull them out to tell them so.

"I think our performance has been better because of it," Donegan added. "And the longer we do it the more we'll see things and the better refined our system will become."

"We couldn't operate without it."



WIDE SLIDE. Kansas City's Frank White is out at home in the ninth inning trying to avoid the tag by New York Yankee Thurman Munson. The Royals, behind Arlington grad Paul Splittorff, whipped the Yankees, 7-2 Thursday in the American League playoff opener.

"All the coaches have done a great job," Stephens said. "One is responsible to see if the backs are in the game while another watches the tackles. We all have to work together and so far we have.

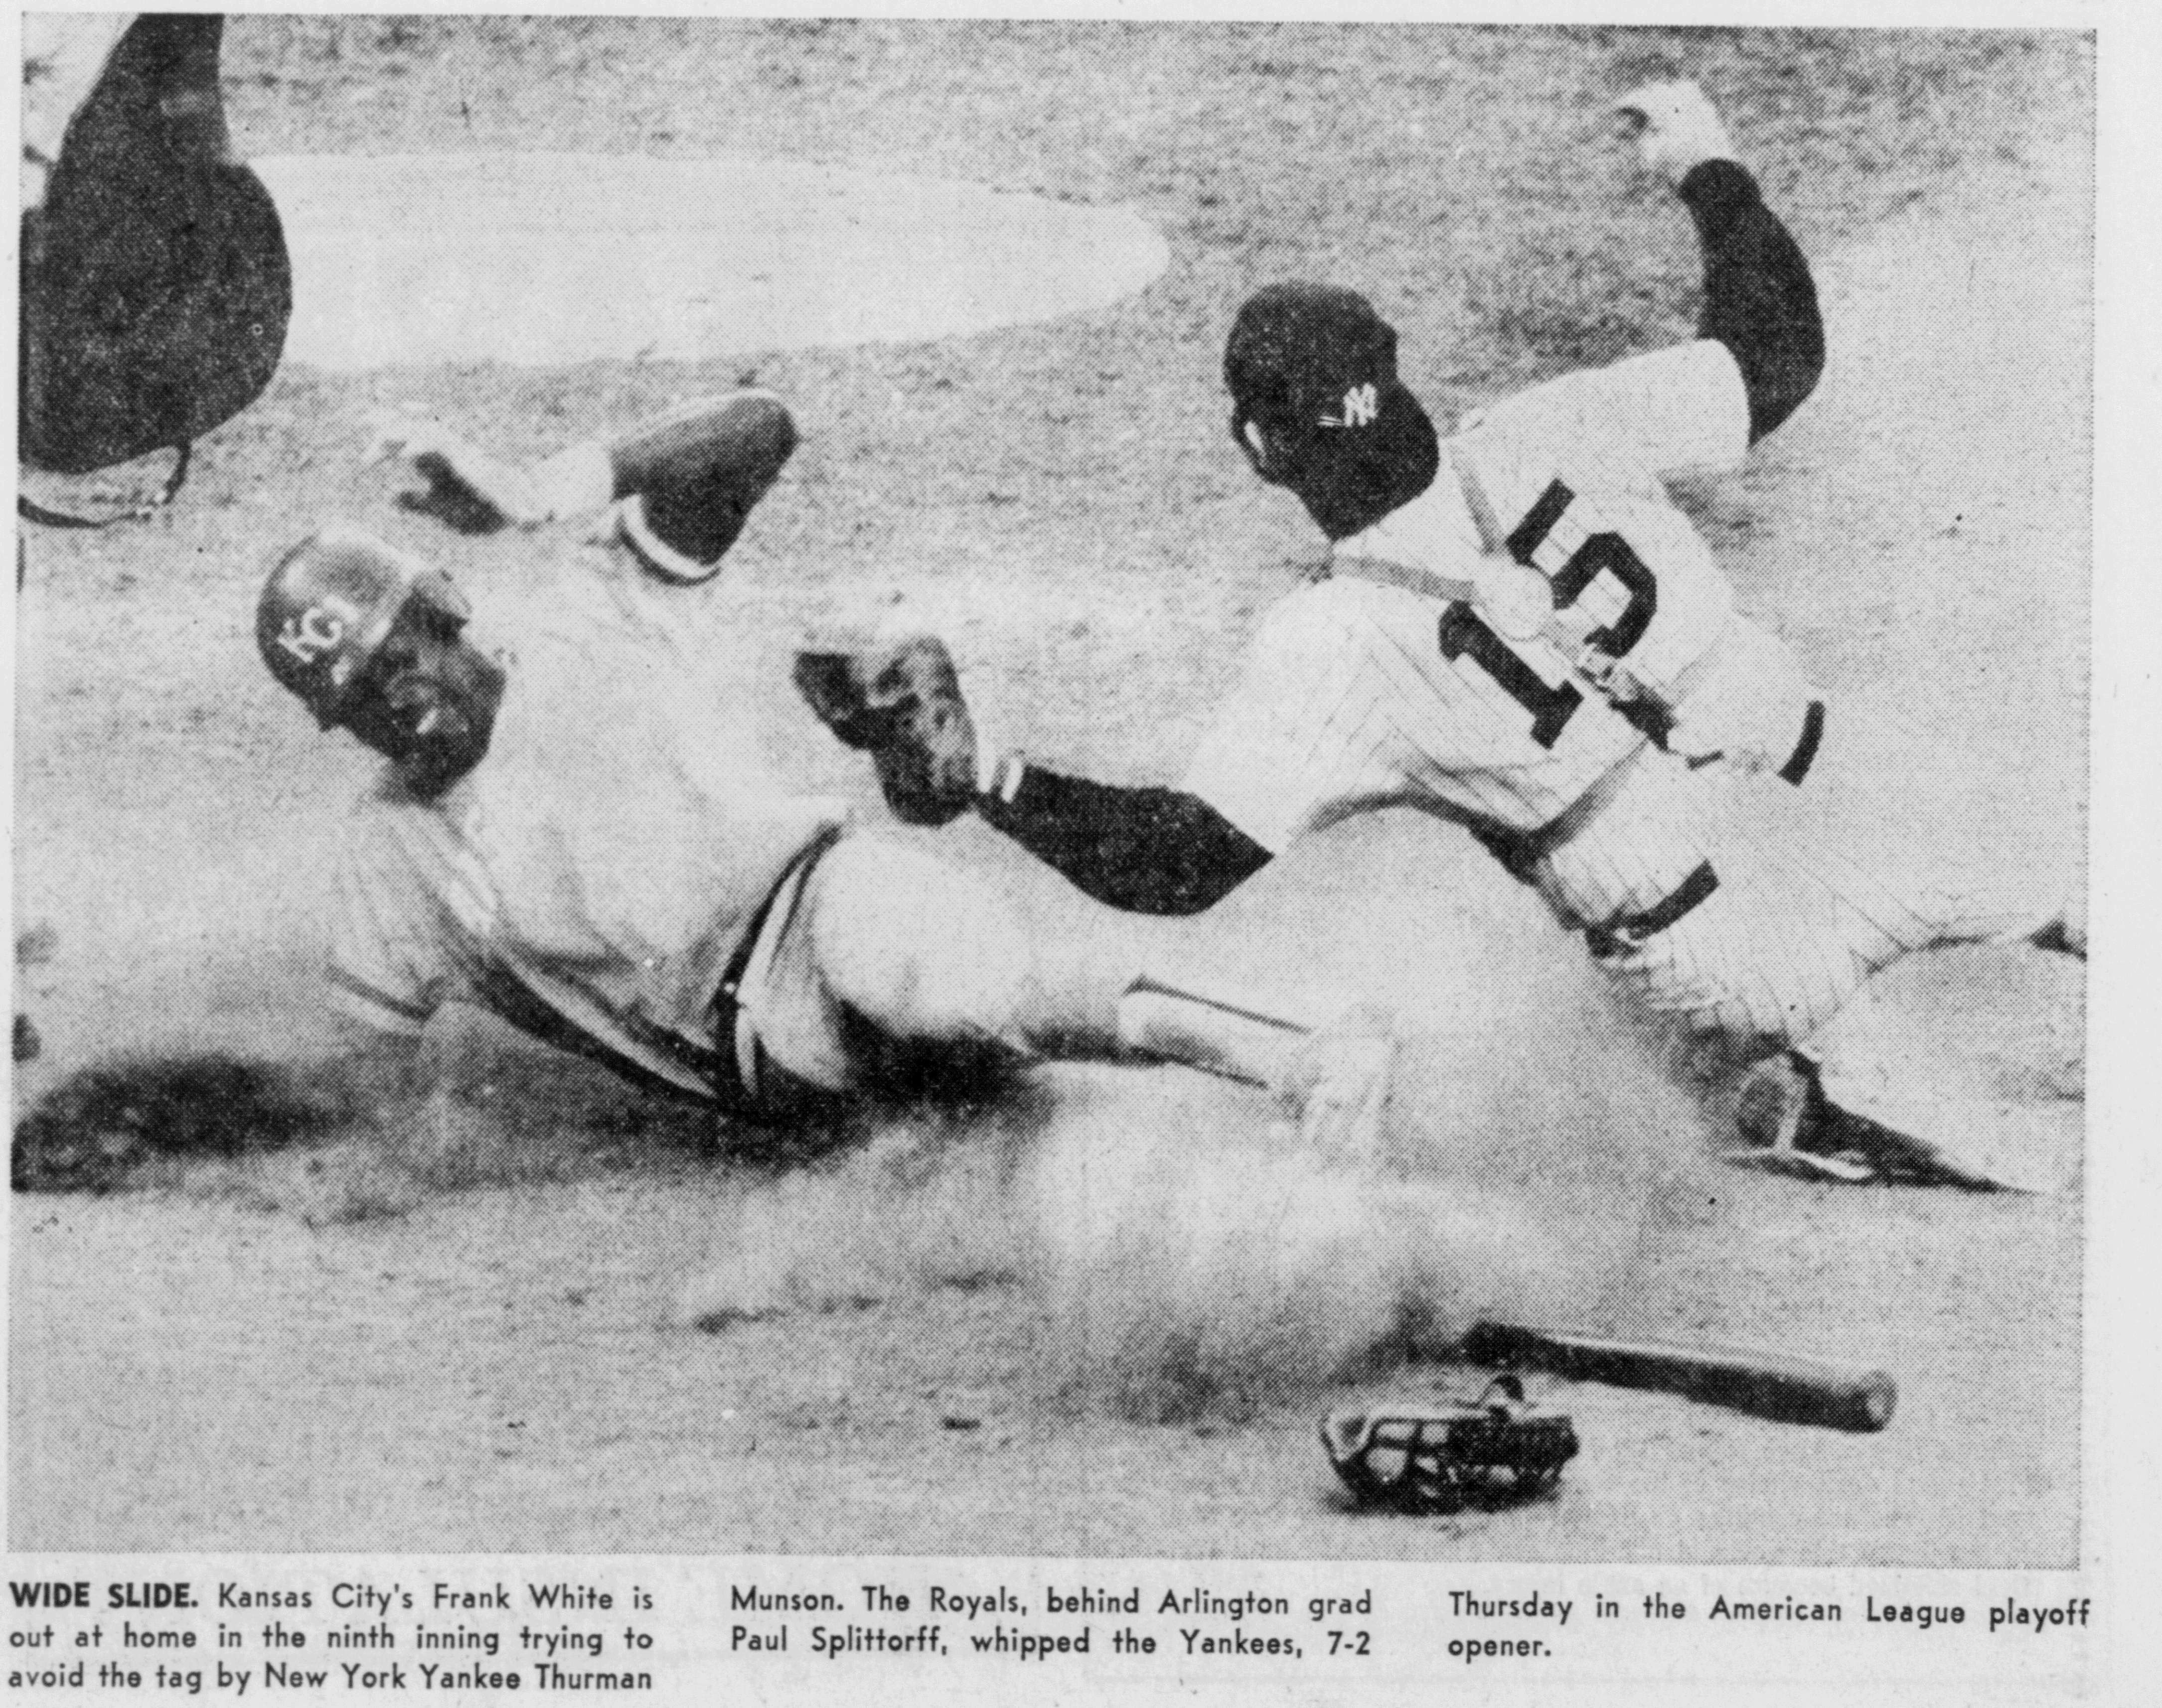
"And if one player isn't doing the job I want the coaches to tell me about it," Stepnens added.

"The guys upstairs can see if the quarterback is pivoting the right way. If not his timing is off and it will disrupt the play," Teboda explained. "And if a lieman misses a block because he wasn't doing his job I'm to tell Stephens."

"We know personally which player is doing the job and which one isn't," Donegan remarked. "And the players know that, too. If they don't perform like they're expected, Stephens won't hesitate to pull them out to tell them so.

"I think our performance has been better because of it," Donegan added. "And the longer we do it the more we'll see things and the better refined our system will become."

"We couldn't operate without it."



WIDE SLIDE. Kansas City's Frank White is out at home in the ninth inning trying to avoid the tag by New York Yankee Thurman Munson. The Royals, behind Arlington grad Paul Splittorff, whipped the Yankees, 7-2 Thursday in the American League playoff opener.

Sutter named to UPI N.L. all-star lineup

NEW YORK — Only four players pulled more votes than Bruce Sutter as the Chicago Cub relief pitcher joined with a trio of Philadelphia Phillies and three Cincinnati stalwarts heading up the 1977 United Press International all-star National League team.

Sutter collected 17 of a possible 25 votes among sportswriters around the country who participate in the annual post-season survey. The lone unanimous pick was Pittsburgh outfielder Dave Parker although Reds strongman George Foster scored 24 votes and a pair of Phillies — Greg Luzinski and hurler Steve Carlton — also outpolled the Cub fireman.

The only other Chicago players getting any attention at all were Rick Reuschel, a narrow third behind Tom Seaver for the second pitching berth, and Bill Buckner, who earned a lone vote for the first base slot.

The rest of the lineup in addition to outfielders Parker, Foster and Luzinski and hurlers Carlton and Seaver had Ted Simmons of St. Louis at catcher, Steve Garvey of L.A. at first, Joe Morgan of the Reds at second, Gary Templeton of the Cardinals at short and Phillie Mike Schmidt at third.

Watson, Irwin post Matchplay wins

VIRGINA WATER, England — Tom Watson, struggling to get his game together in gusty winds and driving rain, Wednesday edged Asian champion Hsieh Min Nam of Taiwan, 2 and 1, to win his 36-hole first-round match in the $225,000 World Matchplay championship.

Hale Irwin, bidding for his third win in four years, fired an eagle on the 33rd hole to come from behind and beat Britain's Peter Oosterhuis, 1-up, while Lanny Wadkins crushed British veteran Neil Coles, 5 and 4.

U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, so far out of touch with his putter that once he missed from one foot, lost 5 and 4 to former Matchplay champion Graham Marsh — the only U.S. player to fall in the first round.

Ray Floyd almost joined him after blowing a five-hole lead, but just held on to beat Mexico's Ernesto Acosta on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff.

Ron Geels tabbed MVC standout

TULSA, Okla. — Ron Geels, a 1976 walk-on from Schaumburg who was credited with nine sold tackles and two assists in Southern Illinois' 9-5 victory over Lamar Saturday, has been named the Missouri Valley Conference's defensive player of the week.

Geels, a 5-foot-11 monster man for the Salukis, is credited with three game-saving stops during the Lamar game, a classic defensive struggle.

"He was a walk-on who we didn't really know too much about last year," said Saluki defensive coordinator Jim Vechiarella. "But, he's proven himself to be an excellent defensive back. Our entire defense played extremely well against Lamar, but Ron turned in one of the best individual efforts we've had since we've been here."

Pearson annexes pole slot...again

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — David Pearson won his ninth consecutive pole position at the Charlotte Motor Speedway Wednesday and pocketed $10,000 for grabbing the top starting spot for Sunday's $250,000 National 500 stock car race.

Pearson put his Wood Brothers Mercury around the 1.5-mile track at an average speed of 160.892 miles per hour for two qualifying laps. And most of the drivers agreed that the speed would not be topped.

"They ought to quit paying this kind of (qualifying) money," said Pearson. "It makes me nervous."

Donnie Allison and Cale Yarborough, both driving Chevrolets, posted identical speeds of 159.848 mph, but NASCAR officials said since Allison made his attempt first he would start in the second position.

Umpires veto hearing appearances

Major league umpires said Wednesday they have voted not to attend future hearings on appeals by players of decisions made on the diamond and to let "all appeals rise or fall on the (written) reports to the office."

"The appeals always have been scheduled for the convenience of the players without regard to the inconvenience that it has cost the umpires," a statement read.

"The players have failed to show at the last minute and defaulted on said appeals; they have delayed same so that they could serve their suspensions at any time; and they have arbitrarily refused to agree to a hearing date even for such lame excuses as a golf date."

The "authority and dignity" of the umpires is "being allowed to disintegrate due to the appeal procedure," a resolution read.

Injury big 'if' in Bears defense

by BOB GALLAS

Ask Bears coach Jack Pardee about the Rams and he'll say they have an offensive line that has improved substantially in its first three games and that quarterback Joe Namath now has a team much like the New York Jets he piloted to the Super Bowl in 1969.

But ask Pardee about the defense he plans to throw at all that offense and he's not as talkative. Oh, Pardee knows how he'll try to stop the Rams. But who will do the stopping is still open for discussion.

Pardee Wednesday said he doesn't know if there will be any more Chicago lineup shuffles like there were last week, before the Bears' 42-24 loss to New Orleans. Part of the reason for Pardee's hesitancy is because of injuries.

"A LOT WILL depend on (Wally) Chambers and (Doug) Plank," Pardee said. The two mainstays of the Bears defense have not played in a regular season game so far this year because of injury, but may return for the Rams game. Both are listed as "questionable" starters for Monday, meaning there is a 50-50 chance they will play.

The return of the two could help bolster a sagging Chicago defense, but Pardee isn't counting on either. "Wally's working hard on conditioning, but I doubt if he would start even if he is ready Monday," Pardee said.

Pardee said he sees hard-hitting free safety Plank as a "key guy" on defense. "On the average, Doug forces eight or nine fumbles a year. He can be a catalyst," Pardee said.

If Plank can't play, Pardee said strong safety Craig Clemons, benched a week ago in favor of Terry Schmidt, would return to his starting role. Schmidt took over at free safety and Gary Fencik moved in to take over for Clemons at strong safety last Sunday but Schmidt had trouble tackling as did many of his counterparts and apparently will return to a backup role.

If Plank can play, Fencik who leads the team in tackles with 40, will stay at strong safety and Plank will roam at free safety.

THE BEARS STILL don't know whether Chambers will be able to run at right end on defense. Left end also is a question. Jerry Meyers, a second-year pro out of Northern Illinois University, moved in ahead of a slumping Mike Hartenstine last week as Pardee sought to motivate Hartenstine. Meyers still is listed as the starter there this week, for now anyway.

"I really haven't made any decisions yet," Pardee said. "I won't until we get out and practice and I see how the players are."

Another question mark is at linebacker where starter Don Rives played hurt against the Saints with a partially strained right knee ligament. Rives is a "probable" starter for Monday but so is his backup, Tom Hicks, who has an injured shoulder and has even less of a chance to see action than Rives.

After looking at Rams' game films Pardee said Los Angeles is a much better club than it was in the preseason and has improved tremendously in its first three regular season games. He attributes much of the improvement to the L.A. offensive line.

"They weren't playing well at all in the preseason. Namath's receivers were not getting open and Namath was getting sacked," Pardee said. "Because of the line, Namath had to throw too much."

BUT THIRD-YEAR tackle Doug France, an Ohio State product, returned three weeks earlier than expected after knee surgery to start the first regular season game, guard Dennis Harrah is making up for lost time after reporting late to camp and 12-year guard Tom Mack also is rounding into form after holding out in the preseason. Line play is starting to gel. After an initial loss to Atlanta, the Rams have looked impressive in successive wins over Philadelphia and San Francisco.

Part of the reason for the Rams' improvement is running back Lawrence McCutcheon, who has gained 238 yards in 62 carries to rank fourth among NFL rushers.

McCutcheon also is the Rams' second-leading pass receiver with eight catches for 59 yards. Their leading receiver, Ron Jessie, who caught nine for 139 yards in the first three games, is out for the season with a knee injury received last week.

Pardee said he sees the strong Rams running game as a plus for Namath.

"The great year the Jets had with Namath (when they went to the 1969 Super Bowl) came when they had a strong running game," Pardee said. "They had Emerson Boozer and Matt Snell and each had close to 1,000 yards."

The Bears returned to the practice field Wednesday after an extra day off and were greeted by team owner George Halas, who made a rare visit to Lake Forest to watch his team practice.

BEAR FACTS: Wally Chambers has been swimming 1,000 or more yards a day in an attempt to get in shape for Monday's game without damaging his knee. He'll be examined by doctors sometime this week and a determination will be made on his playing status. The Bears injury report lists Chambers as a "questionable" starter, as is Plank . . . Johnny Musso (ankle), Tom Hicks (shoulder), Roland Harper (jaw), Roger Stillwell (shoulder), Don Rives (knee) and Ted Albrecht (knee) are listed as "probable" starters, which means they have a 75 per cent chance of playing.

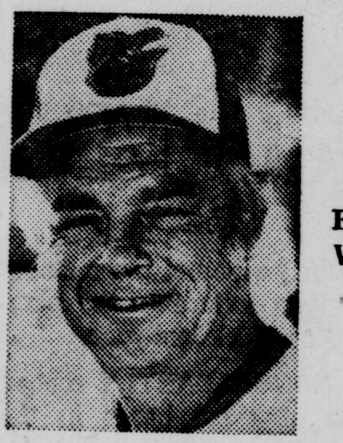
Weaver voted Manager of the Year

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Baltimore Orioles' manager Earl Weaver, who kept an unheralded, rookie-laden team in the American League East pennant race until the waning days of the regular season, was named "Manager of the Year," the Sporting News announced Wednesday



Earl Weaver

Weaver, who was selected by a vote of major league managers, said, "Anytime you get an honor like this it has to be pleasing. It would make anybody happy, particularly since it comes from the other managers."

The Orioles finished in a tie with the Boston Red Sox, 2½ games behind the New York Yankees. Most sports experts had predicted they would be a distant third after losing three star players to the free agent draft last year.

"But, I can't help but think the reason I'm getting this honor is because other people didn't think the Orioles would be as good as we felt they would be," he said. "We had some people nobody knew about, but that didn't mean they couldn't play."

Although the 47-year-old Weaver's Orioles have won five division titles, three American League pennants and a World Series, he had never won the prestigious managing award.

But this year Weaver took a team with 10 players who had less than two years experience in the majors, including seven rookies, and kept them in the thick of the battle for the division title until the last days of the season.

"We felt we were still good enough to be a legitimate contender — and the players went out and proved us right," he said. "They deserve the credit, because they went out on the field and did it."

Weaver, who last week signed a contract to manage the Orioles for three more years, led the team to a 97-64 record. It was the eighth time in his 10 years with the club that the Birds won 90 or more games.

Since 1959, Weaver's teams in the major and minor leagues have finished first or second 17 out of 19 times.

Weaver ranks third on the all-time list of major league managers in won-loss percentages at .596 with 909 wins and 515 losses.

Women's records near men's in track, swimming

by ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — When it comes to world record speeds, women should be able to run or swim about as fast as men and the reason they haven't done so yet in most cases is as much social as biological.

Twenty years ago the fastest woman in the world was 11.88 per cent slower than the fastest man in the 100 meters. By the end of 1976 this margin had been reduced to 9.62 per cent and seems ready to go even lower, according to an article in New Scientist by Dr. Ken Dyer, a social biologist of the University of Adelaide.

In the 200 meters in swimming, women were 11.19 per cent slower in 1958 and cut this down to 7.52 per cent by 1976, Dyer said on the basis of an intensive study of men's and women's world records and best performances on the track and in the pool during the past 50 years.

"WOMEN MAY one day run and swim as fast as men," he said. "Although such a prediction would have been thought remarkably silly a few years ago the systematic improvement in women's performances today are forcing scientists to take it seriously.

"These improvements are providing important new information on human physiology, on male-female biological differences and on the way that social and political factors profoundly influence what is apparently a purely biological phenomenon."

Dyer said women first ran the 3000 meters in 1972 because it was previously thought they were incapable of long distance events without distress, one of the "social preconceptions" that women athletes now are shattering.

"Although the decisions to ban women from competing at certain distances were allegedly biological, they were in fact based on no evidence at all," Dyer said.

"AT EACH OF these (longer) distances the women's world record now is progressively approaching the men's and women now are successfully running 5,000 meters and 10,000 meters and marathons."

The unofficial women's marathon mark (26 miles, 385 yards) is 2 hours, 35 minutes, 15 seconds, good enough to have won all the Olympic Games through 1924 and the bronze medal in 1948.

Dyer said the sexes were closer competitively in swimming and already equal in one event, swimming the English Channel, where the record in both directions is held by women. He said it would take a very strong men's team to beat the East German women.

"Statistical predictions give way to the reality that in some respects competitive equivalence has almost arrived," he said.

20 from area to compete in racquetball tournament

Nearly 20 Chicago suburbanites have been invited to compete in the Paul Masson/Court House Midwest Invitational racquetball tournament, Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Court House, Schaumburg.

Heading the list of players are Highland Park's Glenn Withrow, Illinois state singles champion, and Scott Hemphill, teaching pro at The Court House, Skokie, who was runner-up to Withrow in the state tourney held in February.

Other top-ranked Chicago area players participating in the select 32-man Open division are Bob Duester, Des Plaines; Rick Dern, Hoffman Estates; Steve Sulli, Elmhurst; Jim Scheyer, Glencoe; and Bob Van Tuyle, Alsip.

Tom Kutus of Hammond, the reigning Virginia state and Eastern regional singles champion, and past Indiana state champion, also has accepted an invitation to play.

In the Seniors (over 35) bracket, Tom Street and Alan Schetzer, Schaumburg, head the list. Others include Shelly Clar and Paul Franks, Northbrook; and Paul Nigro, Park Ridge.

Among the 16 women invited to compete are Bev Franks, Northbrook, reigning Illinois state women's singles and doubles champion; Gail Klein, Deerfield, runner-up to Ms. Franks in the state singles competition; and Hope Weisbach, also of Northbrook.

The Franks, Paul and Bev, recently captured first place honors on the same weekend in the city wide men's senior tournament at Mid-Town Court House, and in the Wyler's Women's Open at the Northbrook Court House.

Rounding out the field will be state champions from Indiana, Michigan, Kansas, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Ohio plus top-rated players from Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Green Bay, Omaha, Indianapolis, as well as from several downstate Illinois communities.

The event will be sponsored by Paul Masson, producer of California wines. The Illinois State Racquetball Association, headquartered in Schaumburg, is the sanctioning body.

Net proceeds from the tournament will be given to Ronald McDonald House, an overnight lodging facility for parents whose children are undergoing treatment at Children's Memorial Hospital.

Women's records near men's in track, swimming

by ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — When it comes to world record speeds, women should be able to run or swim about as fast as men and the reason they haven't done so yet in most cases is as much social as biological.

Twenty years ago the fastest woman in the world was 11.88 per cent slower than the fastest man in the 100 meters. By the end of 1976 this margin had been reduced to 9.62 per cent and seems ready to go even lower, according to an article in New Scientist by Dr. Ken Dyer, a social biologist of the University of Adelaide.

In the 200 meters in swimming, women were 11.19 per cent slower in 1958 and cut this down to 7.52 per cent by 1976, Dyer said on the basis of an intensive study of men's and women's world records and best performances on the track and in the pool during the past 50 years.

"WOMEN MAY one day run and swim as fast as men," he said. "Although such a prediction would have been thought remarkably silly a few years ago the systematic improvement in women's performances today are forcing scientists to take it seriously.

"These improvements are providing important new information on human physiology, on male-female biological differences and on the way that social and political factors profoundly influence what is apparently a purely biological phenomenon."

Dyer said women first ran the 3000 meters in 1972 because it was previously thought they were incapable of long distance events without distress, one of the "social preconceptions" that women athletes now are shattering.

"Although the decisions to ban women from competing at certain distances were allegedly biological, they were in fact based on no evidence at all," Dyer said.

"AT EACH OF these (longer) distances the women's world record now is progressively approaching the men's and women now are successfully running 5,000 meters and 10,000 meters and marathons."

The unofficial women's marathon mark (26 miles, 385 yards) is 2 hours, 35 minutes, 15 seconds, good enough to have won all the Olympic Games through 1924 and the bronze medal in 1948.

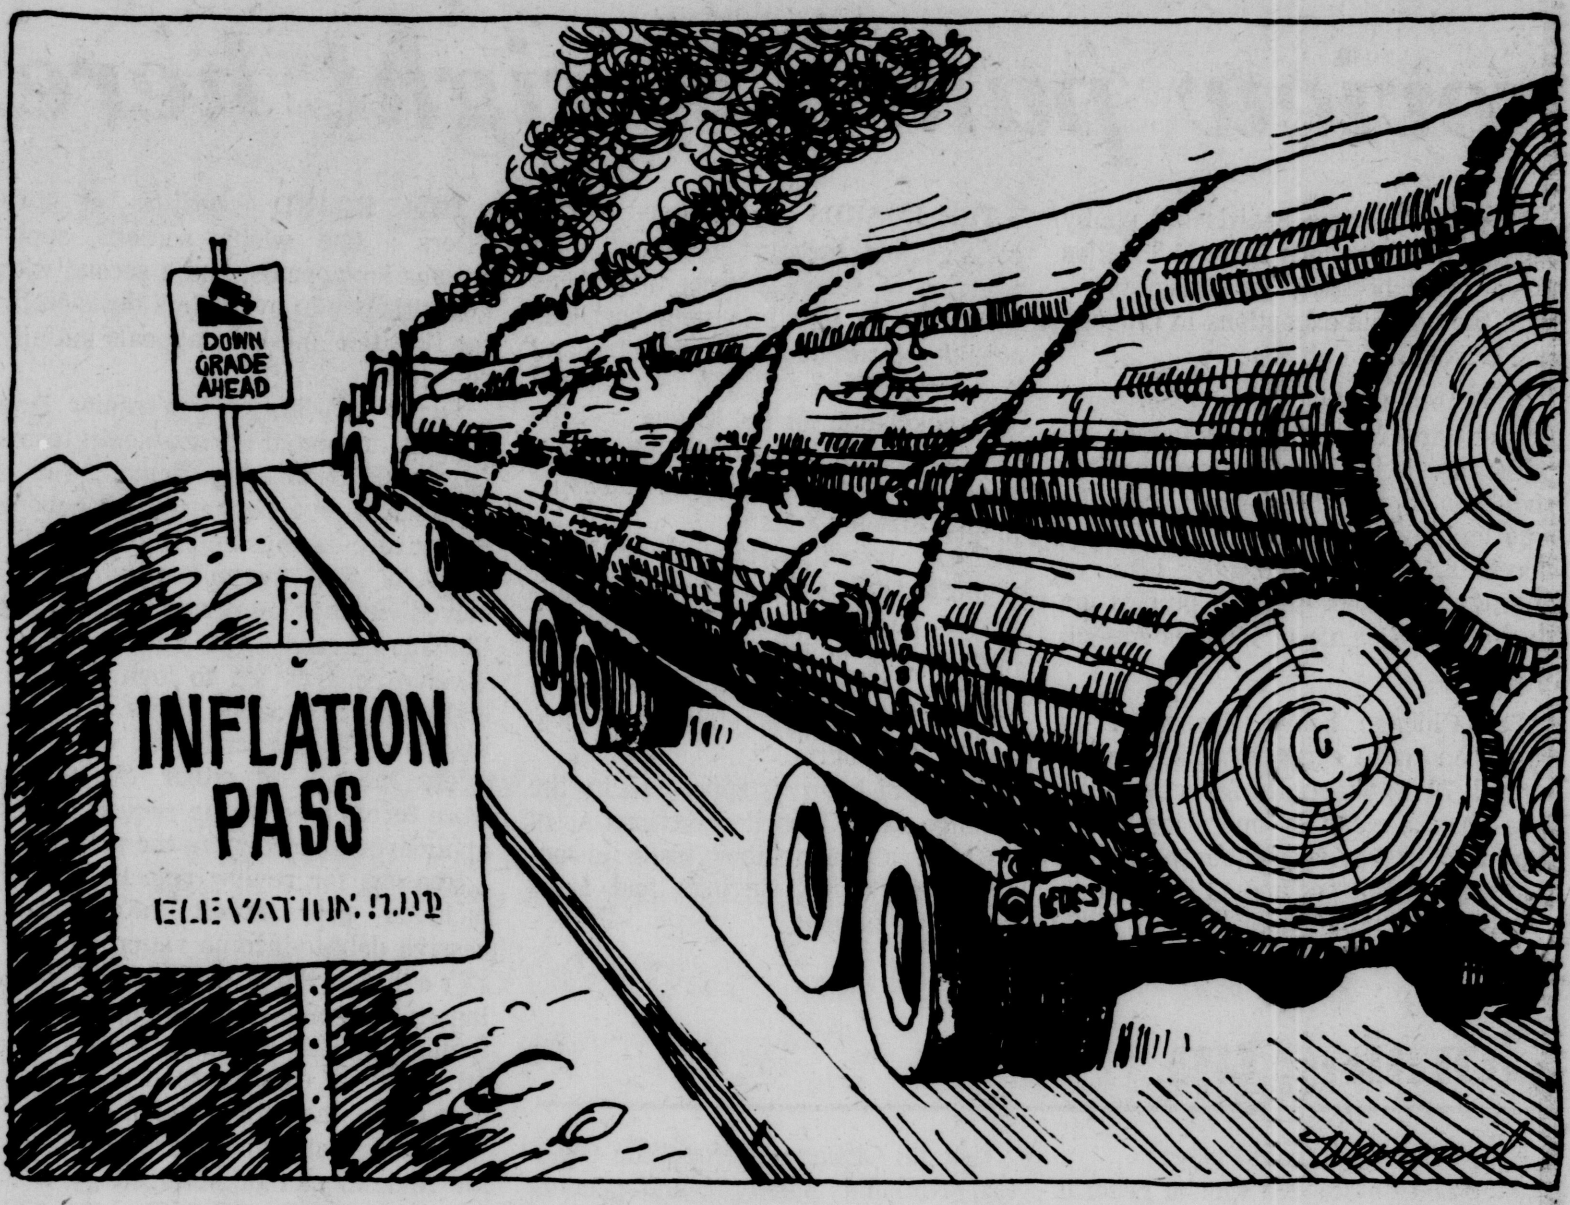
Lumber prices like a yo-yo: full of ups and downs

'Lumber and plywood both are old-fashioned commodities markets, and a lot of what happens has become a real supply-and-demand condition ...'



by DAVE IBATA

The buzzsaws roared, the salesman dickered and the homebuilders howled in outrage as costs for lumber soared spectacularly this summer.

But the building boom of 1977 has passed its zenith, and autumn has brought a plunge of up to 23 per cent in lumber prices.

"Prices reached a peak the week before Labor Day," said Bill Dean, editor of Random Lengths, a weekly newsletter that monitors the lumber industry.

HOWEVER, DEAN said demand for construction-grade lumber began falling off by the end of August — and when the demand declined, prices followed suit.

Prices fell between 13 and 23 per cent, and shipments dropped by 15 to 18 per cent, Dean said.

"Of course, psychologically, we've reached the point we think the market is never going to do anything but go down," said the editor of the Eugene, Ore.-based newsletter.

But at the same time lumber prices crested, homebuilders — especially the National Assn. of Home Builders — bellowed so loud the Council on Wage and Price Stability in Washington, D.C., began an investigation into the cause of price increases.

HOMEBUILDERS said, "Hey, this is clean out of reason," Dean said.

"Which I think there was no question it was," Dean said.

Whatever the findings of the council, they will come belatedly; already prices have fallen to the level they passed in mid-July, and are still plummeting, Dean said.

On the average, raw lumber constitutes 20 to 25 per cent of the materials cost of a house, so the news of the price decline ought to please homebuilders.

LUMBER PRICES shot up 20 per cent in August, 40 per cent over August 1976 prices and 90 per cent over August 1975 prices — none of which benefited the housing industry, which has seen prices for single-family homes rise an average of 10 to 15 per cent annually nationwide.

William Kennedy, president of the National Home Builders Assn. of Greater Chicago, said, "Costs of lumber have gone up between 50 and 70 per cent of what it was a year ago for raw studs, joists, plywood and plates."

The reason? "You pay what the market will bear, I guess," Kennedy said. "I can only speculate it's greater gross profits."

HERB TISON, president of Tri-Co Builders Supply Co. in Naperville, gave his observations before news of the lumber price drops became known. "Prices are going crazy," he said.

"In our particular area, we've signed contracts with customers over a period of time — usually three months. And if prices increase, and we haven't anticipated them, that increase we have to absorb," Tison said.

"It's kind of a traumatic thing this year," he said. "I do know I am involved in contracts now in which I am selling products for substantially less than what it's costing me to replace them."

Tri-Co in part protected itself by anticipating the lumber price hikes in April and applying this forecast in contract negotiations, Tison said.

"WE KNOW WHEN demand for lumber increases, the prices do likewise," he said. "I don't think we had any idea it would rise to this degree."

For example, Tison said, between May 1 and Aug. 30 prices for stressed lumber rose up to $100 per 1,000-foot board, a 35 per cent increase.

"When the demand is there, it's whatever the traffic will bear," Tison said.

Dean, the newsletter editor, attributed the price increases largely to the psychology of the lumber commodities market.

"Lumber in particular, but lumber and plywood both, are just plain, old-fashioned commodities markets, and a lot of what happens in a pricing situation has become a real supply-and-demand condition, and a lot of what happens is just simply psychological," Dean said.

"THE TRADERS DO psych themselves into positions their good judgment would not at other times support," Dean said.

Suppliers contend the price increases were caused by a shortage of lumber earlier this summer.

Dean, in part agreed — but the shortage at the builder's end of the industry was due not to a lack of wood, but a lack of foresight by suppliers, he said.

In the lumber industry, a manufacturer sells his product to wholesalers, who resell the lumber to retailers who in turn sell to contractors, and individual consumers, Dean said.

BUT IN THE SPRING, wholesalers and retailers allowed their inventories of lumber to run low, and by June 1, a shortage hit the building industry, Dean said.

"That's really why prices went up so high in July and August," Dean said.

Ironically, 1977 will be one of the lumber industry's most productive years. Dean said about 30 billion board feet of softwood lumber will be shipped this year from plants in the United States and Canada.

Most volatile in terms of price increases were Western spruce pine and fir stud and 2-by-4 and 2-by-10 lengths; and 2-by-10 hemlocks and true firs, Dean said.

Homebuilders took a sour view of the price increases and on Aug. 26 Patricia Roberts Harris, secretary of the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, called on the wage and price council to investigate.

Mrs. Harris directed HUD's Task Force on Housing Costs to begin its own inquiry into lumber costs. She also said she will look into continued shortages of insulation and other homebuilding materials. The price of insulation rose between 5 and 15 per cent this summer, Mrs. Harris said.

But the bubble of inflated lumber prices burst in September.

DONALD SCHRAMM, Midwest regional manager for Georgia-Pacific, said prices at his firm dropped by 20 per cent in September.

"Lumber prices are a function of supply and demand, and as housing demand decreases, which it normally does this time of year, prices tend to do the same thing," Schramm said.

Prices usually fluctuate 10 to 20 per cent between highs and lows in a year, though this year the variation likely will reach 30 per cent, Schramm said.

Dean said during the past 20 years, the homebuilding industry has experienced six to seven "booms," and in every bullish year lumber prices skyrocketed, builders screamed and the government investigated.

If HUD and the wage and price council do their homework, Dean said, they will reach the same conclusion as their predecessors:

"It's just a natural, somewhat textbook case of the commodities market behaving the way it's supposed to," Dean said.

Zoning laws: a necessary evil that went haywire?

by LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A number of people in the building and land development industries are saying zoning laws have been grossly overdone in the United States.

And they were winning some support from academic circles.

A team headed by George Sternlieb of Rutgers University in New Jersey last spring completed a study of the causes of the spectacular rise in the cost of home owning. Sternlieb's team concluded that injudicious zoning often makes it impossible for builders even to contemplate moderately priced housing.

THE REPORT SAID many of the costs imposed by subdivision controls are totally unnecessary and so, of course, are many costs imposed by building materials and construction codes. Between them, zoning excesses and unnecessary code restrictions account for at least 16 per cent of the cost of a $50,000 house, the team found.

Martin Swartzman, head of Glenwood Management Corp. of New York, a large builder and operator of highrise luxury apartment buildings, said zoning has been much overdone in New York. He said a lot of the zoning, in effect, is totally unnecessary and causes too much expense.

Although there has been a lot of building in the city since the city's current zoning code was adopted in 1960, he called it much too cumbersome and said it may contribute to urban decay by leaving builders and developers mystified and frustrated.

New York City has large areas, particularly in the Bronx and Brooklyn, that have been devastated by social change.

HUNDREDS OF BLOCKS of tenements and lower-middle-class apartment buildings, factories and stores have been razed to save taxes. Some of the lands have been abandoned.

Redevelopment of this property depends on many things but severe zoning restrictions can make redevelopment more difficult.

Swartzman said one trouble is that zoning seems to follow Parkinson's Law — that is, regulations expand to use up all the time and money the bureaucrats have available.

Swartzman conceded that zoning is necessary in most cities and towns.

BUT SOME OF THE more savage attacks on zoning excesses have come from land developers in Colorado who fear that zoning and environmental concerns might wreck their booming business.

An editorial in the Grand Junction Daily Sentinel in June said one of the best-kept secrets in the United States is the fact that the booming metropolis of Houston never has had any zoning laws of any kind.

"Surprisingly, that city is thriving to a point that must agonize the controlled growth advocates," the editorial said.

Houston, indeed, never has had any zoning law.

The main reason, Jack Wells of the Real Estate Board of Houston told UPI, probably is "Texans just don't like anybody telling them what they can do on their own land."

"ADMITTEDLY HOUSTON is a weird and wild place," the Colorado newspaper's editorial said. "Residences, artsy shops, homes turned into restaurants, hamburger stands, gas stations, townhouses, duplexes and jumping night spots all stand cheek by jowl . . . but that's the way Houston likes it. When the free market decides a declining older neighborhood is ready for investment and revival, there are no regulations and rules to block the way; the money can flow and the city can be recycled."

The editorial then said, and Wells concurred, that Houston officials believed zoning would artifically inflate housing costs, encourage dull monotonous housing, encourage urban sprawl with resulting energy waste and, above all, bring unnecessary bureaucratic regulation, spread politics and graft and aggravate prejudice against the poor and minorities.

Finally, the editorial said, zoning too often "represents middle class planners' ideas of the good society and ignores poor and blue collar people's needs."

STERNLIEB SAID that although zoning was originally conceived merely as a way to separate incompatible uses of land,it now often is used to control the character of a community.

"While the most blatant of exclusionary zoning practices have come under courtroom assault, many less obvious techniques are employed by a local government to maintain the character of the community. These policies can lead to the unavailability of moderately priced housing."

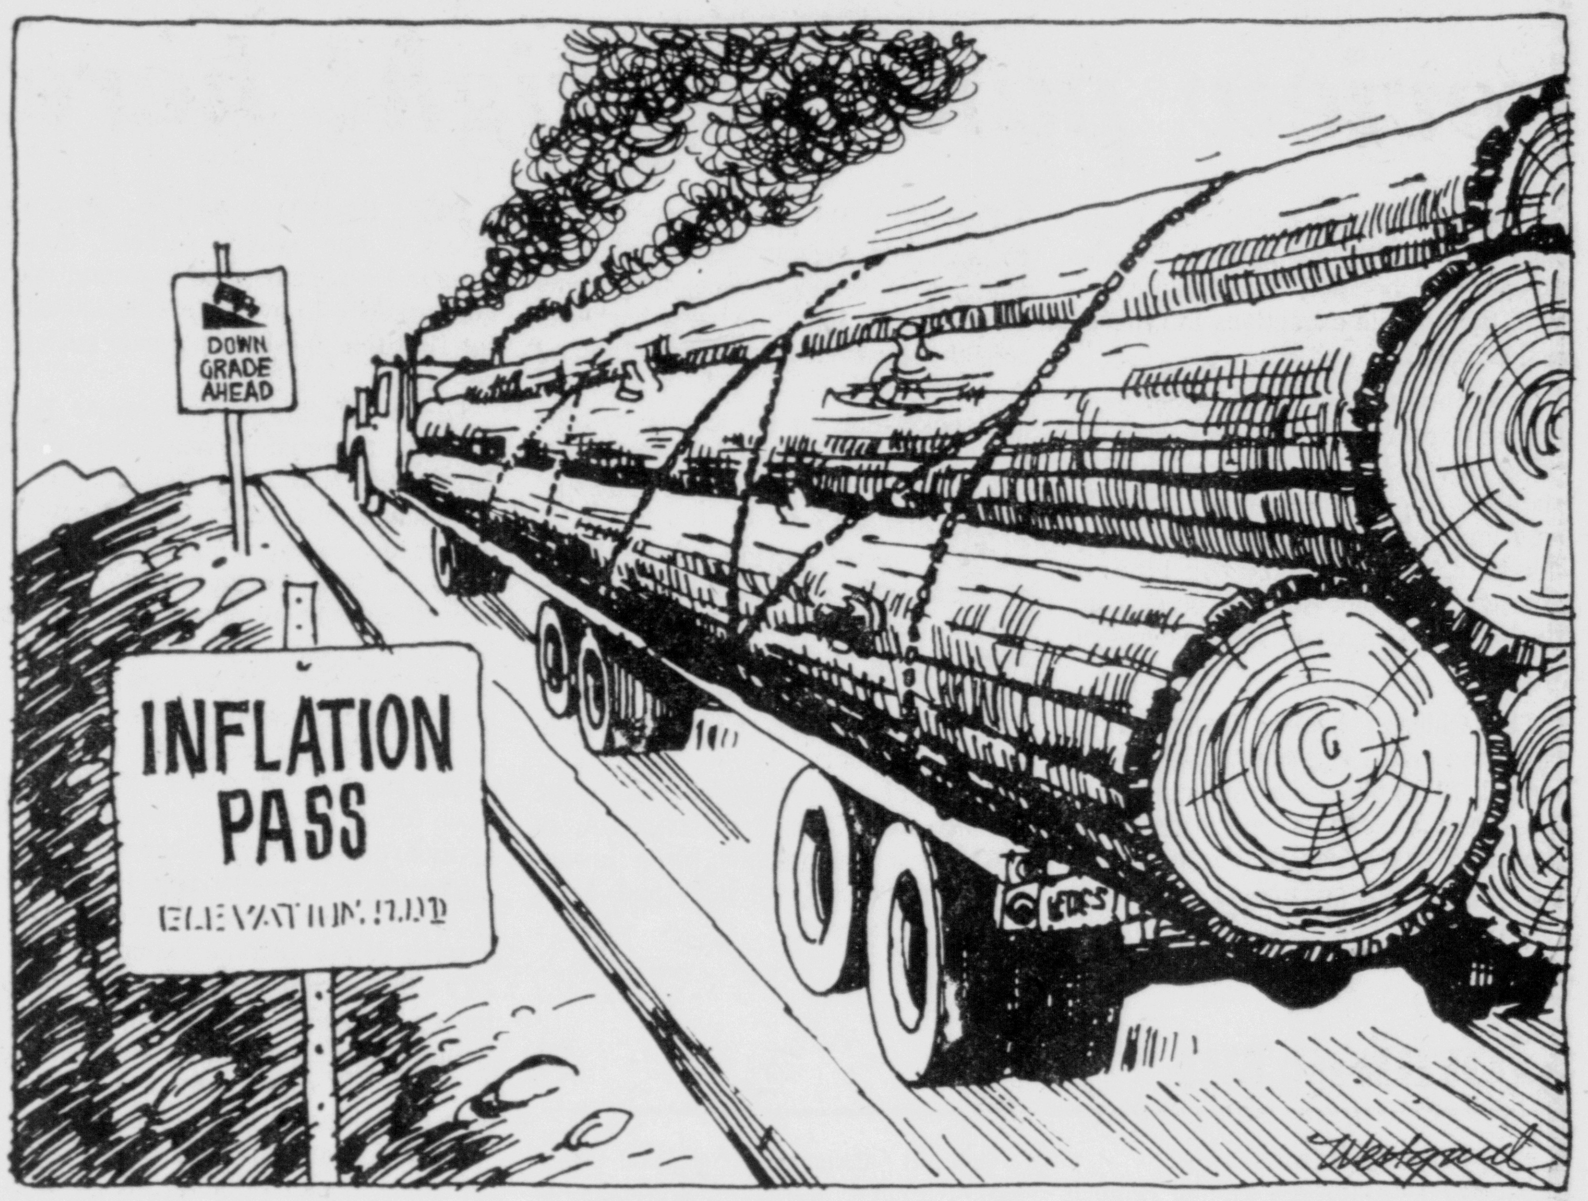
Lumber prices like a yo-yo: full of ups and downs

'Lumber and plywood both are old-fashioned commodities markets, and a lot of what happens has become a real supply-and-demand condition ...'



by DAVE IBATA

The buzzsaws roared, the salesman dickered and the homebuilders howled in outrage as costs for lumber soared spectacularly this summer.

But the building boom of 1977 has passed its zenith, and autumn has brought a plunge of up to 23 per cent in lumber prices.

"Prices reached a peak the week before Labor Day," said Bill Dean, editor of Random Lengths, a weekly newsletter that monitors the lumber industry.

HOWEVER, DEAN said demand for construction-grade lumber began falling off by the end of August — and when the demand declined, prices followed suit.

Prices fell between 13 and 23 per cent, and shipments dropped by 15 to 18 per cent, Dean said.

"Of course, psychologically, we've reached the point we think the market is never going to do anything but go down," said the editor of the Eugene, Ore.-based newsletter.

But at the same time lumber prices crested, homebuilders — especially the National Assn. of Home Builders — bellowed so loud the Council on Wage and Price Stability in Washington, D.C., began an investigation into the cause of price increases.

HOMEBUILDERS said, "Hey, this is clean out of reason," Dean said.

"Which I think there was no question it was," Dean said.

Whatever the findings of the council, they will come belatedly; already prices have fallen to the level they passed in mid-July, and are still plummeting, Dean said.

On the average, raw lumber constitutes 20 to 25 per cent of the materials cost of a house, so the news of the price decline ought to please homebuilders.

LUMBER PRICES shot up 20 per cent in August, 40 per cent over August 1976 prices and 90 per cent over August 1975 prices — none of which benefited the housing industry, which has seen prices for single-family homes rise an average of 10 to 15 per cent annually nationwide.

William Kennedy, president of the National Home Builders Assn. of Greater Chicago, said, "Costs of lumber have gone up between 50 and 70 per cent of what it was a year ago for raw studs, joists, plywood and plates."

The reason? "You pay what the market will bear, I guess," Kennedy said. "I can only speculate it's greater gross profits."

HERB TISON, president of Tri-Co Builders Supply Co. in Naperville, gave his observations before news of the lumber price drops became known. "Prices are going crazy," he said.

"In our particular area, we've signed contracts with customers over a period of time — usually three months. And if prices increase, and we haven't anticipated them, that increase we have to absorb," Tison said.

"It's kind of a traumatic thing this year," he said. "I do know I am involved in contracts now in which I am selling products for substantially less than what it's costing me to replace them."

Tri-Co in part protected itself by anticipating the lumber price hikes in April and applying this forecast in contract negotiations, Tison said.

"WE KNOW WHEN demand for lumber increases, the prices do likewise," he said. "I don't think we had any idea it would rise to this degree."

For example, Tison said, between May 1 and Aug. 30 prices for stressed lumber rose up to $100 per 1,000-foot board, a 35 per cent increase.

"When the demand is there, it's whatever the traffic will bear," Tison said.

Dean, the newsletter editor, attributed the price increases largely to the psychology of the lumber commodities market.

"Lumber in particular, but lumber and plywood both, are just plain, old-fashioned commodities markets, and a lot of what happens in a pricing situation has become a real supply-and-demand condition, and a lot of what happens is just simply psychological," Dean said.

"THE TRADERS DO psych themselves into positions their good judgment would not at other times support," Dean said.

Suppliers contend the price increases were caused by a shortage of lumber earlier this summer.

Dean, in part agreed — but the shortage at the builder's end of the industry was due not to a lack of wood, but a lack of foresight by suppliers, he said.

In the lumber industry, a manufacturer sells his product to wholesalers, who resell the lumber to retailers who in turn sell to contractors, and individual consumers, Dean said.

BUT IN THE SPRING, wholesalers and retailers allowed their inventories of lumber to run low, and by June 1, a shortage hit the building industry, Dean said.

"That's really why prices went up so high in July and August," Dean said.

Ironically, 1977 will be one of the lumber industry's most productive years. Dean said about 30 billion board feet of softwood lumber will be shipped this year from plants in the United States and Canada.

Most volatile in terms of price increases were Western spruce pine and fir stud and 2-by-4 and 2-by-10 lengths; and 2-by-10 hemlocks and true firs, Dean said.

Homebuilders took a sour view of the price increases and on Aug. 26 Patricia Roberts Harris, secretary of the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, called on the wage and price council to investigate.

Mrs. Harris directed HUD's Task Force on Housing Costs to begin its own inquiry into lumber costs. She also said she will look into continued shortages of insulation and other homebuilding materials. The price of insulation rose between 5 and 15 per cent this summer, Mrs. Harris said.

But the bubble of inflated lumber prices burst in September.

DONALD SCHRAMM, Midwest regional manager for Georgia-Pacific, said prices at his firm dropped by 20 per cent in September.

"Lumber prices are a function of supply and demand, and as housing demand decreases, which it normally does this time of year, prices tend to do the same thing," Schramm said.

Prices usually fluctuate 10 to 20 per cent between highs and lows in a year, though this year the variation likely will reach 30 per cent, Schramm said.

Dean said during the past 20 years, the homebuilding industry has experienced six to seven "booms," and in every bullish year lumber prices skyrocketed, builders screamed and the government investigated.

If HUD and the wage and price council do their homework, Dean said, they will reach the same conclusion as their predecessors:

"It's just a natural, somewhat textbook case of the commodities market behaving the way it's supposed to," Dean said.

Zoning laws: a necessary evil that went haywire?

by LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A number of people in the building and land development industries are saying zoning laws have been grossly overdone in the United States.

And they were winning some support from academic circles.

A team headed by George Sternlieb of Rutgers University in New Jersey last spring completed a study of the causes of the spectacular rise in the cost of home owning. Sternlieb's team concluded that injudicious zoning often makes it impossible for builders even to contemplate moderately priced housing.

THE REPORT SAID many of the costs imposed by subdivision controls are totally unnecessary and so, of course, are many costs imposed by building materials and construction codes. Between them, zoning excesses and unnecessary code restrictions account for at least 16 per cent of the cost of a $50,000 house, the team found.

Martin Swartzman, head of Glenwood Management Corp. of New York, a large builder and operator of highrise luxury apartment buildings, said zoning has been much overdone in New York. He said a lot of the zoning, in effect, is totally unnecessary and causes too much expense.

Although there has been a lot of building in the city since the city's current zoning code was adopted in 1960, he called it much too cumbersome and said it may contribute to urban decay by leaving builders and developers mystified and frustrated.

New York City has large areas, particularly in the Bronx and Brooklyn, that have been devastated by social change.

HUNDREDS OF BLOCKS of tenements and lower-middle-class apartment buildings, factories and stores have been razed to save taxes. Some of the lands have been abandoned.

Redevelopment of this property depends on many things but severe zoning restrictions can make redevelopment more difficult.

Swartzman said one trouble is that zoning seems to follow Parkinson's Law — that is, regulations expand to use up all the time and money the bureaucrats have available.

Swartzman conceded that zoning is necessary in most cities and towns.

BUT SOME OF THE more savage attacks on zoning excesses have come from land developers in Colorado who fear that zoning and environmental concerns might wreck their booming business.

An editorial in the Grand Junction Daily Sentinel in June said one of the best-kept secrets in the United States is the fact that the booming metropolis of Houston never has had any zoning laws of any kind.

"Surprisingly, that city is thriving to a point that must agonize the controlled growth advocates," the editorial said.

Houston, indeed, never has had any zoning law.

The main reason, Jack Wells of the Real Estate Board of Houston told UPI, probably is "Texans just don't like anybody telling them what they can do on their own land."

"ADMITTEDLY HOUSTON is a weird and wild place," the Colorado newspaper's editorial said. "Residences, artsy shops, homes turned into restaurants, hamburger stands, gas stations, townhouses, duplexes and jumping night spots all stand cheek by jowl . . . but that's the way Houston likes it. When the free market decides a declining older neighborhood is ready for investment and revival, there are no regulations and rules to block the way; the money can flow and the city can be recycled."

The editorial then said, and Wells concurred, that Houston officials believed zoning would artifically inflate housing costs, encourage dull monotonous housing, encourage urban sprawl with resulting energy waste and, above all, bring unnecessary bureaucratic regulation, spread politics and graft and aggravate prejudice against the poor and minorities.

Finally, the editorial said, zoning too often "represents middle class planners' ideas of the good society and ignores poor and blue collar people's needs."

STERNLIEB SAID that although zoning was originally conceived merely as a way to separate incompatible uses of land,it now often is used to control the character of a community.

"While the most blatant of exclusionary zoning practices have come under courtroom assault, many less obvious techniques are employed by a local government to maintain the character of the community. These policies can lead to the unavailability of moderately priced housing."

Nation's busiest mortgage review panel is right here

Mortgage review boards set up by lending organizations in 14 U.S. cities have gone begging for business — with the notable exceptions in Chicago and Boston.

The Home Mortgage Opportunity Committee of Chicagoland topped all other boards in the number of appeals requests it processed from persons who had been denied mortgage loans, according to the September issue of Savings and Loan News, a publication of the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

The Chicago board, sponsored by two area trade organizations, has received 79 applications for review in less than a year of operation, compared to 47 review requests filed in one year in Boston, and 13 complaints received in Pittsburgh.

THE BOARDS are designed to discourage and rectify "redlining" — a practice of refusing loans to persons who wish to buy into neighborhoods considered unsound by savings and loan institutions.

A spokesman for the league said the Chicago board decides whether an appellant's "creditworthiness" should qualify him for a loan.

The board steers away from requests that it determine whether a lender acted illegally in denying a loan, saying to decide such a matter in favor of an appellant could lead to lawsuits. The board refers such questions to the courts.

The local board is sponsored by the Chicago Area Council of Savings Associations, a 180-member trade group, and the Federal Savings and Loan Council of Illinois.

THE BOARD consists of two "tiers": one which screens applications for appeals, and a second with the authority to override a decision by the first tier and hear appeals initially rejected.

Tier 1 consists of five senior loan officers appointed for six-month terms by the Chicago Area Council. Tier 2 consists of five persons from outside the private savings and loan industry.

Out of the 79 applications, 29 received favorable reviews from the Chicago board, the article said. Twelve reviews led to loan closings, eight others produced offers of financing now pending and nine had loan offers made, but either expired or were terminated at the request of the applicants, according to the article.

Reasons for review rejections have included poor credit ratings, excessive debt-to-income ration of a desired mortgage, appraisal imbalances, absentee ownership or intentions by the would-be borrower to refinance an existing loan or consolidate debts, the article stated.

An information brochure and forms for reviews can be obtained by writing the committee, P.O. Box 516, Chicago Ill. 60690.

Other cities with mortgage review boards include Cincinnati, Cleveland and Dayton, Ohio; Denver, Colo., Kansas City, Mo.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Portland, Ore.; Providence, R.I.; Rochester, N.Y.; Seattle, Wash.; and Waterloo, Iowa.

6 Maryland realty firms convicted of fixing prices

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Six prominent real estate firms and three realty agents were convicted recently on federal charges of price-fixing in what the prosecution said was an historic case.

A U.S. District Court jury convicted the agents of conspiring to raise commission rates from 6 to 7 per cent during a dinner meeting Sept. 5, 1974, at the Congressional Country Club in Chevy Chase.

The Justice Dept. said it was the first successful prosecution of real estate firms under the Sherman Antitrust Act.

THE DEFENDANTS, all active in the Maryland suburbs of Washington, are Bogley Inc., and its president, Robert Lebling; Jack Foley Realty Inc. and its president, John Foley; Colquitt-Carruthers Inc. and its president, John Carruthers; Schick and Pepe Realty Inc.; Shannon and Luchs Co., and Robert L. Gruen Inc.

U.S. District Judge C. Stanley Blair set sentencing for Oct. 28.

The six firms could be fined $1 million each under a 1974 law which raised the maximum fine from $50,000. Each individual faces one to three years in prison and fines ranging from $50,000 to $100,000.

Prosecutors argued that the defendants agreed to hike their commission rates at a meeting following the dinner, but the realty agents contended they raised their rates independently in response to poor market conditions and pressure from their salesmen.

DURING THE PERIOD in question, home sales were slow because prevailing mortgage interest rates were higher than Maryland law permitted and mortgage money from state financial institutions was flowing to states with higher interest rates.

Foley's attorney, John Lewin, argued that the realty agents did meet for dinner but the prosuectors only guessed that there was an agreement to raise rates.

Need a home? This one can be yours for free!

by ANNA MADRZYK

ELGIN — Spacious, 2-story older house, 5 rms. each floor, 2 kit., 2 baths. Wood-frame, good cond. Avail. immed. By Elgin Area Unit Dist. 46. Free.

In these days of inflated home prices, you read that right.

MOVE IT AND it's yours.

That, of course, is the catch. And that's why would-be homeowners haven't exactly been banging down the school district's doors to take advantage of the offer.

"The problem is it's such a big house',, said Robert Skelly, superintendent in charge of business. "It's not inexpensive to put a house on rollers and move it."

A group that wanted to move the house eight blocks came up with an estimated tab of about $30,000. And the cost of moving can vary widely, depending not only on how far the house is going, but on how many utility lines have to be moved to accommodate the tall house's passage.

ADDED EXPENSES include the lot on which the house is to be put, concrete work at both sites and some permits.

But even a moving bill of $30,000 might be a small price for a 10-room duplex.

A buyer could probably sell it for a little more than he paid to move it, Skelly said.

"It all boils down to how much you would pay for the house and how much it costs to move it," Elgin City Engineer Robert Hogue said. "If it's free, you've got a good start."

THE HOUSE, which Dist. 46 used for offices, has been on the market for about a year. During that time, several persons investigated the possibility of moving it — and gave up.

Dist. 46 will probably accept a bid at its Oct. 17 meeting to raze the house to make way for a parking lot unless somebody offers to move it, Skelly said.

And even though district officials would like the house to be either sold or razed in October, "if someone said they'd move it during the first part of November, we wouldn't quibble," he said.

As far as school officials are concerned, the house is not to be had by just anybody.

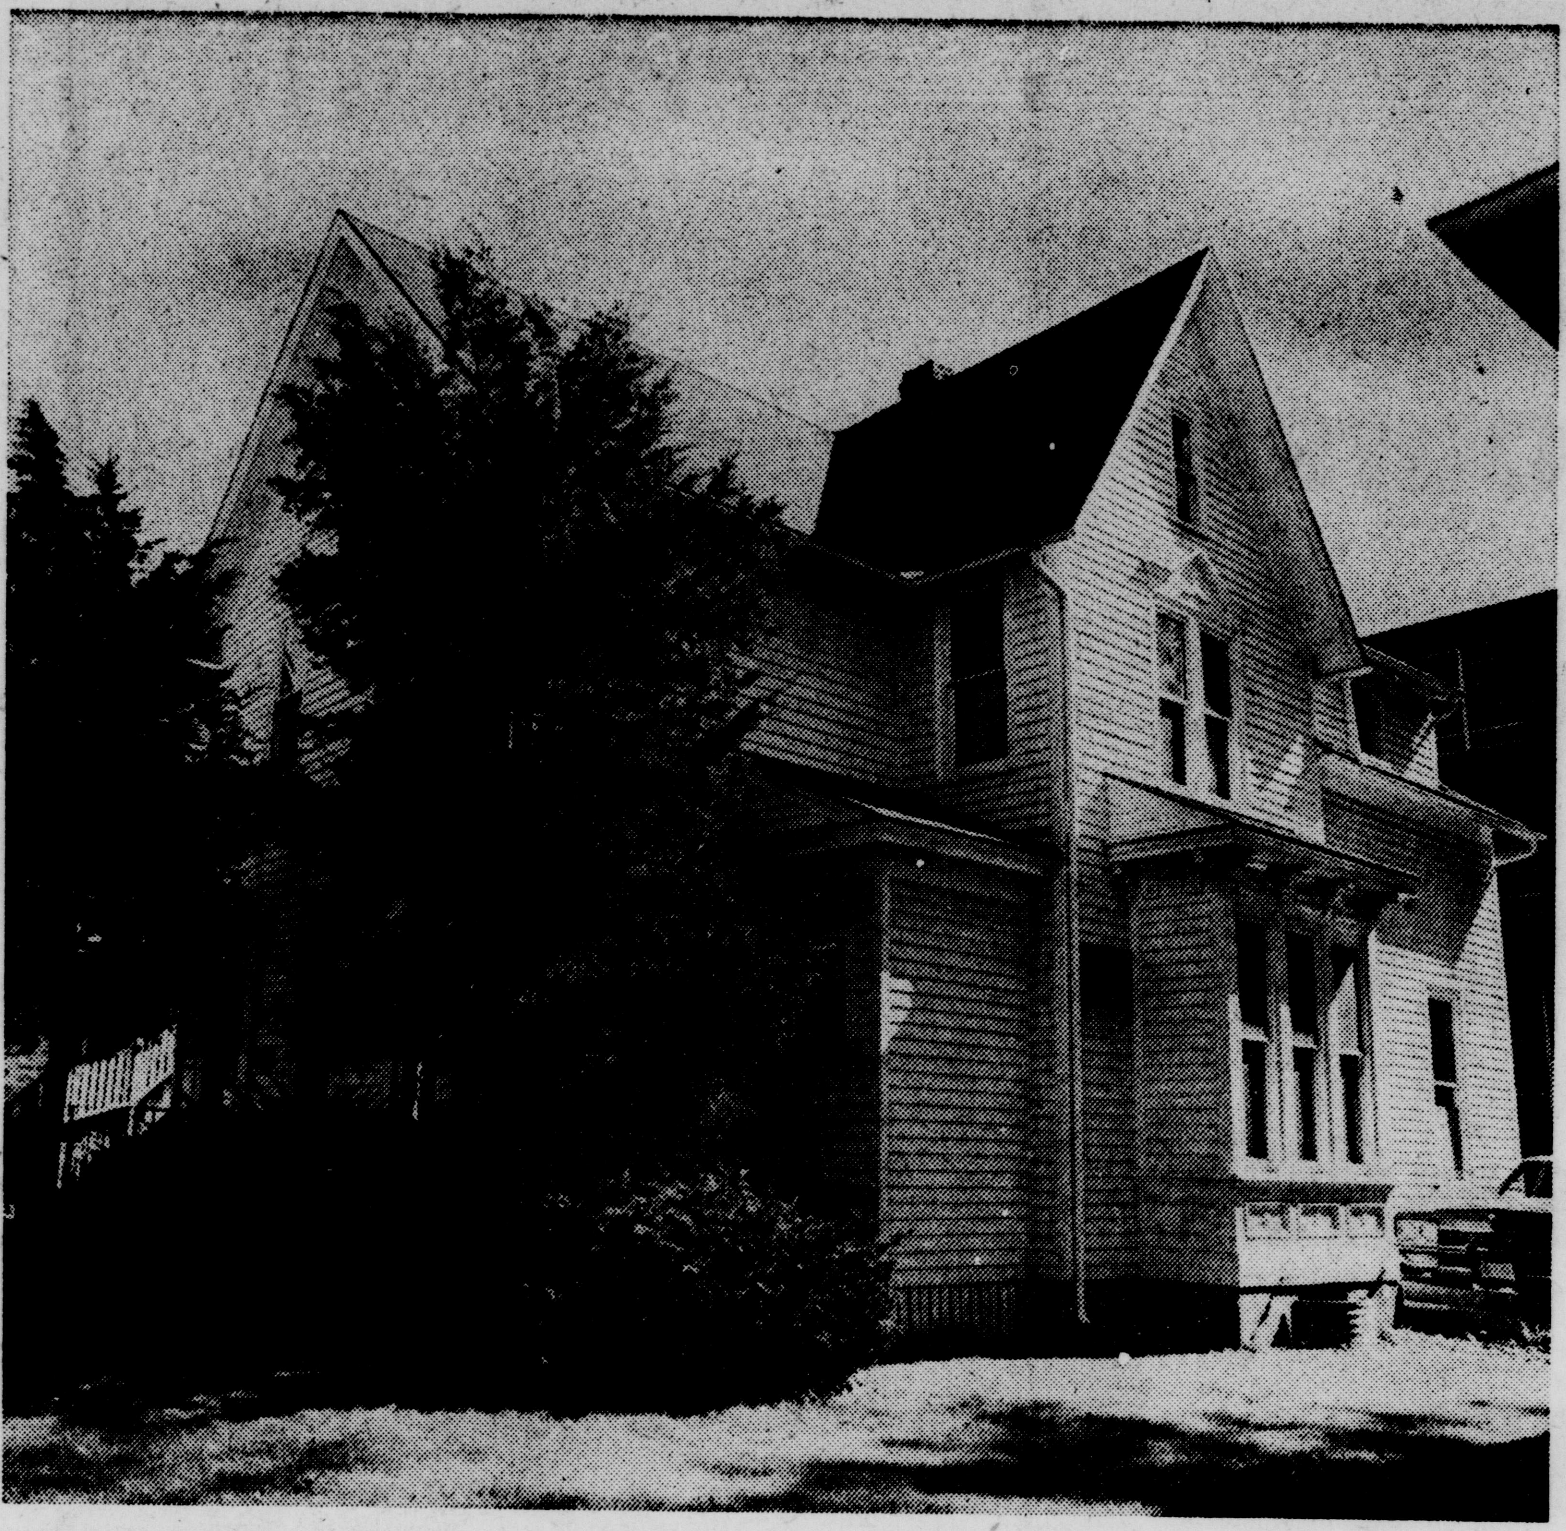
"WE WOULDN'T give it to someone irresponsible," Skelly said, and "be left holding a bag of unpaid bills." Dist. 46 is not interested in having a gaping hole on its property where the house used to be, he added, so a potential owner would have to make arrangements to fill it in, at a cost of around $2,000.

All things considered, is it possible?

"It all depends on how much you want to spend," Hogue said. "Once you're out of the city the only obstacle is the wide load. You'd have to have a police escort and probably move late at night."

It also depends on the route, Illinois Bell Engineer Robert Strohmaier said. Moving utility lines to make way for a house is a complicated process that involves lowering the lines, may result in loss of service to some areas and requires the coordination of the city, police and utility firms.

"It's kind of costly, unless you can design a route so we wouldn't have to lower wires," Strohmaier said.



THIS OLD HOUSE in Elgin can be yours for the asking. Yes, there's a catch, of course. You've got to be willing to move it — an undertaking that would probably cost you more than $30,000. Still interested? Then contact Robert Skelly c/o Elgin Area Unit Dist. 46.

Package firm buys suburb site

Continental Packaging Co. has purchased a 52,000-square-foot site on Payne Road in the Schaumburg Industrial Park, Schaumburg.

The firm is a sales representative and designer of corrugated and paper containers. It plans to build a corporate office and warehouse facility on the site, and will be moving from a rental unit in the same industrial park.

Arthur Rubloff & Company's Industrial Properties Group represented the buyer. The site, Lot 34, was purchased from the State Mutual Life Assurance Co. of America.

The Rubloff subsidiary reports the transaction is the 64th sale for the industrial park. A total of 170 acres have been sold, and 80 acres remainin the park, Rubloff said.

Need a home? This one can be yours for free!

by ANNA MADRZYK

ELGIN — Spacious, 2-story older house, 5 rms. each floor, 2 kit., 2 baths. Wood-frame, good cond. Avail. immed. By Elgin Area Unit Dist. 46. Free.

In these days of inflated home prices, you read that right.

MOVE IT AND it's yours.

That, of course, is the catch. And that's why would-be homeowners haven't exactly been banging down the school district's doors to take advantage of the offer.

"The problem is it's such a big house',, said Robert Skelly, superintendent in charge of business. "It's not inexpensive to put a house on rollers and move it."

A group that wanted to move the house eight blocks came up with an estimated tab of about $30,000. And the cost of moving can vary widely, depending not only on how far the house is going, but on how many utility lines have to be moved to accommodate the tall house's passage.

ADDED EXPENSES include the lot on which the house is to be put, concrete work at both sites and some permits.

But even a moving bill of $30,000 might be a small price for a 10-room duplex.

A buyer could probably sell it for a little more than he paid to move it, Skelly said.

"It all boils down to how much you would pay for the house and how much it costs to move it," Elgin City Engineer Robert Hogue said. "If it's free, you've got a good start."

THE HOUSE, which Dist. 46 used for offices, has been on the market for about a year. During that time, several persons investigated the possibility of moving it — and gave up.

Dist. 46 will probably accept a bid at its Oct. 17 meeting to raze the house to make way for a parking lot unless somebody offers to move it, Skelly said.

And even though district officials would like the house to be either sold or razed in October, "if someone said they'd move it during the first part of November, we wouldn't quibble," he said.

As far as school officials are concerned, the house is not to be had by just anybody.

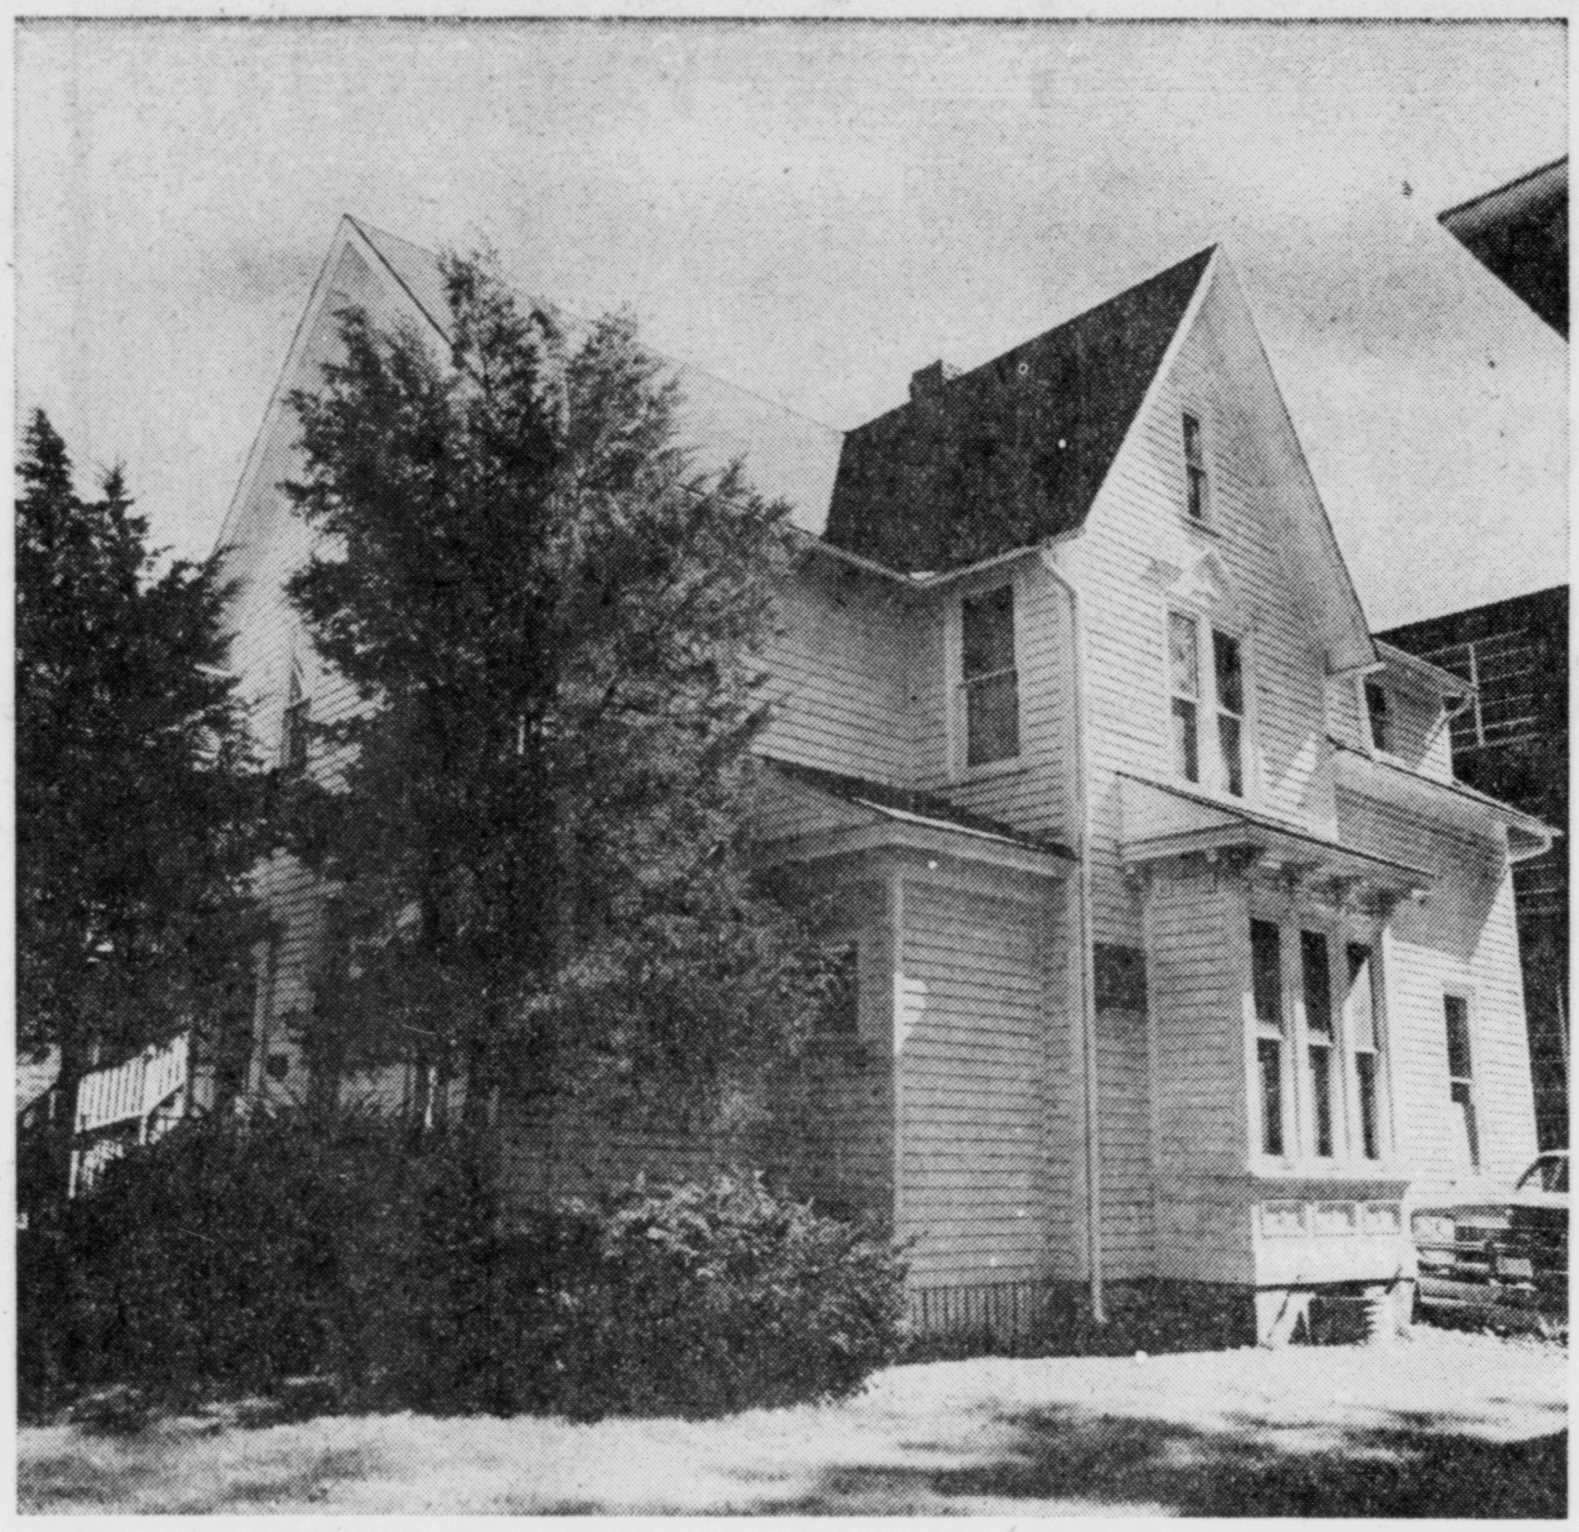
"WE WOULDN'T give it to someone irresponsible," Skelly said, and "be left holding a bag of unpaid bills." Dist. 46 is not interested in having a gaping hole on its property where the house used to be, he added, so a potential owner would have to make arrangements to fill it in, at a cost of around $2,000.

All things considered, is it possible?

"It all depends on how much you want to spend," Hogue said. "Once you're out of the city the only obstacle is the wide load. You'd have to have a police escort and probably move late at night."

It also depends on the route, Illinois Bell Engineer Robert Strohmaier said. Moving utility lines to make way for a house is a complicated process that involves lowering the lines, may result in loss of service to some areas and requires the coordination of the city, police and utility firms.

"It's kind of costly, unless you can design a route so we wouldn't have to lower wires," Strohmaier said.



THIS OLD HOUSE in Elgin can be yours for the asking. Yes, there's a catch, of course. You've got to be willing to move it — an undertaking that would probably cost you more than $30,000. Still interested? Then contact Robert Skelly c/o Elgin Area Unit Dist. 46.

Package firm buys suburb site

Continental Packaging Co. has purchased a 52,000-square-foot site on Payne Road in the Schaumburg Industrial Park, Schaumburg.

The firm is a sales representative and designer of corrugated and paper containers. It plans to build a corporate office and warehouse facility on the site, and will be moving from a rental unit in the same industrial park.

Arthur Rubloff & Company's Industrial Properties Group represented the buyer. The site, Lot 34, was purchased from the State Mutual Life Assurance Co. of America.

The Rubloff subsidiary reports the transaction is the 64th sale for the industrial park. A total of 170 acres have been sold, and 80 acres remainin the park, Rubloff said.

Warped tiles are easy to replace

Dear House Doctor: When my cellar was finished off for a playroom, an acoustical tile ceiling was installed. Recently, I had a small water leak in the kitchen above and this badly stained and warped two adjacent tiles. The tiles' tongue-and-groove edges interlock so that removing and replacing them appears to be a problem. Please explain how this is done. — W.H.

The work is simple and all you will need are replacement tiles, a sharp knife and a small quantity of tile adhesive.

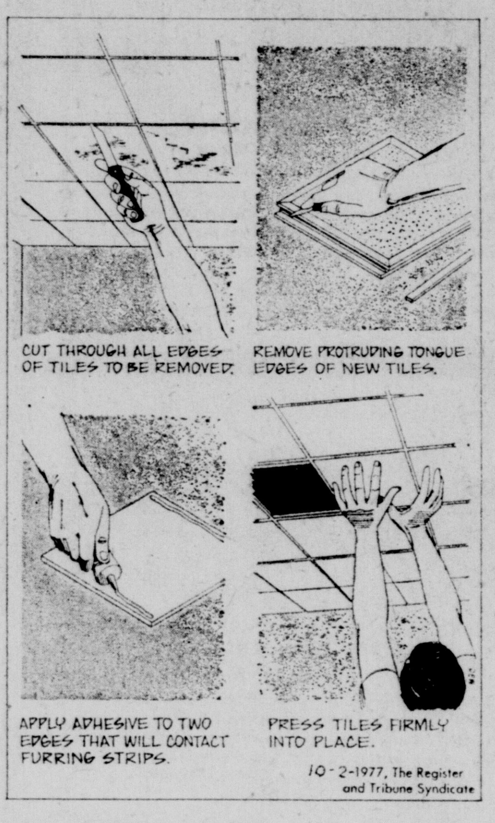
Herman Baum

The house doctor

The protruding tongues on the damaged tiles and the adjacent tiles must be cut. Insert the knife point into the space between the tiles and cut through all four sides of each tile to be removed. The tiles will drop out. Pull all exposed staples or tacks and remove the cut tongues from the tiles in place. The tongues on two adjacent sides of each replacement tile must also be cut off.

When the tiles are removed, the furring strips to which they were attached will be exposed. You can then determine the width of the area on two opposite sides of the replacement tiles to which you can supply the adhesive for securing the new tiles to the furring strips.

The best adhesive for attaching the new tiles is a soft paste intended for securing acoustical tiles directly to a plastered or plywood ceiling. A second choice is an adhesive intended for attaching plywood panels to walls without the use of nails. If you select this type, you must observe the instructions for drying time before the tiles are pressed into place.



CUT THROUGH ALL EDGES OF TILES TO BE REMOVED.
REMOVE PROTRUDING TONGUE EDGES OF NEW TILES.
APPLY ADHESIVE TO TWO EDGES THAT WILL CONTACT FURRING STRIPS.
PRESS TILES FIRMLY INTO PLACE.

Dear House Doctor: My new house has a large, terrazzo entry way. Pleass tell me the best way to maintain it.— L.J.N.

A terrazzo floor must be sealed as the last step in the finishing process. Perhaps the builder can tell you if this was done, but a second application of sealer does no harm. This must be applied after any polish on the floor is first removed.

Special products are available for cleaning terrazzo, but I am sure most homeowners use any soap or detergent available. After the floor is thoroughly rinsed and dried, apply one of the liquid floor polishes. An acrylic polish is preferred since it is less slippery. Do not use paste floor wax.

Dear House Doctor: I have a mail slot located near the center of my front door, but anyone can push the cover open and see my whole living room. Any suggestions? — Mrs. O.V.S.

Mail slots with curved hoods over the inside are available. It should not be difficult to install one as a replacement for the present slot.

Dear House Doctor: I have an asphalt shingle roof that is developing large black areas. Several other houses on my street have the same problem.What causes this ? — W.F.M.

These stains usually develop on the shaded side of a roof and are caused by mildew. Most building supply stores have a product that is mixed with water and is used to scrub the stained areas. These products are mixtures of soap, bleach and fungicides, which will remove the stains and delay their return. There is no permanent cure, however.

Dear House Doctor: The thermostat that controls my central air conditioner seems to be playing tricks. Often, it will not shut off unless I give the box a light tap. Is there any reason for this? — R.C.M.

Thermostats are mass-produced items and some are sure to misbehave. Replace yours and hope for better luck.

Outpatients' clinic

J.A.A. — The trench around the perimeter of your basement is a "French drain." The water collected by the dehumidifier can be conducted to it from which it will flow to the sump pump.

F.M. — In cold climates, sliding glass doors should be glazed with thermal glass. You cannot attach the acrylic plastic panels you mentioned, as these will interfere with the movement of the doors.

Mrs. A.B.P. — Unfortunately, I have never developed the psychic power to locate a roof leak, especially since three roofers have been unable to help you.

Dear House Doctor: I recently acquired a brass bed that had been painted with white paint. How can I remove the paint and then take care of the brass? — G.L.G.

Methylene chloride paint remover will remove the paint and will not damage the brass. A quality product will cost a little more but is worth it.

An answer to the second part of your question is too involved to be included here, but I do have an illustrated bulletin that describes the polishing and maintenance of all brass objects. A copy is available by sending 20 cents in coin (no stamps or checks, please) and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to The House Doctor, in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill., 60006. Ask for Bulletin No. J-26. I must have the stamped, return envelope to fill your order.

Dear House Doctor: Recently, you had an article about winter flies that congregate on windows inside a home in cold weather. You suggested the use of a fly swatter. I had the same problem, but I placed my tank vacuum cleaner near the window and sucked the flies into it every time I saw them. The method is less messy than a fly swatter. Mrs. W.F.D.

A 2nd mortgage to buy a new home? It's risky

Don G. Campbell

About real estate

"Speculation: To assume a business risk in hope of gain."

What could be more clear than that? And yet, the distinction between speculation and investment seems to be one of the hardest lessons to learn. And, it's frequently learned in the most painful way.

Dear Mr. Campbell: We are a couple in our late 20s with two little daughters. Like most people, we seem to be having a hard time making ends meet and putting something aside for the future.

We have just one thing going for us. Through an inheritance a couple of years ago, we were able to put $30,000 down on a house that is now worth about $70,000.

Since house prices seem to be going up all the time, do you think we should get a second mortgage on our house for, say, $25,000 and use the money for a down payment on one of the new houses being built near us, which are selling for $80,000?

Within a couple of years the second house should easily be worth $90,000. At that time, we'd sell it and realize a nice profit, and in the meantime, we'd rent it out. I think this sounds like it would beat the stock market. — Mr. T.G.F.

I think you sound like a lot of stock brokers did back in 1967-68.

I'll grant that a lot of people have been doing that very thing successfully, thanks to an inflation rate that has virtually guaranteed them a profit. And I don't think the inflationary rate is about to slow down significantly. The more reasonable fear, I think, is that the housing market could become saturated, and that could slow the escalation just as surely as a drop in the inflation rate.

I'm not saying that you shouldn't do it. I DO suggest that you appreciate the fact that it is a speculation rather than in investment, and that it has definite risks. How long, for instance, could you carry two pretty stiff mortgages in order to wait for the "right" time to sell the second house?

Have you ever heard of the "greater fool" theory? It holds that what you pay for anything is immaterial, because a "greater fool" will come along and buy it from you at a still higher price.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have a running argument with a friend who owns a 16-unit apartment complex. He says he is getting the free services of an apartment manager because he gives a couple free rent in exchange for this work. I say there's nothing "free" about it. Who is right? — Mr. P.J.

I'm inclined to go along with you — it may be "reasonable" or "cheap," but it's not free. Although the lower gross he is receiving is pretty well offset by the services the couple performs, your friend is ignoring other built-in expenses that would normally be charged against the unit — insurance, over-all maintenance, utilities, for example.

It's a hard argument to win because it looks "free."

Dear Mr. Campbell: I have a possible tenant for a house I own, but he insists on having a clause in the lease permitting him to sublet. I've never gotten into this before and don't know why he wants it. Do you recommend it? — Mrs. O.L.

Subletting clauses are fairly standard and I see nothing wrong with them as long as you retain final approval of the undertenant.

Your prospect probably wants the clause because he suspects the character of his work may result in a transfer over which he has no control.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I am getting ready to sell my house, but because of high commissions, I want to do it myself. My wife, though, says it's too dangerous. What do you think? — Mr. W.S.C.

A lot of people sell their own homes, but like other do-it-yourself projects it's never as easy as it looks. Your Library probably has a book or two on the subject and, when it comes to the closing, you'll want a lawyer involved. There are a lot of frustrations, though, and it CAN be legally dangerous without some guidance.

Reynolds offers new insulation

Reynolds Metal Co., of Richmond. Va., has introduced an aluminum foil-covered cellular plastic insulation board that the firm says can cut heat losses through existing walls by nearly 60 per cent.

The "Climate Guard" insulation board consists of a half-inch cellular isocyanurate core reinforced with glass fiber, and covered with aluminum foil facings. Standard sheet size is 4 feet by 8 feet 4 inches.

Climate Guard is designed to be used with standard or insulated aluminum siding. The insulation is attached directly to external walls before aluminum siding is nailed into place.

Reynolds says its tests have shown a half-inch sheet of Climate Guard provides greater insulating value than ¾-inches of polystyrene insulation board and a half-inch of fiber board.

Baird, Warner net on the rise

Baird & Warner Mortgage and Realty Investors, a Chicago-based real estate investment trust, has reported net earnings, including gains of $396,172 for the fiscal year ended July 31.

The net is equivalent to 38 cents per share.

The trust had reported a net loss of $101,486 for fiscal 1976, amounting to 10 cents per share.

JOHN W. BAIRD, chairman, said earnings this fiscal year were favorably affected by a fourth-quarter sale of a parcel of land beneath Lincoln Park Tower, a 32-story apartment building on Chicago's Near North Side.

From this transaction the trust realized a $340,875 gain equivalent to 33 cents per share.

Net earnings for the fourth quarter amounted to $293,969, equal to 28 cents per share, compared to a loss of $353,808 or 34 cents per share for the prior year fourth quarter.

Settlements in fiscal 1977 produced a recovery of $210,000 of prior deferred income, Baird said.

THE VOLUME OF commitments entered into this year with borrowers was $22.1 million, compared to $6 million in fiscal 1976. Outstanding loan commitments increased to $40.8 million at the end of fiscal 1977, compared to $34.7 million at the end of fiscal 1976.

The balance of funds outstanding on loan commitments totalled $25.5 million July 31, compared to $29.9 million at the beginning of the fiscal year.

The total amount of equity investments at year end rose to $14.8 million from $7.7 million the previous year.

Investments included acquisition of a 318-unit apartment complex in Glen Ellyn, and a $1.6 million mall enclosure and expansion of the trust's Green Bay Plaza Shopping Center.

New homeowner insurance policy urged

A new homeowners' policy designed to provide a broad, personal package insurance of older and lower-valued dwellings will be introduced this month by the National Assn. of Independent Insurers.

Features of the new policy include the deletion of the requirement to determine replacement cost of a dwelling. Instead, insurance companies will be expected to determine repair costs for the basis of settlement.

Actual cash value settlement and depreciation charges also have been dropped for many loss adjustments.

The policy will be called the customized homeowners policy, a package consisting of protection against the perils covered by a basic homeowners policy, plus liability and medical payments coverage. The policy will apply to one-or two-family dwellings.

An information package about the policy is available to non-NAII members for $25, by contacting the association at 2600 River Rd., Des Plaines, Ill. 60018.

S&L backs rehabs over new construction

The U.S. League of Savings Associations has urged a new national urban housing policy to emphasize preserving neighborhoods.

The trade organizationnalso recommended:

- More emphasis on rehabilitation and less emphasis on new construction.
- Much greater involvement of neighborhood residents and local governments in planning and implementing urban revitalization, and less emphasis on federal intervention.
- A willingness to try on a national scale ssccessful ideas already being tried locally, including use of new types of mortgages, such as graduated payment and variable rate plans, plus a system of co-insurance to spread the risk of lending in the central cities, and technical changes such as creating a secondary financing market for rehabilitation loans.

John A. Hardin, president of the U.S. League, said the proposals were developed over the past eight months by a committee of savings and loan business leaders, headed by Thomas C. Westropp, president of Women's Federal Savings and Loan Assn., Cleveland, Ohio.

Hardin said that in 1949 Congress determined that "a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family" would be a key national objective. Two decades later, in 1968, the Housing Act added as a goal 2.5 million housing starts per year. (This year 1.9 million starts are expected.)

"A decade later it is again time to assess our national housing goals," Hardin said.

"The league believes the new policy should conserve two precious resources — our existing housing and our existing neighborhoods," he said. Hardin said that the new policy also should take "full advantage of the ability of the private sector to provide housing finance."

Under the plan, he said the federal government would act as an innovator, coordinator and guarantor rather than as "the one and only" housing power.

Delinquency rates stable

Delinquency rates for home loans showed little change during the second quarter of 1977, the Mortgage Bankers Assn. of America recently reported.

Veterans Administration loan delinquencies exhibited the greatest increase between March 31 and June 30. MBA reported. VA loans with two or more installments past due reached a record .83 per cent, rising from .74 per cent reported during the first quarter.

VA loans with three or more installments past due rose from .53 per cent to .55 per cent during the second quarter.

JOHN WETMORE, chief economist for MBA, said, "The increase in VA delinquencies is probably tied to the sharp jump in new VA mortgages being written."

Installments past due for all Federal Housing Administration loans remained unchanged between March and June at 5.28 per cent, wile delinquencies for conventional loans rose from 2.64 per cent to 2.67 per cent.

The seasonally adjusted 90-day delinquency rate for all types of loans was .54 per cent June 30, compared with .55 per cent reported March 31.

The MBA survey also showed a drop in the rate of foreclosure actions started during the second quarter, from .2 to .17 per cent.

The MBA national delinquency survey analyzed more than 7.4 million mortgages on to 4-family homes, totaling an estimated $128 billion in debt. The figure represents about 25 per cent of all outstanding single-family loans in the nation, and more than two-thirds of all FHA and VA mortgages.

Key to land investment is rapid appreciation

Bernard Meltzer

On real estate

This column has received many questions concerning the buying of land as an investment. In the purchase of land, it is particularly important to know what you are doing or substantial losses, rather than gains, will be the result.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: One of my associates in the company for which I work is trying to interest me in investing in land. Though I have put aside a fairly substantial amount of money, I am a complete novice when it comes to real estate.

But the idea of making a good investment certainly appeals to me. What should I be on the lookout for? What must I know? — Babe in the Woods.

In recent years, suburban land has increased in value more than any other type of real estate investment. But some adversely located land has not enjoyed this over-all increase in value.

To be successful in land investment is to buy where the value is increasing rapidly. The land must be chosen carefully in order that substantial appreciation in value will occur within 10 years, so that the person investing can break even.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Every time I decide to save money and do things around the house myself (in order to save money), I wind up having a lot of material left over. This certainly doesn't constitute much of a saving.

Recently I did the kitchen floor with those stick-'em-on-tiles. I must say the job is beautiful. But I had so many of the blocks left over. What is the proper way to measure so that this doesn't keep happening? — No Einstein.

The only reason for this happening is that you couldn't have measured properly. And it pays to measure twice.

First, you will need a good rule. A folding rule will do more than measure. It will give you most of the angles you will require.

Second, you should have a square. It can be used for most jobs. If you can learn to use a square, it can be nearly as useful as a calculator.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Our children are grown and have moved away to live with their own families. We have been making improvements to our lovely old house since the last daughter left. The house was pretty beat-up after all those years of bringing up four kids.

Even my wife agrees that I have laid beautiful floors, papered the bathrooms, redone the patio, and so forth. Now that all that's done, I'd like to put up some shelving. But I don't know what kind of lumber to buy. My wife says I should buy the best if I want it to last. We intend to paint the shelves the same color as the walls.

Have you a suggestion? — On the last lap.

When buying lumber, it is wise to choose the grade according to its intended use. Buying the best grade of lumber for shelves which you intend to paint is a waste of money. Find out about the grades of lumber before you buy.

For shelves that you will paint, standard No. 1 common lumber is good enough. Though it has a few knots, they are not loose. There are no breaks or splits. They are perfectly fine for what you have in mind.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: How can I go about securing an FHA mortgage for my new house? My brother-in-law says that in my case that would be the best thing for me to have. — Need a helping hand.

You must go to your bank first. The Federal Housing Administration deals only with lending institutions. You can go to your bank either directly or through a real estate broker.

You will get an appraisal of the house for only about $50. You will have the right to withdraw from the deal if the appraised value comes in lower than the price you have been asked. Be sure to read the contract you sign very carefully to be sure there is no fine print forcing you to become bound to the terms of the agreement even if the appraisal is lower than the sale price.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: When it comes to choosing a lending institution for a mortgage, is there really much of a difference between them?

After all, one assumes they are all legitimate. So does it really matter whether one chooses one or another of them? — Does it matter?

It does make a difference. Your choice of a lender will determine the monthly cost of your mortgage loan, as well as your settlement costs.

When shopping for a lender, you will find that all institutions do not have the same requirements. There are lending institutions that require certain settlement services. They may charge you for settlement-related services, such as an appraisal or credit report. Others may not.

If the lending institution you choose permits you a choice of settlement service providers, shop around and compare until you find the best service for the very best price.

Building permits decline in August, then creep up

A downward slide in the number of construction permits issued in the Chicago metropolitan area bottomed out in August, and started creeping up, according to the monthly Bell Federal survey of building.

Single-family permits continued to lead the field, although multi-family activity in August posted a 60 per cent gain over August 1976, the survey found.

Apartment activity for August was reported at 1,678 units, compared to 1,052 in August 1976.

Single-family units rose from 2,363 in August 1976 to 3,415 this year, a 45 per cent increase, the survey found.

During the first eight months of 1977 total new housing activity increased 45 per cent, compared to the same period last year.

Single-family units during the eight-month period increased from 14,745 to 21,702, a 38 per cent rise. Multi-family housing totaled 11,758, compared to 7,356 in 1976, a gain of 60 per cent.

Step up housing efforts, exec urges

Oakley Hunter, chairman of the board and president of the Federal National Mortgage Assn., has urged that private industry — including minority enterprises — step up its effort to meet the housing needs of moderate-income families and city neighborhoods.

In a speech in Washington, D.C., Hunter said that government insurance programs and creative-assistance programs were necessary to meet the housing needs of the poor.

"We should never reach the point in this country where the only option for housing is a conventionally financed mortgage with private mortgage insurance," he said.

Nonetheless, he noted, "Most of the controversy over urban lending these days relates to conventional mortgages."

HUNTER SAID that of the conventional mortgages purchased by FNMA in 1976, 28 per cent were urban and 68 per cent were suburban.

"We realize that problems of providing enough mortgage credit in older urban areas are very real and that despite the efforts we have made to date, more can be done," Hunter said, adding that FNMA has recently created a new Office of Urban Activities headed by vice president Annabelle Heath.

In discussing urban housing needs, Hunter also noted that the definitions for "urban" and "suburban" are not precise and cautioned that it is not always true that an urban loan has more social significance for the cities and the poor than a suburban loan.

For instance, he said, a mortgage loan on a minority-owned home in a modest suburban neighborhood probably has more social merit than one on a large home in an affluent in-town area.

AGAIN CITING FNMA's conventional mortgage purchase activity in 1976, Hunter said 17 per cent of the loans were for homes purchased by nonwhites, that 42 per cent were for first-time home buyers (who usually have more modest incomes than those who are "trading up") and that 45 per cent was to familiies with combined incomes of $20,000 or less.

Calling on the minority groups represented by the joint conference to work with FNMA in resolving the physical and economic housing needs, Hunter said, "We must be creative, we must be flexible, and we must listen to consumers so that the solutions we devise actually meet their needs.

"We must look to existing housing stock and existing neighborhoods, including those in the inner-city, and recycle them," he said.

"And we need to cope with the problem of escalating housing costs which are making it increasingly difficult for young families to become homeowners by considering new design techniques and alternatives to traditional financing mechanisms," Hunter said.

Bankers seek bigger piece of the pie

Bankers are aggressively seeking to increase their share of the residential mortgage market, according to preliminary results of a study released recently by the American Bankers Assn.

The study shows that a substantial number of the nation's banks are active in the secondary mortgage market, said Dean Boyes, chairman of the study steering committee.

"While these results are preliminary," said Boyes, who is vice president of First National Bank of Oregon in Portland, "they indicate the commitment of bankers to support the vital home loan sector of our economy."

BOYES REFERRED to statistics developed in a survey mailed to 4,000 full-service banks. Assets of banks surveyed ranged from $25 million to $1 billion. A representative sampling of initial responses showed that 48 per cent of banks surveyed were actively selling mortgages in the secondary market.

Three-quarters of those responding said they intended to increase their participation in the future.

Selling mortgages on the secondary market allows banks to re-invest funds in home loans, and is considered essential if banks are to increase their lending activity. Without the secondary market facility, lendable funds would quickly be committed, preventing new loan originations.

"It seems clear from these early results," Boyes said, "that banks want to investigate all opportunities available to them for satisfying increasing demand for housing. In its final phase, the study will look further into current functioning of the secondary market, present options for better bank utilization and, possibly, suggest certain market modifications to enhance bank access."

Gladstone Associates, the Washington consulting firm commissioned by the association to conduct the study, is expected to deliver final results in December.

Building permits decline in August, then creep up

A downward slide in the number of construction permits issued in the Chicago metropolitan area bottomed out in August, and started creeping up, according to the monthly Bell Federal survey of building.

Single-family permits continued to lead the field, although multi-family activity in August posted a 60 per cent gain over August 1976, the survey found.

Apartment activity for August was reported at 1,678 units, compared to 1,052 in August 1976.

Single-family units rose from 2,363 in August 1976 to 3,415 this year, a 45 per cent increase, the survey found.

During the first eight months of 1977 total new housing activity increased 45 per cent, compared to the same period last year.

Single-family units during the eight-month period increased from 14,745 to 21,702, a 38 per cent rise. Multi-family housing totaled 11,758, compared to 7,356 in 1976, a gain of 60 per cent.

Step up housing efforts, exec urges

Oakley Hunter, chairman of the board and president of the Federal National Mortgage Assn., has urged that private industry — including minority enterprises — step up its effort to meet the housing needs of moderate-income families and city neighborhoods.

In a speech in Washington, D.C., Hunter said that government insurance programs and creative-assistance programs were necessary to meet the housing needs of the poor.

"We should never reach the point in this country where the only option for housing is a conventionally financed mortgage with private mortgage insurance," he said.

Nonetheless, he noted, "Most of the controversy over urban lending these days relates to conventional mortgages."

HUNTER SAID that of the conventional mortgages purchased by FNMA in 1976, 28 per cent were urban and 68 per cent were suburban.

"We realize that problems of providing enough mortgage credit in older urban areas are very real and that despite the efforts we have made to date, more can be done," Hunter said, adding that FNMA has recently created a new Office of Urban Activities headed by vice president Annabelle Heath.

Building contracts total $14.2 billion: F.W. Dodge

Contracting for new construction of all types totaled $14.2 billion in August, an industrial market report said.

The F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co. reprted the $14.2 billion was 46 per cent higher than August 1976 figures, bringing the Dodge Index to 267 (1967 equals 100). July's index was 218.

George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for F. W. Dodge, said, "Unlike some of the earlier big construction months, August contracting involved more than just a housing boom or the start of a couple of huge power plants.

"HOUSING AND UTILITIES figured in the latest month's action, but August also was the best month since before the recession for commercial, industrial and other nonresidential building," Christie said.

August contracts for nonresidential buildings was reported at $3.8 billion, a 52 per cent improvement over August 1976. Commercial and industrial projects were up 75 per cent, and schools, hospitals and other institutional buildings were ahead by 31 per cent, Christie said.

A strong gain in apartments, combined with a continued high level of single-family building, pushed August residential contract value to a record $6.1 billion — 46 per cent more than August 1976, Dodge reported.

"In August, apartments moved solidly above the 500,000 rate, and are likely to stay up there," Christie said.

AUGUST CONTRACTING for nonbuilding construction was reported at $4.3 billion, reflecting activity in public works and utilities, Dodge said.

Higher sewer and water projects, benefiting from the stimulus of extra federal financing, topped August 1976 levels by more than 50 per cent, Dodge reported.

Two large nuclear power projects with a combined value of $1.8 billion brought the 1977 eight-month total of contracting for electrical generating plants to nearly $16 billion, more than any full year on record, Dodge said.

At the end of August, the total value of contracts for all construction initiated in 1977 was $93.7 billion, up 26 per cent from the same period in 1976, Dodge said.

Realtors meeting in Rosemont Oct. 12

As many as 3,500 real estate agents from Illinois are expected to attend the 61st convention of the Illinois Assn. of Realtors Oct. 12-14 in Rosemont.

The convention, at the Ramada O'Hare Inn and the Sheraton O'Hare Hotel, will feature 17 educational programs for real estate agents, a keynote address by the Rev. Norman Vincent Peale, and a speech by Rep. Tennyson Guyer, R-Ohio.

An installation of 1978 Illinois Assn. of Realtors officers will conclude the three-day event.

Registration information can be obtained by contacting the association offices in Springfield, 217-529-6758.

Building contracts total $14.2 billion: F.W. Dodge

Contracting for new construction of all types totaled $14.2 billion in August, an industrial market report said.

The F. W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co. reprted the $14.2 billion was 46 per cent higher than August 1976 figures, bringing the Dodge Index to 267 (1967 equals 100). July's index was 218.

George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist for F. W. Dodge, said, "Unlike some of the earlier big construction months, August contracting involved more than just a housing boom or the start of a couple of huge power plants.

"HOUSING AND UTILITIES figured in the latest month's action, but August also was the best month since before the recession for commercial, industrial and other nonresidential building," Christie said.

August contracts for nonresidential buildings was reported at $3.8 billion, a 52 per cent improvement over August 1976. Commercial and industrial projects were up 75 per cent, and schools, hospitals and other institutional buildings were ahead by 31 per cent, Christie said.

A strong gain in apartments, combined with a continued high level of single-family building, pushed August residential contract value to a record $6.1 billion — 46 per cent more than August 1976, Dodge reported.

"In August, apartments moved solidly above the 500,000 rate, and are likely to stay up there," Christie said.

AUGUST CONTRACTING for nonbuilding construction was reported at $4.3 billion, reflecting activity in public works and utilities, Dodge said.

Higher sewer and water projects, benefiting from the stimulus of extra federal financing, topped August 1976 levels by more than 50 per cent, Dodge reported.

Two large nuclear power projects with a combined value of $1.8 billion brought the 1977 eight-month total of contracting for electrical generating plants to nearly $16 billion, more than any full year on record, Dodge said.

At the end of August, the total value of contracts for all construction initiated in 1977 was $93.7 billion, up 26 per cent from the same period in 1976, Dodge said.

DON'T OVERLOOK THE BUYS IN TODAY'S WANT ADS

'Adjusting life style is the answer'

Home builders offer energy-saving ideas

With 20 per cent of the energy used in the United States going to heat, cool, light, and run appliances in homes and apartments, considerable savings can be achieved if citizens reduce energy waste.

"Not only will conservation help us stretch dwindling energy supplies, but it will also pay off in dollars-and-cents pocketbook savings," said William W. Kennedy, president of the Home Builders Assn. of Greater Chicago.

Although home builders and their components suppliers are contributing to the energy conservation effort by building more energy-efficient homes, the 1.5 million to 2 million new residences being built represents just a fraction of the total effort, he said.

"THE ADJUSTMENTS to the energy crunch by people living in 80 million existing dwellings will have a far greater impact on how we solve the problem," Kennedy said.

Here are energy-saving tips the association recommends:

- Heating System: This is the biggest energy user in the home and adjusting. Dust and combustion products accumulate and interfere with good transfer.

Air filters should be checked evey few weeks and cleaned or replaced. The furnace should be cleaned regularly, preferably before the start of the heating season. The oil or gas burner should be checked at the same time by a professional. Without sufficient air, fuel will not burn completely and energy will be wasted.

- Thermostat Settings: It may seem drastic, but you can get used to living comfortably during the heating season with daytime setting of 65 degrees and a nightime setting of 55 degrees. The trick is to gradually lower temperatures by setting the thermostat back a degree or two per day, rather than all at once.

"Each one degree reduction saves about 3 per cent in fuel," Kennedy said.

If you have air-conditioning, keeping the thermostst at 78 degrees instead of 72 degrees can cut cooling costs by 47 per cent.

You might consider a clock thermostat that will automatically switch from daytime to nighttime temperatures and vice versa. And be sure to keep your themostat dust free, which can interfere with efficient operation.

When you plan to be away from home for a hlaf-day or more during the heating season, lower the temperature to 50 or 55 degrees — enough so that you don't have to use enormous amounts of energy to bring the home back to a more comfortable temperature when you return.

Frequent fiddling with your thermostat may end up consuming more fuel to recover the temperature to comfortable levels. Chart your living patterns and find a happy medium for one or two changes a day.

- Room Use: Be sure there are no draperies, furniture or other obstacles blocking the path of air from heating units or registers. Remove registers periodically to clean out dust and debris that may obstruct the air flow.

On sunny days during the heating season, pull aside curtains, shades, and drapes to allow the maximum amount of sunlight to enter and help heat the home. At night, cover windows to prevent heat from escaping. Lined or insulated draperies also help.

Close dampers and doors on rooms in the home not being used so you won't waste energy heating those areas.

- Humidity: Lower temperatures are more comfotable if you keep indoor humidity at 30 to 50 per cent relative humidity in the winter. Humidified air is also healthier for you, and it helps keep furniture and woodwork from drying out.

You can keep pans of water near radiators or heating outlets to add humidity. Or you can purchase a power humidifier, either the self-contained type in a cabinet or the furnace-mounted kind. Make sure you keep the humidifier clean and in good operating condition.

- Fireplaces: A fireplace may be cozy and romantic, but it's a big energy waster. When you use it, lower the thermostat and close off the rest of the house to prevent heat in other rooms from being drafted up the chimney. When the fireplace is not in use, close the damper and block the firebox opening, first making sure there are no smoldering embers.

- Hot Water Heater: This is the second biggest user of energy in the home. If it's bigger than what your family needs, you will be paying to heat too much water, so size the heater to your family. Also, set the temperature to 120 degrees rather than at 140 degrees; this will save 9 per cent from your fuel bill.

To save on heating hot water, limit your dishwasher and automatic clothes washer to full loads. Wrap insulation around hot water pipes. Take showers instead of baths. Don't keep the hot water running while you shave. And put a jacket of insulation around the hot water tank, especially if the tank is in an unheated area of your house.

- Attic Insulation: You should have at least six inches of insulation in your attic, and nine to 12 inches is even better. Even if you already have insulation, check the depth. Older insulation may have settled, and require an additional amount to bring it to the proper thickness.

- Storm Windows and Doors: You can cut your heat loss by more than 50 per cent by installing storm doors and windows. Keep them on during the summer if your house is air conditioned, because they will reduce the amount of outside heat coming in through the windows.

- Caulking and Weatherstripping: Did you know that a standard exterior door with a 1/8-inch crack around it loses as much heat as a 6-by-5-inch hole in the wall? Be sure all your windows and doors are caulked and weatherstripped to fill up the cracks that can leak precious heated air. This is a job best done in the warm weather, when caulking material can be applied easily.

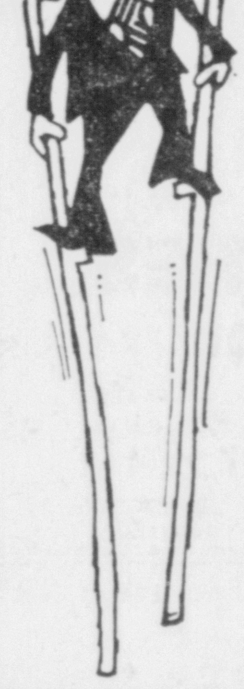
DON'T OVERLOOK THE BUYS IN TODAY'S WANT ADS



‘Adjusting life style is the answer’

Home builders offer energy-saving ideas

With 20 per cent of the energy used in the United States going to heat, cool, light, and run appliances in homes and apartments, considerable savings can be achieved if citizens reduce energy waste.

"Not only will conservation help us stretch dwindling energy supplies, but it will also pay off in dollars-and-cents pocketbook savings," said William W. Kennedy, president of the Home Builders Assn. of Greater Chicago.

Although home builders and their components suppliers are contributing to the energy conservation effort by building more energy-efficient homes, the 1.5 million to 2 million new residences being built represents just a fraction of the total effort, he said.

"THE ADJUSTMENTS to the energy crunch by people living in 80 million existing dwellings will have a far greater impact on how we solve the problem," Kennedy said.

Here are energy-saving tips the association recommends:

• Heating System: This is the biggest energy user in the home and adjusting. Dust and combustion products accumulate and interfere with good transfer.

Air filters should be checked evey few weeks and cleaned or replaced. The furnace should be cleaned regularly, preferably before the start of the heating season. The oil or gas burner should be checked at the same time by a professional. Without sufficient air, fuel will not burn completely and energy will be wasted.

• Thermostat Settings: It may seem drastic, but you can get used to living comfortably during the heating season with daytime setting of 65 degrees and a nightime setting of 55 degrees. The trick is to gradually lower temperatures by setting the thermostat back a degree or two per day, rather than all at once.

"Each one degree reduction saves about 3 per cent in fuel," Kennedy said.

If you have air-conditioning, keeping the thermostst at 78 degrees instead of 72 degrees can cut cooling costs by 47 per cent.

You might consider a clock thermostat that will automatically switch from daytime to nighttime temperatures and vice versa. And be sure to keep your themostat dust free, which can interfere with efficient operation.

When you plan to be away from home for a hlaf-day or more during the heating season, lower the temperature to 50 or 55 degrees — enough so that you don't have to use enormous amounts of energy to bring the home back to a more comfortable temperature when you return.

Frequent fiddling with your thermostat may end up consuming more fuel to recover the temperature to comfortable levels. Chart your living patterns and find a happy medium for one or two changes a day.

• Room Use: Be sure there are no draperies, furniture or other obstacles blocking the path of air from heating units or registers. Remove registers periodically to clean out dust and debris that may obstruct the air flow.

On sunny days during the heating season, pull aside curtains, shades, and drapes to allow the maximum amount of sunlight to enter and help heat the home. At night, cover windows to prevent heat from escaping. Lined or insulated draperies also help.

Close dampers and doors on rooms in the home not being used so you won't waste energy heating those areas.

• Humidity: Lower temperatures are more comfotable if you keep indoor humidity at 30 to 50 per cent relative humidity in the winter. Humidified air is also healthier for you, and it helps keep furniture and woodwork from drying out.

You can keep pans of water near radiators or heating outlets to add humidity. Or you can purchase a power humidifier, either the self-contained type in a cabinet or the furnace-mounted kind. Make sure you keep the humidifier clean and in good operating condition.

• Fireplaces: A fireplace may be cozy and romantic, but it's a big energy waster. When you use it, lower the thermostat and close off the rest of the house to prevent heat in other rooms from being drafted up the chimney. When the fireplace is not in use, close the damper and block the firebox opening, first making sure there are no smoldering embers.

• Hot Water Heater: This is the second biggest user of energy in the home. If it's bigger than what your family needs, you will be paying to heat too much water, so size the heater to your family. Also, set the temperature to 120 degrees rather than at 140 degrees; this will save 9 per cent from your fuel bill.

To save on heating hot water, limit your dishwasher and automatic clothes washer to full loads. Wrap insulation around hot water pipes. Take showers instead of baths. Don't keep the hot water running while you shave. And put a jacket of insulation around the hot water tank, especially if the tank is in an unheated area of your house.

• Attic Insulation: You should have at least six inches of insulation in your attic, and nine to 12 inches is even better. Even if you already have insulation, check the depth. Older insulation may have settled, and require an additional amount to bring it to the proper thickness.

• Storm Windows and Doors: You can cut your heat loss by more than 50 per cent by installing storm doors and windows. Keep them on during the summer if your house is air conditioned, because they will reduce the amount of outside heat coming in through the windows.

• Caulking and Weatherstripping: Did you know that a standard exterior door with a 1/8-inch crack around it loses as much heat as a 6-by-5-inch hole in the wall? Be sure all your windows and doors are caulked and weatherstripped to fill up the cracks that can leak precious heated air. This is a job best done in the warm weather, when caulking material can be applied easily.

Weyerhaeuser building own town

by POLLY LANE

With little notice and no federal susidies or other government assists, the Weyerhaeuser Co., one of the nation's largest timber corporations, is developing a major new community near its world headquarters in Washington state.

Nestled in a rural setting between Interstate 5 and nearby Puget Sound in the corridor between Seattle and Tacoma, the 1,600-acre West Campus is in its third year.

Until now, development and construction have been limited to business parks, offices, and other commercial structures, including a $5 million bulk-mail complex for the U.S. Postal Service.

But the residential explosion is beginning.

THE FIRST OF NEARLY 1,000 apartment units should be on the market by now with the others in the first phase to follow later in the year. Land in the first 500-lot subdivision for single-family homes is being marketed to builders so first homes there will be available early next year.

Development is being carried out under supervision of the company's real-estate development subsidiary, the Quadrant Corporation. Long before being absorbed by Weyerhaeuser in 1969, Quadrant had played a major role in suburban development, especially on Seattle's East Side.

During the development boom of the late 1960s, Quadrant was developing subdivisions, golf-course communities, and commercial buildings throughout the area. One of its golf-course communities, Twin Lakes, is only a few miles north of West Campus on a hillside above Puget Sound.

Growth at West Campus is following a master plan approved by King County with individual rezoning applications required for the various subdivisions, planned-unit developments, and office parks as they are proposed. The community is in an unincorporated area just south of a rapidly expanding community called Federal Way.

BECAUSE OF West Campus and an increased population generally in the suburban area, the Ernest W. Hahn Company and Newman Properties, both of California, have teamed up to develop the Sea-Tac Mall, their first regional shopping center in the arta.

It has nearly 1 million square feet of space. Sears, Roebuck & Co., Lamonts (a local apparel chain), and Bon Marche, the local Allied Stores outlet, are the main retailers there.

West Campus is designed to have an eventual business and residential population of about 25,000. Weyerhaeuser employees, at both the headquarters across the freeway and in the new $40 million research and development center being constructed nearby, are expected to live in West Campus.

Others who will work at the businesses in the new community also are expected to be attracted to the variety of residential styles and price ranges to be offered there — and especially as gasoline prices increase and a growing suburban population clogs the freeways to Seattle, Tacoma, the Kent Valley industrial area, and other employment centers.

Besides the mall complex, already operating at the new community are three buildings in an expandable Campus Square office complex, a six-acre medical complex, and several other buildings for individual businesses. About two dozen firms employing nearly 1,000 already are operating there.

IN CONSTRUCTION IS a $4 million satellite printing plant for Dow Jones. The 30,000-square-foot structure will provide facilities for printing 65,000 copies daily of the Wall Street Journal initially when it begins operating next year.

Many small companies also are developing and building their own facilities in West Campus. Organizations such as savings and loan associations, the Elks, health and tennis clubs, clothing distribution centers, and even some county agencies are planning outlets there.

A community shopping center will be built next year to serve the residential areas.

About 20 per cent of the community acreage will be left as permanent open space, including the 140-acre Panther Lake. School sites also have been planned for eventual use as the family population increases.

Being discussed also is construction of a $20 million performing-arts center with indoor and outdoor theaters and educational facilities. Funding for that project is being sought by arts groups in Congress.

Although there has been public discussion and notice about individual projects as they occur in West Campus, such as rezonings, there has been little publicity and promotion of the new community to the Seattle-area general population.

CHARLES GIINTHER JR., marketing director, says his staff has been too busy working with potential businesses to worry much about other types of promotion. But the company has sent letters to hundreds of major corporations nationally which might be transferring employees to the area and suggesting West Campus as a location for the business outlet as well as residence for the workers.

A small display at the Seattle-Tacoma International Airport has brought dozens of inquiries, Mr. Giinther said.

Weyerhaeuser building own town

by POLLY LANE

With little notice and no federal susidies or other government assists, the Weyerhaeuser Co., one of the nation's largest timber corporations, is developing a major new community near its world headquarters in Washington state.

Nestled in a rural setting between Interstate 5 and nearby Puget Sound in the corridor between Seattle and Tacoma, the 1,600-acre West Campus is in its third year.

Until now, development and construction have been limited to business parks, offices, and other commercial structures, including a $5 million bulk-mail complex for the U.S. Postal Service.

But the residential explosion is beginning.

THE FIRST OF NEARLY 1,000 apartment units should be on the market by now with the others in the first phase to follow later in the year. Land in the first 500-lot subdivision for single-family homes is being marketed to builders so first homes there will be available early next year.

Development is being carried out under supervision of the company's real-estate development subsidiary, the Quadrant Corporation. Long before being absorbed by Weyerhaeuser in 1969, Quadrant had played a major role in suburban development, especially on Seattle's East Side.

During the development boom of the late 1960s, Quadrant was developing subdivisions, golf-course communities, and commercial buildings throughout the area. One of its golf-course communities, Twin Lakes, is only a few miles north of West Campus on a hillside above Puget Sound.

Growth at West Campus is following a master plan approved by King County with individual rezoning applications required for the various subdivisions, planned-unit developments, and office parks as they are proposed. The community is in an unincorporated area just south of a rapidly expanding community called Federal Way.

BECAUSE OF West Campus and an increased population generally in the suburban area, the Ernest W. Hahn Company and Newman Properties, both of California, have teamed up to develop the Sea-Tac Mall, their first regional shopping center in the arta.

It has nearly 1 million square feet of space. Sears, Roebuck & Co., Lamonts (a local apparel chain), and Bon Marche, the local Allied Stores outlet, are the main retailers there.

West Campus is designed to have an eventual business and residential population of about 25,000. Weyerhaeuser employees, at both the headquarters across the freeway and in the new $40 million research and development center being constructed nearby, are expected to live in West Campus.

Others who will work at the businesses in the new community also are expected to be attracted to the variety of residential styles and price ranges to be offered there — and especially as gasoline prices increase and a growing suburban population clogs the freeways to Seattle, Tacoma, the Kent Valley industrial area, and other employment centers.

Besides the mall complex, already operating at the new community are three buildings in an expandable Campus Square office complex, a six-acre medical complex, and several other buildings for individual businesses. About two dozen firms employing nearly 1,000 already are operating there.

IN CONSTRUCTION IS a $4 million satellite printing plant for Dow Jones. The 30,000-square-foot structure will provide facilities for printing 65,000 copies daily of the Wall Street Journal initially when it begins operating next year.

Many small companies also are developing and building their own facilities in West Campus. Organizations such as savings and loan associations, the Elks, health and tennis clubs, clothing distribution centers, and even some county agencies are planning outlets there.

A community shopping center will be built next year to serve the residential areas.

About 20 per cent of the community acreage will be left as permanent open space, including the 140-acre Panther Lake. School sites also have been planned for eventual use as the family population increases.

Being discussed also is construction of a $20 million performing-arts center with indoor and outdoor theaters and educational facilities. Funding for that project is being sought by arts groups in Congress.

Although there has been public discussion and notice about individual projects as they occur in West Campus, such as rezonings, there has been little publicity and promotion of the new community to the Seattle-area general population.

CHARLES GIINTHER JR., marketing director, says his staff has been too busy working with potential businesses to worry much about other types of promotion. But the company has sent letters to hundreds of major corporations nationally which might be transferring employees to the area and suggesting West Campus as a location for the business outlet as well as residence for the workers.

A small display at the Seattle-Tacoma International Airport has brought dozens of inquiries, Mr. Giinther said.

Road to pollution-controlled cars rutted with stalled improvements

by EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI auto writer

DETROIT (UPI) — It has been 25 years since automobiles were tagged as the chief cause of smog in the nation's industrial cities. It will be another 13 years before foul gases finally are eliminated from their tailpipes.

Many Americans can't understand why it has taken so long.

In 1970, years after government regulators determined tailpipe emissions must be lessened, Congress decreed stringent clean air laws should take effect in 1975. Detroit automakers said they needed 10 years instead of five and were able to delay the standards until 1981 in a classic business-government confrontation.

But it will be in the early 1990s before the 110 million cars on the road are "clean" because the average car life is just over 10 years and the toughest standards don't take effect until 1981. In fact, there are millions of Americans still driving pre-1970 models with none of the built-in pollution controls Detroit and Congress have fought over.

IN THE LAST decade, Detroit lost the confidence of its customers, its word is of little weight in Washington and the 10-year skirmish over clean air standards has set the stage for similar confrontations over safety and fuel economy standards.

"In looking at it in hindsight, I don't know what we should have done differently," said E. M. "Pete" Estes, the engineer-president of General Motors Corp., the world's largest auto company.

Admitting the industry has a tremendous credibility problem, Estes said it is impossible to legislate technological advances.

"There is no way I know to hit the middle ground that everyone in Washington and everyone in the country would like us to do. And that's to be able to say: 'That's it. By 1983, we're going to be able to do this with fuel economy and that with cost and this with emissions."

It all started a quarter of a century ago when the late Dutch-born Dr. Arie Jan Haagen-Smit of the California Institute of Technology labeled automobiles as the chief cause of the smog that blanketed Los Angeles.

The three pollutants identified by scientists were carbon monoxide, unburned hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxide.

HYDROCARBONS and carbon monoxide are the prime ingredients of photochemical smog while high levels of carbon monoxide are belived to cause heart disease, create respiratory problems and impair driving ability.

In building the modern gasoline automobile engine — which critics say has changed little in 40 years — scant attention was paid to emissions. Engineers were trying to get every ounce of power from the monstrously large large V-8 powerplants.

Haagen-Smit said these engines did not burn all the gasoline fed into them. Some hydrocarbon fuel escaped into the hot, stagnant Los Angeles air where it reacted with sunlight and formed smog.

Even the most modern engines, researchers found, had a "quench" zone — about .001 inches from the engine surface — where the fuel won't burn because it's cooler than the rest of the engine.

With more than 100 millinn cars on the road, it amounts to a lot of pollution.

Early attempts to clean up pollutants consisted of trapping the gases in the engine itself. But it turned out that well over half of the harmful emissions were coming straight out the tailpipe.

The question then was not about the need to control th gases pouring out of the tailpipe, but on how much control was needed. Congress came up with standards in the 1970 Clean Air Act, that, according to one auto executive, "were almost grabbed out of the air."

BASED ON then-current scientific studies that attempted to estimate what sort of clean air standards would be needed to bring the nation's air quality back to healthful levels, the Nixon administration in 1969 recommended goals to be achieved in 1980.

But Congress, pressed by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, cut that in half, setting a timetable auto industry executives said was overly stringent and would not allow enough time to develop the necessary technology.

Top corporate executives spent almost as much time in Washington testifying before various committees and lobbying behind the scenes to win one delay after another, threatening at times to close down the nation's No. 1 industry.

Government officials repeatedly said Detroit was "crying wolf" and the United Auto Workers union, which represents 1.5 million auto workers and retirees, accused the industry and Congress of playing "brinksmanship."

Time, cost and need have always been the key auto industry arguments.

"We still don't feel we have a good history of the health situation and the effect of air pollution on health," said GM's Estes. "That's the key to the whole thing.

"I DON'T THINK anyone has some solid health information that says this is where the automobile should be and this is where stationary sources (powerplants and factories) should be to be most health effective, cost effec-

Pension reform needs insight from Coleridge

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Timely reminder to Washington's highest-minded "reformers"; go back and read your Coleridge.

It was precisely 160 years ago that the English poet, critic and philosopher set down the words that make a beautifully up-to-date comment on what's going on in the White House and Congress right now. "Every reform, however necessary," Samuel Taylor Coleridge wrote, "will by weak minds be carried to an excess, that itself will need reforming."

Coleridge's insight not only applies to President Carter's heavily ballyhooed insistence on still another major round of potentially disruptive tax "reform," it helps too in understanding the sadly flawed Congressional attempt to "reform" this country's pension laws. Calling every change a "reform" does not, alas, make it so however palatable the description may be to those voters afflicted with amnesia.

We are now celebrating, if that is the world, the third anniversary of Congress's dandy new pension-"reform" law, the Employment Retirement Income Security Act. While attempting to remedy some genuine ills, the legislators created a morass of red tape and ill-advised restrictions whose net effect has been to restrain the growth of many pension funds and cause the total elimination of others. If that's "reform" I'll eat my Social Security card.

THE NEGATIVE impact (however inadvertent) on corporate retirement plans has previously been discussed in this space in some detail. Now comes an "amen" from Lewis G. Kearns, director of financial planning for the Wellington Mangement Company in Valley Forge, Pa., who notes that much the same damage has been done in the area of so-called Keogh plans for the self-employed.

"Our organization invests, under streamlined prototype plans, for about 10,000 Keogh plan holders," he said. "For the first time since the enactment of HR-10 (the law that made such plans possible in 1962) more Keogh plans are being terminated than started."

Kearns showed me a letter from what he termed a typical "frustrated plan holder" complaining that the unending escalation of official regulations had made him decide to cancel his Keogh plan. Asserting that he was not disenchanted with the mutual fund in which he had invested "but with the government red tape," the letter writer observed unhappily that "every time I present another form to my accountant to fill out it costs $25 to $60 for his time."

TO KEARNS, the villain was clearly a well motivated, but poorly sought out "reform" movement in Washington. "Unfortunately," he said, "Congress in the ERISA regulatory structure assumed that the Main Street Garage has an internal legal and accounting staff, and Dentist Jones is in continuous collective bargaining with Nurse Smith.

"In general, Congress has installed the premise that because Central States Teamsters and Dentist Jones both have qualified retirement plans, each should be under the same rules and file the same reports.

"The implications of the mass frustration are broad, including less periodic investing which could assist in capital formation, discouragement of private retirement plans, and reduction in cash flow to major financial intermediaries — thanks insurance companies and investment companies."

If large money-management firms were the only victims of this trend away from small pension plans, the nation surely could contain its grief. But, as Kearns suggests, the problem goes deeper. Indeed, it cuts into the fundamental question of whether Washington, while paying perennial lip service to the value of small business, is going to make life increasingly tougher for those who actually practice it.

Steel trade talks disclosed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top officials in the Carter administration will meet with steel industry and union leaders Oct. 13 to discuss solutions to the steel industry's problems, it was disclosed Wednesday.

U.S. Special Trade Representative Robert Strauss, wo will preside at the meeting, said President Carter also hopes to attend part of the session. Those invited include U.S. Steel Chairman Edgar Speer, United Steelworkers Pres. Lloyd McBride and House Trade Subcommittee Chairman Charles Vanik, D-Ohio.

A meeting between five Carter administration officials and some members of the congressional steel caucus scheduled for Thursday has been postponed because of new developments, Rep. Joseph M. Gaydos, D-Pa., said Wednesday.

Gaydos, chairman of the executive committee of the House steel caucus, said one important development was Japan's setting conditions the United States must meet before Japan agrees to negotiate voluntary steel export retraints.

Stock rally fails as trade slumps

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, unable to sustain a midsession rally attempt because of investor concerns about rising interest rates, fell along a broad front Wednesday. Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 4.68 points to 837.32. The closely watched average plunged 9.96 points Tuesday, after having climbed 17.24 the previous three sessions.

Declines topped advances, 785 to 527, among the 1,861 issues crossing the composite tape. The 549 unchanged issues reflected considerable investor uncertainty.

Big Board volume totaled 18,300,000 shares, down from the 29,850,000 traded Tuesday.

The three pollutants identified by scientists were carbon monoxide, unburned hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxide.

HYDROCARBONS and carbon monoxide are the prime ingredients of photochemical smog while high levels of carbon monoxide are belived to cause heart disease, create respiratory problems and impair driving ability.

In building the modern gasoline automobile engine — which critics say has changed little in 40 years — scant attention was paid to emissions. Engineers were trying to get every ounce of power from the monstrously large large V-8 powerplants.

Haagen-Smit said these engines did not burn all the gasoline fed into them. Some hydrocarbon fuel escaped into the hot, stagnant Los Angeles air where it reacted with sunlight and formed smog.

Even the most modern engines, researchers found, had a "quench" zone — about .001 inches from the engine surface — where the fuel won't burn because it's cooler than the rest of the engine.

With more than 100 millinn cars on the road, it amounts to a lot of pollution.

Early attempts to clean up pollutants consisted of trapping the gases in the engine itself. But it turned out that well over half of the harmful emissions were coming straight out the tailpipe.

The question then was not about the need to control th gases pouring out of the tailpipe, but on how much control was needed. Congress came up with standards in the 1970 Clean Air Act, that, according to one auto executive, "were almost grabbed out of the air."

BASED ON then-current scientific studies that attempted to estimate what sort of clean air standards would be needed to bring the nation's air quality back to healthful levels, the Nixon administration in 1969 recommended goals to be achieved in 1980.

But Congress, pressed by Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, cut that in half, setting a timetable auto industry executives said was overly stringent and would not allow enough time to develop the necessary technology.

Top corporate executives spent almost as much time in Washington testifying before various committees and lobbying behind the scenes to win one delay after another, threatening at times to close down the nation's No. 1 industry.

Government officials repeatedly said Detroit was "crying wolf" and the United Auto Workers union, which represents 1.5 million auto workers and retirees, accused the industry and Congress of playing "brinksmanship."

Time, cost and need have always been the key auto industry arguments.

"We still don't feel we have a good history of the health situation and the effect of air pollution on health," said GM's Estes. "That's the key to the whole thing.

"I DON'T THINK anyone has some solid health information that says this is where the automobile should be and this is where stationary sources (powerplants and factories) should be to be most health effective, cost effec-

Pension reform needs insight from Coleridge

Louis Rukeyser

NEW YORK — Timely reminder to Washington's highest-minded "reformers"; go back and read your Coleridge.

It was precisely 160 years ago that the English poet, critic and philosopher set down the words that make a beautifully up-to-date comment on what's going on in the White House and Congress right now. "Every reform, however necessary," Samuel Taylor Coleridge wrote, "will by weak minds be carried to an excess, that itself will need reforming."

Coleridge's insight not only applies to President Carter's heavily ballyhooed insistence on still another major round of potentially disruptive tax "reform," it helps too in understanding the sadly flawed Congressional attempt to "reform" this country's pension laws. Calling every change a "reform" does not, alas, make it so however palatable the description may be to those voters afflicted with amnesia.

We are now celebrating, if that is the world, the third anniversary of Congress's dandy new pension-"reform" law, the Employment Retirement Income Security Act. While attempting to remedy some genuine ills, the legislators created a morass of red tape and ill-advised restrictions whose net effect has been to restrain the growth of many pension funds and cause the total elimination of others. If that's "reform" I'll eat my Social Security card.

THE NEGATIVE impact (however inadvertent) on corporate retirement plans has previously been discussed in this space in some detail. Now comes an "amen" from Lewis G. Kearns, director of financial planning for the Wellington Mangement Company in Valley Forge, Pa., who notes that much the same damage has been done in the area of so-called Keogh plans for the self-employed.

"Our organization invests, under streamlined prototype plans, for about 10,000 Keogh plan holders," he said. "For the first time since the enactment of HR-10 (the law that made such plans possible in 1962) more Keogh plans are being terminated than started."

Kearns showed me a letter from what he termed a typical "frustrated plan holder" complaining that the unending escalation of official regulations had made him decide to cancel his Keogh plan. Asserting that he was not disenchanted with the mutual fund in which he had invested "but with the government red tape," the letter writer observed unhappily that "every time I present another form to my accountant to fill out it costs $25 to $60 for his time."

TO KEARNS, the villain was clearly a well motivated, but poorly sought out "reform" movement in Washington. "Unfortunately," he said, "Congress in the ERISA regulatory structure assumed that the Main Street Garage has an internal legal and accounting staff, and Dentist Jones is in continuous collective bargaining with Nurse Smith.

"In general, Congress has installed the premise that because Central States Teamsters and Dentist Jones both have qualified retirement plans, each should be under the same rules and file the same reports.

"The implications of the mass frustration are broad, including less periodic investing which could assist in capital formation, discouragement of private retirement plans, and reduction in cash flow to major financial intermediaries — thanks insurance companies and investment companies."

If large money-management firms were the only victims of this trend away from small pension plans, the nation surely could contain its grief. But, as Kearns suggests, the problem goes deeper. Indeed, it cuts into the fundamental question of whether Washington, while paying perennial lip service to the value of small business, is going to make life increasingly tougher for those who actually practice it.

Steel trade talks disclosed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top officials in the Carter administration will meet with steel industry and union leaders Oct. 13 to discuss solutions to the steel industry's problems, it was disclosed Wednesday.

U.S. Special Trade Representative Robert Strauss, wo will preside at the meeting, said President Carter also hopes to attend part of the session. Those invited include U.S. Steel Chairman Edgar Speer, United Steelworkers Pres. Lloyd McBride and House Trade Subcommittee Chairman Charles Vanik, D-Ohio.

A meeting between five Carter administration officials and some members of the congressional steel caucus scheduled for Thursday has been postponed because of new developments, Rep. Joseph M. Gaydos, D-Pa., said Wednesday.

Gaydos, chairman of the executive committee of the House steel caucus, said one important development was Japan's setting conditions the United States must meet before Japan agrees to negotiate voluntary steel export retraints.

Stock rally fails as trade slumps

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, unable to sustain a midsession rally attempt because of investor concerns about rising interest rates, fell along a broad front Wednesday. Trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 4.68 points to 837.32. The closely watched average plunged 9.96 points Tuesday, after having climbed 17.24 the previous three sessions.

Declines topped advances, 785 to 527, among the 1,861 issues crossing the composite tape. The 549 unchanged issues reflected considerable investor uncertainty.

Big Board volume totaled 18,300,000 shares, down from the 29,850,000 traded Tuesday.

Natural gas bills to jump $18 to $58

The average family heating a home with natural gas would pay at least $18 more for the fuel next year under President Carter's plan and $58 more if the Senate deregulation bill takes effect, estimates showed Wednesday. A Congressional Budget Office study shows it will cost $260 to heat a typical house with natural gas this year if the gas comes from interstate pipelines, which are federally regulated. If natural gas prices were totally deregulated — all federal controls removed — the budget office estimates a homeowner's costs would rise to $361 next year, $390 in 1980 and $455 by 1985, again not including inflation. Although the office has no official estimates for the gradual deregulation plan approved in the Senate Tuesday, it is expected prices under that measure would be about $318 next year, $357 in 1980 and $396 in 1985, without inflation. Some 50 million American homes are heated with natural gas.

World Bank optimism runs high, but changes coming

Hobart Rowen

WASHINGTON — A year ago at the Manila sessions of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, Robert S. McNamara, bank president, was in the midst of a bitter public fight with the then U.S. Treasury Sec. William E. Simon.

Emotional and angry, McNamara warned that Simon's determination to prevent the bank from growing would bring its efforts to help poor countries to a screeching halt.

Either let the bank grow, McNamara said in his windup address, or acknowledge that its usefulness will decline.

Today, as the 1977 annual meetings begin, things couldn't be more different. One can even detect a faint smile on the usually sober McNamara face. Simon is gone, and the men President Carter brought into office with him include McNamara's former Defense Dept. deputy, Cyrus Vance, as Sec. of State. Simon's replacement at Treasury is Vance's old buddy, Mike Blumenthal. And they want to build up the World Bank instead of tearing it down.

IN CONTRACT to a "painful" meeting of the bank's executive directors in May 1976, when the United States vetoed a general capital increase for the bank, and put a $5.8 billion ceiling on last year's bank lending, the first action of the Carter administration was to abandon that ceiling for the current fiscal year, and reopen the question of a capital increase.

It is quite a change from the Simon days, when the former secretary believed McNamara was too big for his britches. Simon believed that McNamara was getting the bank so overextended that its credit in the capital markets would be damaged.

Noreover, he said the bank was foisting too much money on the borrowers who would become overburdened with debt.

Sitting around the pool at the Manila Hilton last year, Simon said that McNamara's trouble is that "he thinks more is better." Thus, Simon rejected the appeal of those like Canadian Finance Minister Donald S. MacDonald, who in speaking for the Commonwealth nations warned that the bank's activities should be trimmed only if the bank were finding it difficult to borrow, which was not the case.

Looking back, Carter administration insiders find it hard to comprehend.

THERE WAS a clash of personalities between McNamara and Simon, but that is only a partial explanation. The basic split was ideological: Simon has a blinder faith in free-market principles than anyone since the original Adam Smith, and saw McNamara's vision of a bigger World Bank as a threat to private enterprise on the international front.

Simon's fear that some countries would get over-immersed in debt is proving to be true — but, alas, the cause has not been excessive lending by the international institutions, but a go-go lending policy by big multinational banks.

A new report by the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Foreign Economic Policy indicates that the commercial banks in the early 1970s literally were shovelling money into countries like Indonesia, Peru, and Brazil, often on softer terms that the World Bank or the IMF would have imposed.

Now those same banks are trying to find some kind of "umbrella" arrangement with international institutions that will increase their chance of getting paid back. No one if official position will concede that a "bailout" is under way.

tive and energy effective.

"We feel, however ,that with the current regulations, the automobile will be out of the problem — whatever the problem is."

The industry's first efforts to control emissions did little for performance or fuel economy. As pollution was reduced, so were performance and mileage and by 1974, new cars were hard to start, hard to drive and hard to keep filled with gasoline.

The key to that problem was the catalytic converter, a muffler-like device using platinum and palladium to change hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide into harmless carbon dioxide and water. It allowed engineers to retune motors for fuel economy and performance while the "garbage can" caught the foul air.

The next step is the "three-way converter," which also will control oxides of nitrogen. Along with that will be increased use of electronics to offer precise control of the engine — a move that could spawn a new electronics market topping the $2 billion annual mark by 1981.

By 1985, when fuel economy requirements mandate a fleetwide average of 27.5 miles per gallon and the tightened clean air standards, 10 per cent of the cost of an automobile could be for electronics, said Sydney L. Terry, Chrysler Corp. vice president-public responsibility and consumer affairs.

Tomorrow: The air is cleaner.

tive and energy effective.

"We feel, however ,that with the current regulations, the automobile will be out of the problem — whatever the problem is."

The industry's first efforts to control emissions did little for performance or fuel economy. As pollution was reduced, so were performance and mileage and by 1974, new cars were hard to start, hard to drive and hard to keep filled with gasoline.

The key to that problem was the catalytic converter, a muffler-like device using platinum and palladium to change hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide into harmless carbon dioxide and water. It allowed engineers to retune motors for fuel economy and performance while the "garbage can" caught the foul air.

The next step is the "three-way converter," which also will control oxides of nitrogen. Along with that will be increased use of electronics to offer precise control of the engine — a move that could spawn a new electronics market topping the $2 billion annual mark by 1981.

By 1985, when fuel economy requirements mandate a fleetwide average of 27.5 miles per gallon and the tightened clean air standards, 10 per cent of the cost of an automobile could be for electronics, said Sydney L. Terry, Chrysler Corp. vice president-public responsibility and consumer affairs.

Tomorrow: The air is cleaner.

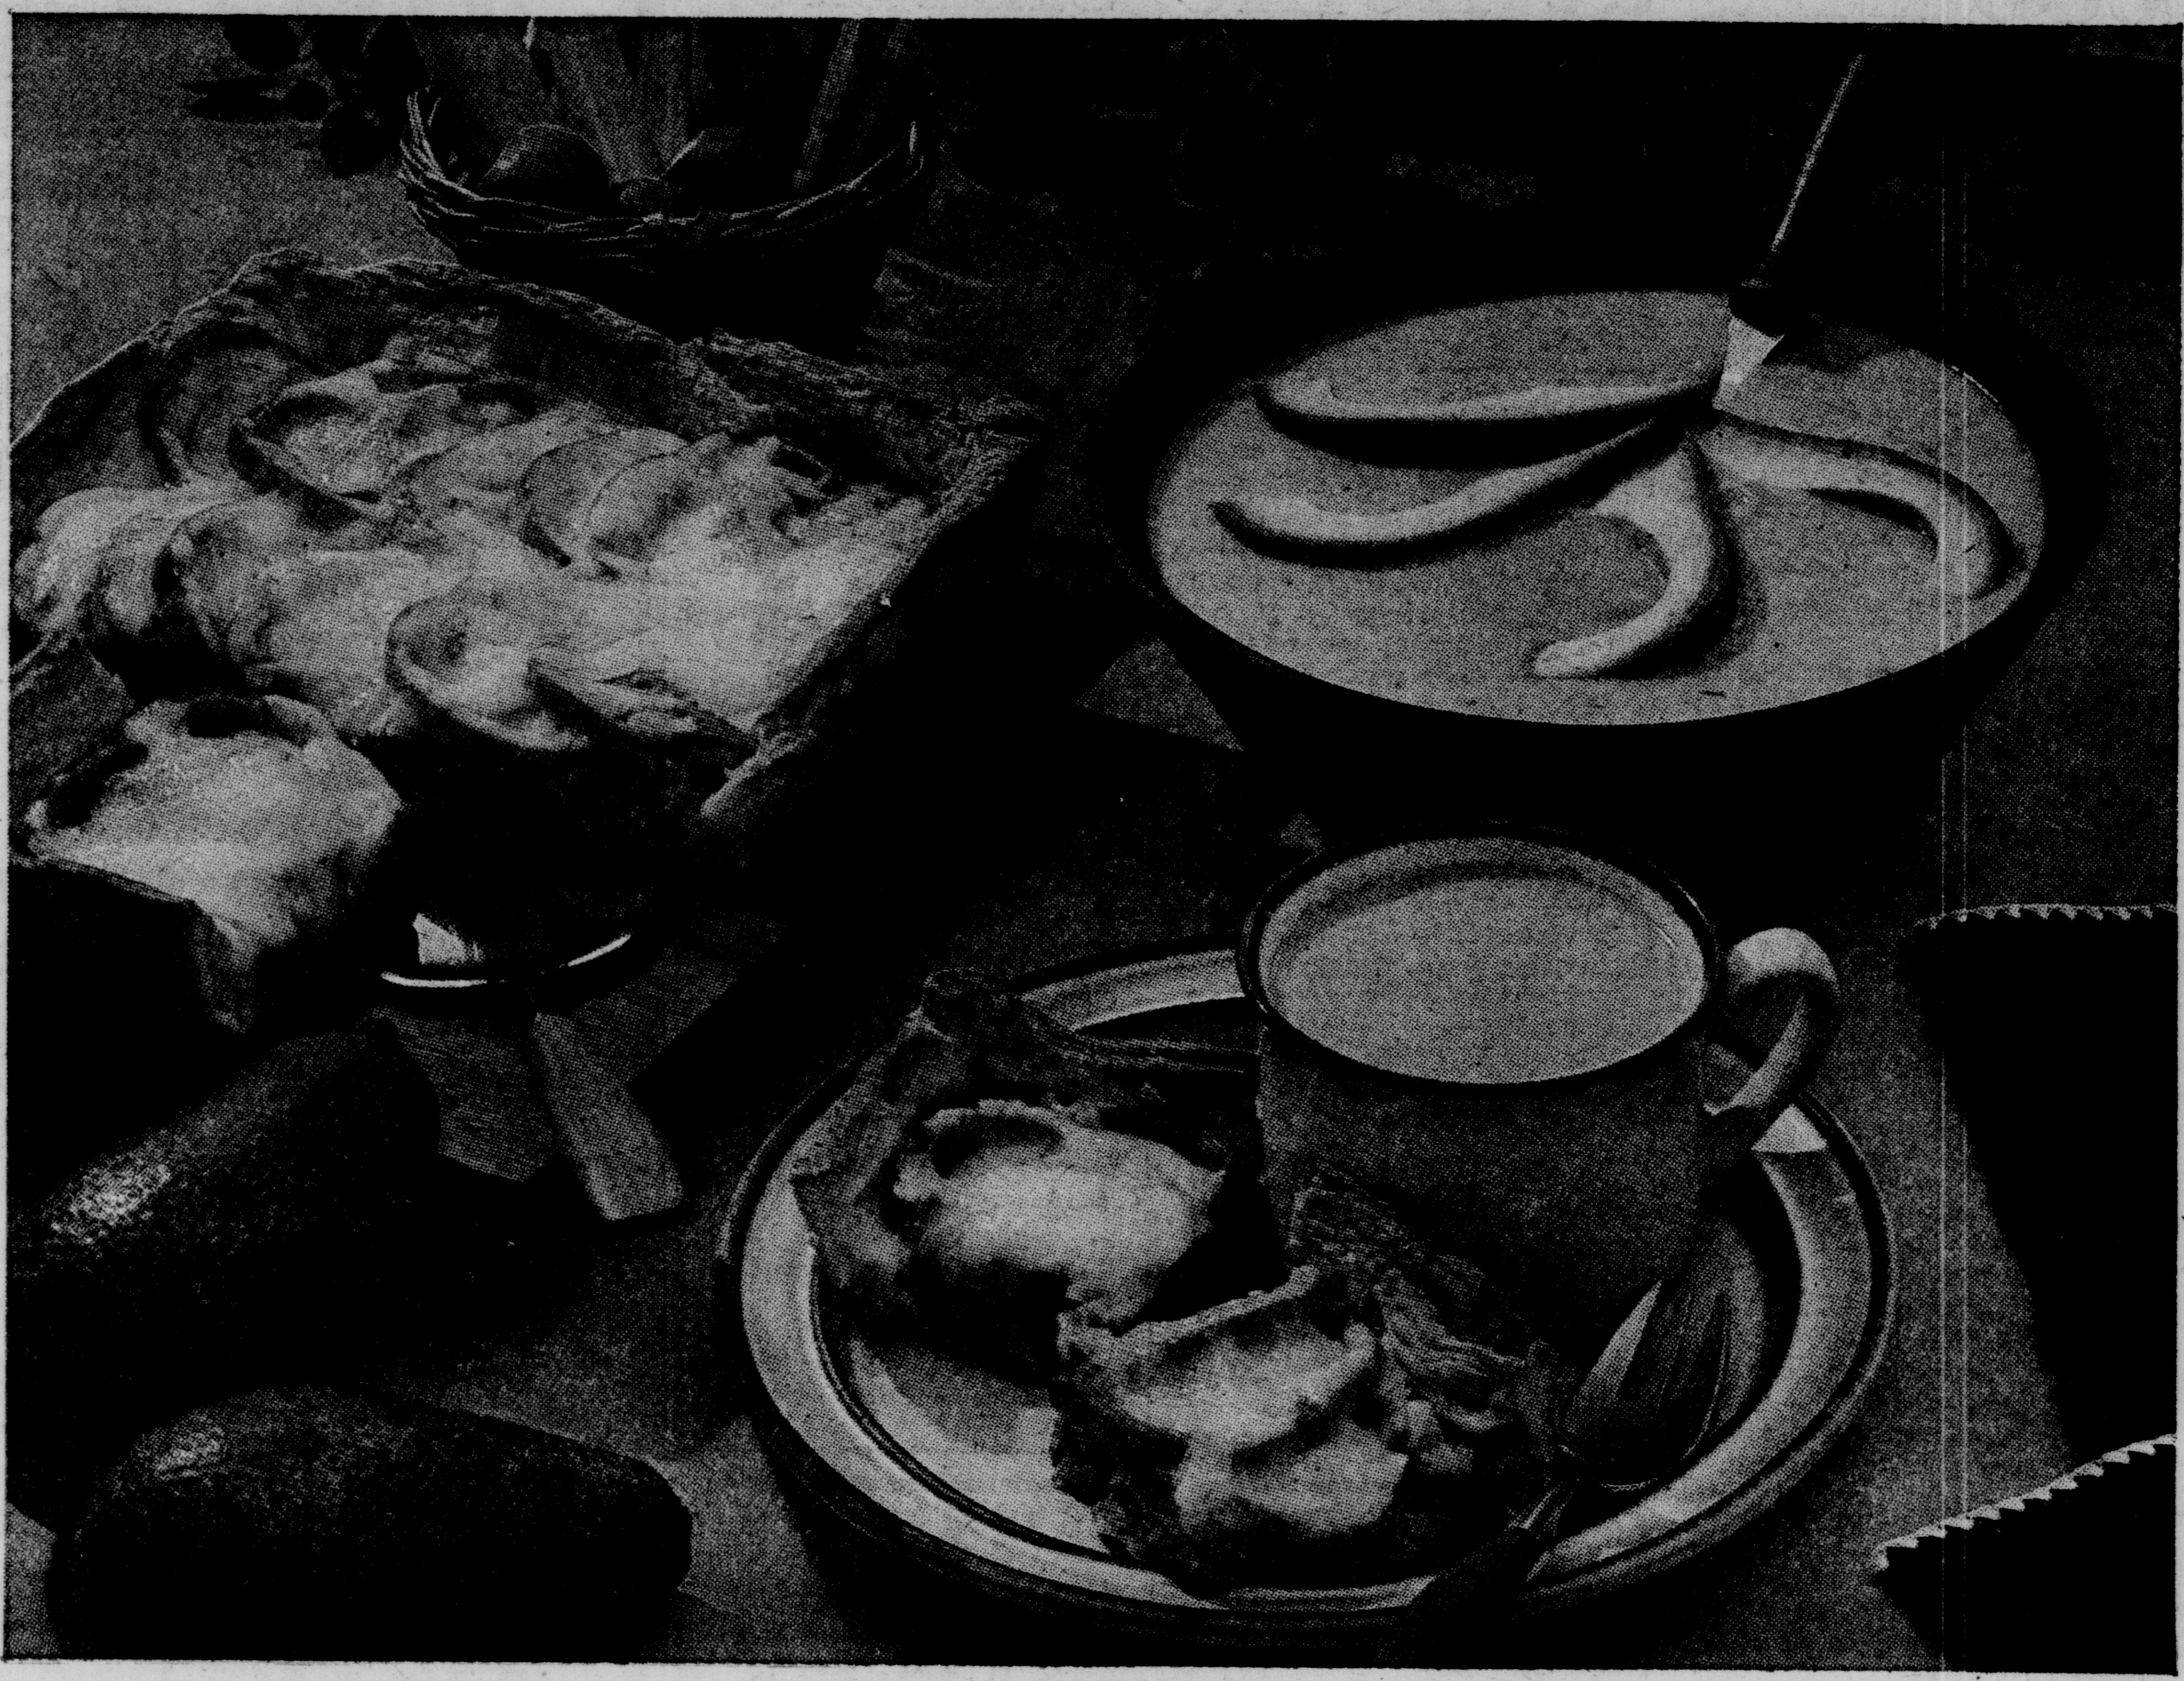
Dinners on the run



People eating on the run often grab a quick dinner at the neighborhood fast food stop. The thought of mixing, measuring and waiting for a home-prepared dinner is often more hassle than pleasure and "dinner in a bag" becomes more appealing.

People on the run home from work or collecting the kids from school will enjoy these 30-minute dinners using salmon and avocados. And in the nutrient department both foods rank high.

One half avocado contains 167 calories, some vitamin A and potassium. Avocados are low in sodium and cholesterol free. A protein source, salmon contains about 203 calories for 3½ ounces. The salmon bones contain calcium and can be eaten. Crush and use with the canned salmon for additional calcium.

Deep Dish Salmon Pizza

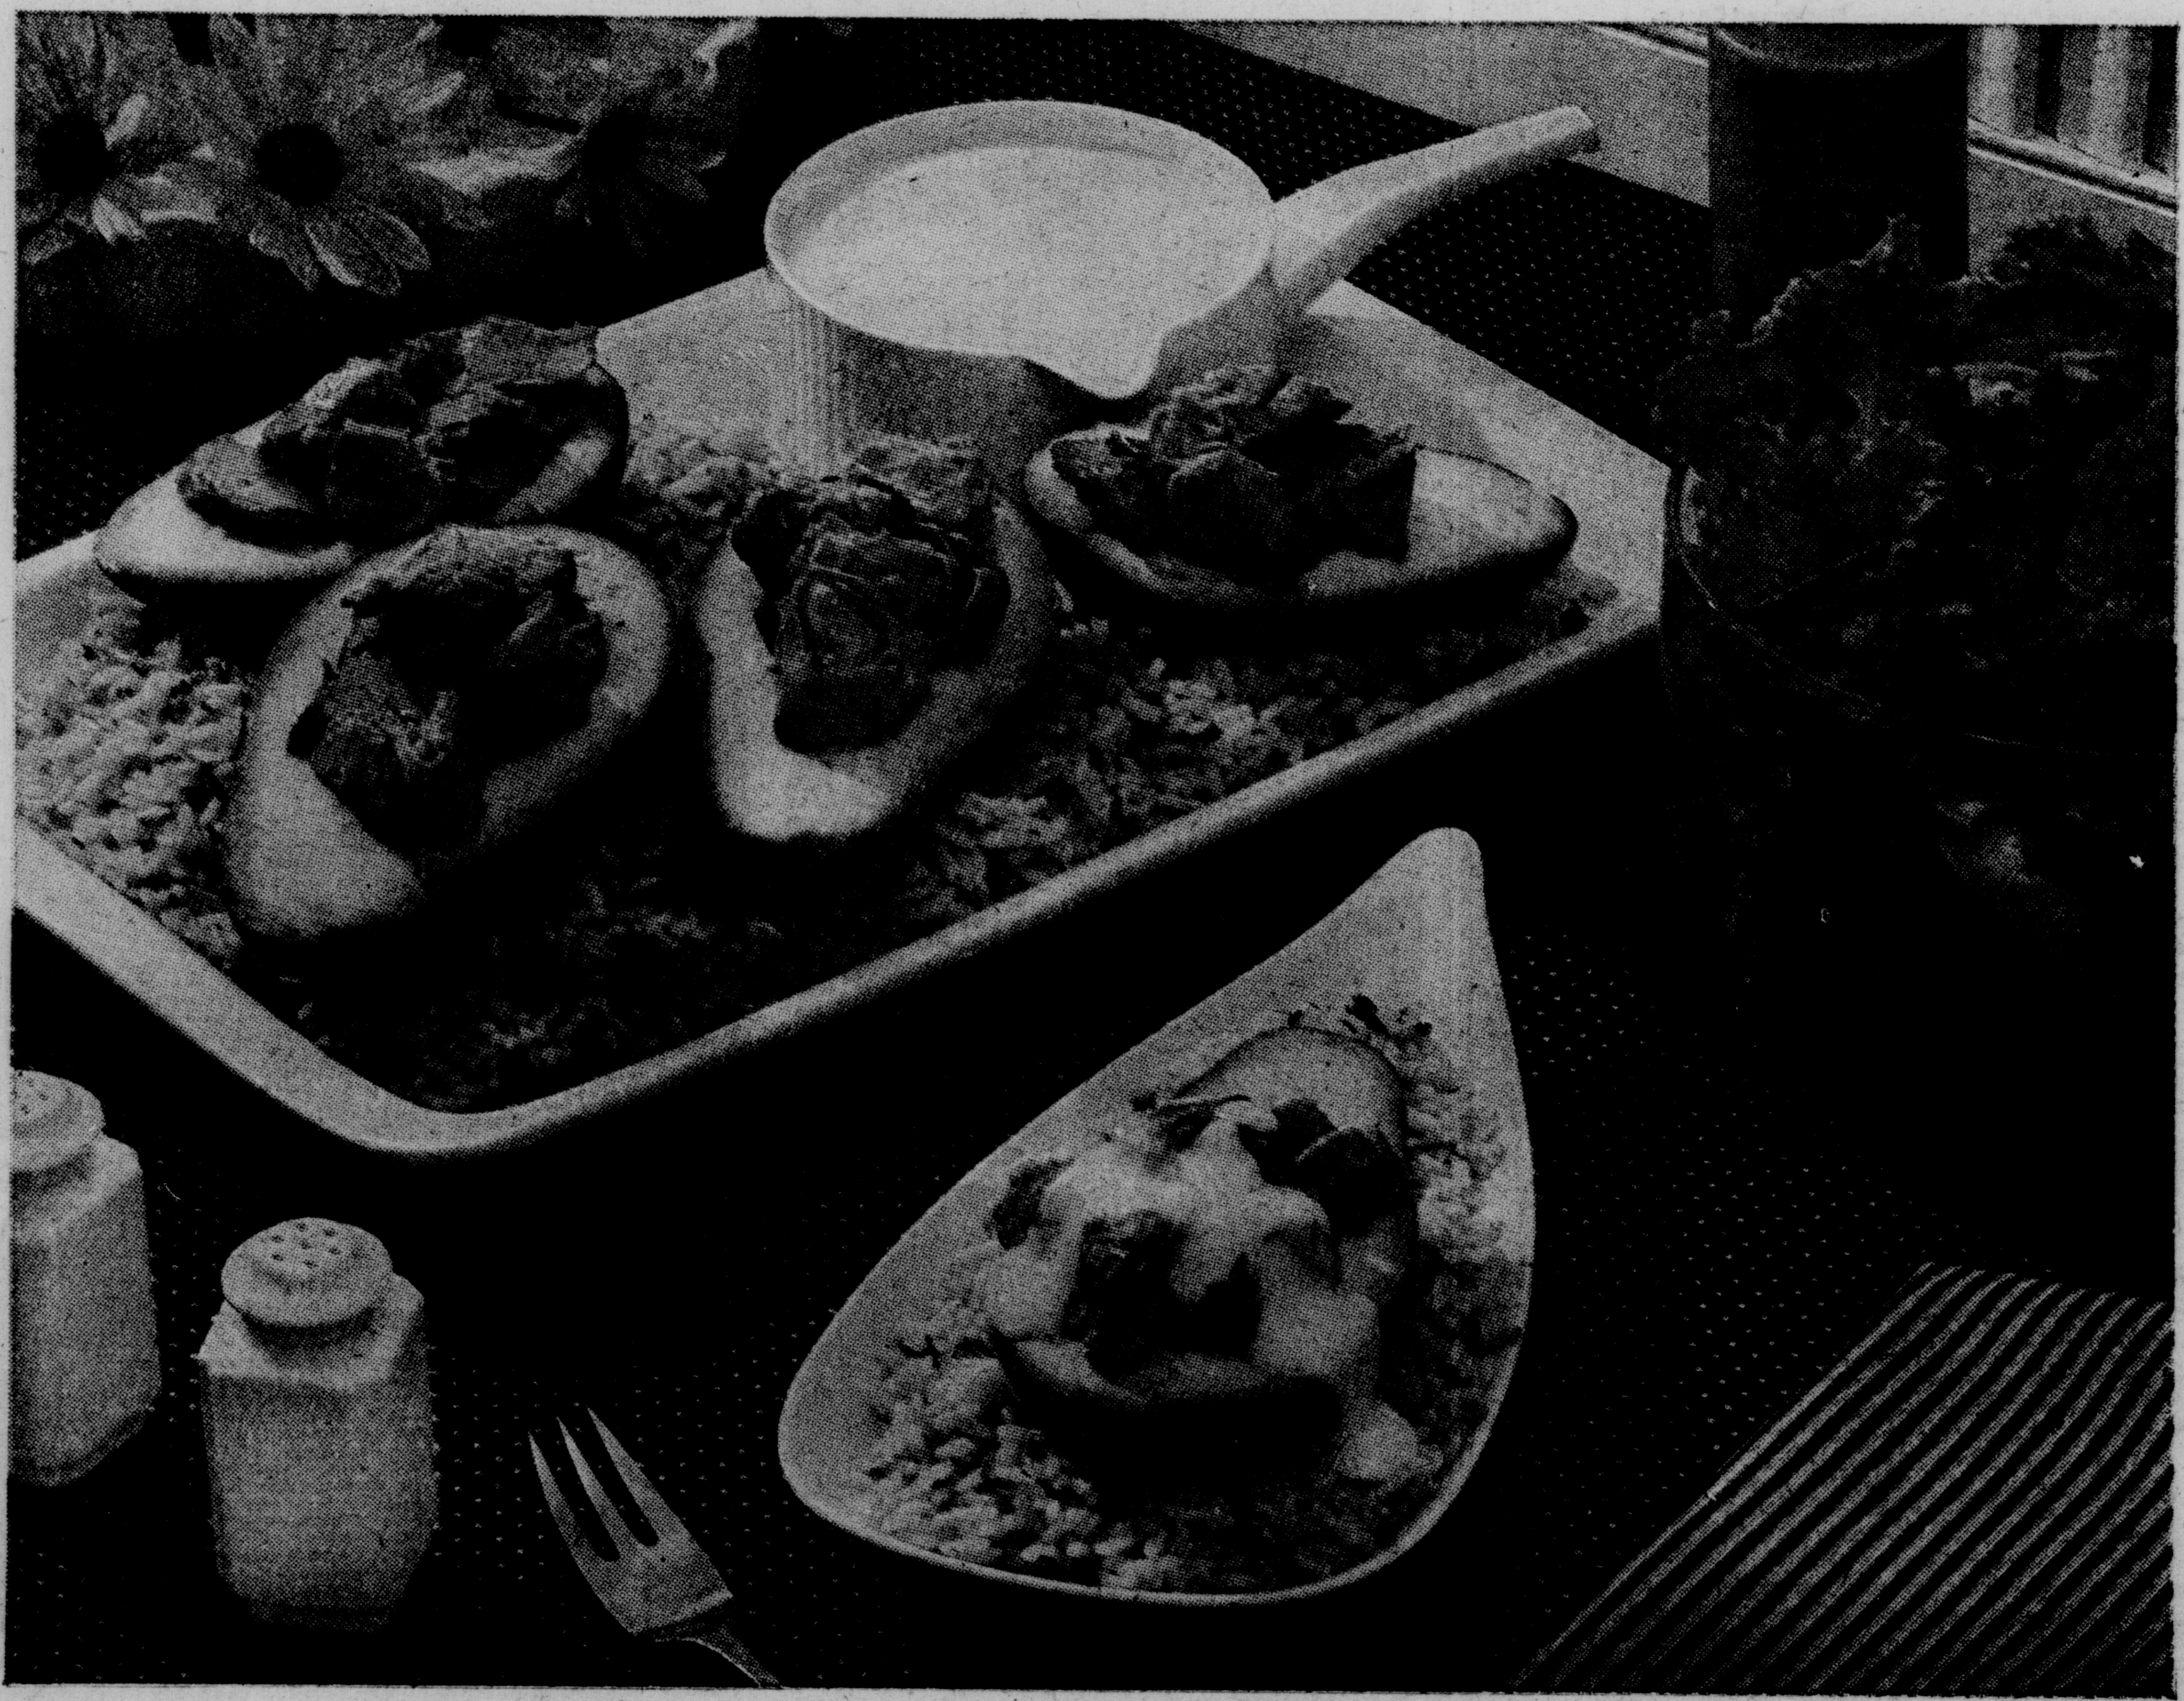
1 can (7¾ ounces) salmon
1 package (8 ounces) refrigerated crescent rolls
⅓ cup tomato sauce
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
½ teaspoon oregano
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 green pepper, seeded and sliced
1 tomato, sliced
1 cup shredded monterey jack cheese

Drain salmon and flake. Press crescent roll dough in bottom and up sides of 9-inch square baking pan. Bake at 400 degrees 7 minutes. Remove from oven and spread with tomato sauce. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, garlic powder, oregano and Parmesan cheese. Top with salmon and layer with alternate slices of green pepper and tomato. Sprinkle monerey jack cheese over pizza. Bake at 425 degrees 15 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Avocado Soup

½ cup sliced onion
2 tablespoons butter
3 cups single strength chicken broth
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
½ teaspoon salt
2 soft avocados
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Saute onions in butter until pale gold. Add the broth and seasonings. Peel and seed avocados. Reserve four slices for garnish if desired. Cut remaining avocados into chunks. Place avocados in blender with lemon juice and broth and blend until smooth. Serve immediately, or chill and serve cold. Float avocado garnish on top if desired. Serves four.



To prepare an avocado for eating, cut around it lengthwise and twist the halves to separate. Remove the seed by striking it with a sharp knife and giving it a twist. Pare or peel the skin back.

Salmon Avocado Hollandaise

1 can (15½ ounces) or 2 cans (7¾ ounces) salmon
3 California avocados
Rice pilaf
Easy Hollandaise sauce

Drain salmon and separate into chunks with a fork. Halve, pit and peel avocados. Fill avocado halves with chunks of salmon. Arrange over Rice Pilaf. Serve Easy Hollandaise Sauce on the side. Makes 6 servings.

Rice Pilaf: Choose your favorite rice pilaf and prepare according to directions or use the following recipe: Saute ½ cup chopped onion in ¼ cup butter. Add 1¼ cups rice and brown lightly. Add 2½ cups chicken broth, ¼ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon thyme. Bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 20 to 25 minutes. Stir in 2 tablespoons of snipped parsley.

Easy Hollandaise Sauce: Combine 2 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon salt and a dash of cayenne pepper in blender. Blend slightly. Heat ½ cup butter until bubbly but not brown. While eggs are blending, pour butter slowly into blender. Blend just until thick. Makes ¾ cup sauce.

	Rice pilaf
	Easy Hollandaise sauce

Drain salmon and separate into chunks with a fork. Halve, pit and peel avocados. Fill avocado halves with chunks of salmon. Arrange over Rice Pilaf. Serve Easy Hollandaise Sauce on the side. Makes 6 servings.

Rice Pilaf: Choose your favorite rice pilaf and prepare according to directions or use the following recipe: Saute ½ cup chopped onion in ¼ cup butter. Add 1¼ cups rice and brown lightly. Add 2½ cups chicken broth, ¼ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon thyme. Bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 20 to 25 minutes. Stir in 2 tablespoons of snipped parsley.

Easy Hollandaise Sauce: Combine 2 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon salt and a dash of cayenne pepper in blender. Blend slightly. Heat ½ cup butter until bubbly but not brown. While eggs are blending, pour butter slowly into blender. Blend just until thick. Makes ¾ cup sauce.

Crafty shortcuts make cooking at home simple

Home from work — hungry and tired. Cooking dinner is the last thing you want to do. Suddenly the alternatives you passed up on the way home flash back into your mind — a trip to the chicken place down the street or a pop-in-the-oven meal such as TV dinner or frozen pizza.

A nutritious dinner, for one or many, can be quick and easy with the right recipe and preparation. For the working person, home cooking no longer means spending hours in the kitchen. Today it's shortcuts as you create meals "like mother used to make" with a bit of culinary craftiness.

Any meal, whether a seven course feast or a shortcut dinner demands planning. So take time before you shop and plan weekly menus. If you get the usual, "But Mom, are we having that again?" ask for suggestions.

KEEP A VARIETY of food on hand to prevent those extra stops at the grocery store. Although you may need only a pound of ground beef or a head of lettuce after-five stops usually mean more expense for the weekly grocery bill, loss of time for meal preparation added frustration as you wait in the express check-out line that moves like slow molasses.

Remember, the mix and match technique is universal — for clothing, for home decorating and for food. Casseroles might be quick, but interesting eating needs variety. To avoid the short order cook routine, consider different types of meals: a hearty soup with bread, sandwiches with a vegetable salad or cold plate supper.

BUT EVEN THE most organized cook, with menus planned and preparations ready, can't beat the overtime assignment or a traffic jam on the highway. So reserve those nights for hamburger or taco stops or stock your freezer with make-ahead meatballs.

Food editor

Make-Ahead Meatballs is a recipe from Dorothy Landgraf of the University of Illinois Extension Service. Just like the name says, make the meatballs in advance and freeze to use in Vegetable Meatball Soup.

This recipe makes two servings, ideal for the single person or couple. Or double it for large families.

MAKE-AHEAD MEATBALLS

1 pound ground beef
¼ cup chopped onion
¾ cup bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce (optional)
¼ cup milk

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Mix all ingredients thoroughly. Shape mixture into about 24 one-inch balls. Place on ungreased baking pan. Bake 10 minutes or until done.

To freeze, cool meatballs about 5 minutes. Place in freezer plastic bag or wrap securely in aluminum foil in amounts you can use at one time. Label, date and place in freezer.

For meatloaf, shape meat mixture into four 4x2½-inch loaves. Freeze for later use, or in ungreased square pan bake 30 to 45 minuntes or until meat is done. Top with a can of condensed cheddar cheese or tomato soup while baking.

VEGETABLE MEATBALL SOUP

½ recipe (12 meatballs) Make-Ahead Meatballs
1 can (10 ounces) tomatoes
1 to 2 medium potatoes, pared and cut in chunks
2 to 3 carrots, pared and sliced
1 cup water
1 beef bouillon cube or 2 teaspoons instant beef bouillon
1 to 2 teaspoons chili powder
Salt and pepper to taste

Note: 1 can (8 ounces) mixed vegetables may be substituted for potatoes and carrots.

Combine frozen meatballs and remaining ingredients in saucepan. Heat to boiling, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat; cover and simmer 15 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Serves 2 or double recipe, serves 4.

MINUTE MENU

Meatball vegetable soup or meatloaf.
Tossed salad with vinegar and oil dressing.
Fresh steamed, broccoli.
Garlic bread or corn muffins.
Fresh fruit or oatmeal cookies.

Microwave makes acorn squash easy

The peak season for acorn squash is October through December. The next time you pass a display of acorn squash at the market buy some, but be sure of the weight because the cooking time depends on it.

These squash are a true microwave miracle. Forget all your previous troubles with cutting an acorn squash in half. Cook it whole in the microwave oven just as you would a baked potato.

Eileen Kelly

Let's learn to micro-cook

- First wash the squash.
- With a long pronged fork, pierce the skin deeply several times. This allows the steam to escape as the squash cooks and prevents it from bursting in the oven.
- Place it on a paper plate or towel in the microwave oven.
- Microwave on high for 5 to 6 minutes per pound.
- Turn at least once during the cooking period.
- Let stand two to five minutes depending on the size.
- Cut open and remove seeds.
- Add brown sugar and butter or perhaps some honey and cinnamon.

Now think of doing that same squash in your conventional oven. You'll have your oven heated to 350 degrees for at least one hour. Doing it in the microwave oven makes sense and saves cents, too. How about having acorn squash soon with ham or pork?

If you have suggestions for future topics, write to Eileen Kelly Klehr in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington, Ill. 60006.

Cheese tidbits

Grating or shredding cheese? It's done most easily when the cheese is still cold from the refrigerator.

Using cheese in sauces or atop casseroles? Add it at the very end where the heat from sauce or casserole helps to melt it, without much cooking. Cheese is an instant food that melts readily. Overheating or cooking will only toughen it.

Marvelous mushrooms perk up her many meals

Those unique, umbrella-shaped fungi called mushrooms can be used to pep up ordinary dinners in myriad ways, says Dina Brown of Mount Prospect. She uses them in soup, salads and vegetable dishes, as a side dish and as appetizers.

Excellent for a beef dinner is Dina's marinated mushroom salad. Mushrooms and onions are marinated in oil and tarragon wine vinegar with a touch of liquid hot pepper and parsley. She serves this with a combination of salad greens and tomato wedges or in a bowl as a side dish for a cold buffet.

Like many children, Dina's sons David, 11, and Scott, 5, are not fond of mushrooms, but they do like her cream of mushroom soup. Onions, celery and chicken broth add flavor to this cream soup, which goes well with a chicken dinner.

Lois Seiler

Cook of the week

GOOD WITH broiled or roasted beef is a tasty mushroom side dish. "It is super simple," Dina said, "but always makes a hit with men." Because it is so easy, she often prepares it for her husband, Dennis, and herself.

It's made with whole, fresh mushrooms simmered in buttery bouillon which permeates the mushrooms, giving them an exceptional flavor. They are delicious on top of steak or as a side dish with beef roast.

While Dina prefers fresh mushrooms for most recipes, buying them at a local mushroom farm, she does use the canned variety for a vegetable dish. With marjoram, nutmeg and sherry, they dress up peas, making them an easy yet appealing vegetable for almost any meat.

For cocktail parties, one of Dina's favorite recipes is fresh mushroom caps filled with a seasoned crabmeat mixture. Baked until bubbly, they make elegant hors d'oeuvres.

DINA ADMITS her enjoyment of cooking comes in waves. "Sometimes I cook up a storm and other times I look for easy recipes," she said. She said she also likes to can fruit in the summer. Most of her favorite recipes come from friends or the potluck dinner group to which the Browns belong.

Dina said she operates her own business from her home, providing wall decor for business establishments under contract. Believing you can do anything if you put your mind to it, she also refinishes antique furniture, does upholstering, needlepoints and arranges dried flower centerpieces in her spare time.

TAKE FRESH mushrooms and fill with crabmeat and spices for a delicious hors d' oeuvre — a specialty of Mrs. Dina Brown.

MARINATED MUSHROOM SALAD

½ pound fresh mushrooms
1 large red onion
¼ cup salad oil
¼ cup olive oil
¼ cup tarragon wine vinegar
1 or 2 drops liquid hot pepper
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons dried parsley

Wash mushrooms and cut lengthwise through stems. Cut onions in thin slices and separate into rings. Combine in a bowl. Mix remaining ingredients and pour over mushrooms and onions. Let stand, covered, at room temperature, at least 6 hours or longer.

To serve as a salad, arrange over a combination of two greens on individual salad plates with a large slice or wedge of tomato. Drizzle marinade over top. Serves 6.

To serve as a side dish on a cold buffet, use same recipe with very small mushrooms and omit onions.

CREAM OF MUSHROOM SOUP

¼ pound medium-size fresh mushrooms
1 tablespoon minced onion
2 tablespoons celery, chopped fine
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 cups canned chicken broth
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Wash mushrooms; slice lengthwise. Saute mushrooms, onion and celery in 3 tablespoons butter for 5 minutes, or until onions are transparent. Add broth and simmer 10 minutes.

In top of double boiler, melt 2 tablespoons butter. Add flour and whisk until smooth. Slowly add milk and seasonings. Cook over hot water, stirring until it thickens slightly. Add mushroom mixture and heat through. Do not boil. Serves 6.

TASTY MUSHROOMS

1 pound fresh mushrooms, left whole and cleaned
1 can beef bouillon, undiluted
½ stick margarine

Combine ingredients, cover and simmer for 30 minutes. Serve hot. Good with steak or roast beef.

CRAB STUFFED MUSHROOMS

36 large, fresh mushrooms, washed and stems removed
1 can (7½ ounces) crabmeat, drained and flaked
1 tablespoon dried parsley
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
1 teaspoon chopped capers
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ cup mayonnaise

Combine parsley, pimiento and capers with the dry mustard and mayonnaise. Toss crab meat with this mixture. Fill mushroom caps and bake at 375 degrees for 10 minutes until bubbly and mushrooms are cooked through.

SHERRIED PEAS AND MUSHROOMS

1 jar or can (8 ounces) of sliced mushrooms
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
¼ teaspoon marjoram
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
2 tablespoons sherry
2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen small peas

Drain liquid from mushrooms and save. In a skillet, heat mushrooms in melted butter. Stir in marjoram, nutmeg and sherry. Warm through.

Separate peas and add to mushrooms. Turn off heat, cover and let stand 30 minutes. Just before serving, add about 2 tablespoons mushroom liquid. Bring to a boil and serve. Serves 8.

Wine consumption up in United States

Sip along with Uncle Sam — if you wine buffs follow a trend.

The annual American "Wine Market Review and Forecast" said the consumption of domestic table wine is wine consumption.

The publication reports that table wine continued its strong growth pathe trend. So is the trend toward more tern of recent years, now representing a "record" 61.4 per cent share of all U.S. wine sales. Over-all, the publication says, U.S. wine shipments reached 376 million gallons in 1976, up a modest 2.3 per cent for the year, but "continuing the pattern of increased wine consumption among Americas." The first weeks of Autumn seem to be a time when people become more aware of the food they eat. While farmers are bringing in the first harvests, other folks are busy canning and storing for the months ahead. And for just about everybody, that nip in the air through the crisp, active fall days is causing bigger appetites and thoughts of hot, hearty meals. The Germans realize this in their Oktoberfest celebrations, and here at Jewel we realize it, too. When you visit Jewel this week, you can come away with the makings of some soul-satisfying October meals. There's a fine selection of matchless Jewel steaks, nature's own bounty of delicious fresh fruit, and for dessert, how about the Chef's own apple pie with cheddar cheese? You can have your own October celebration with a memorable feast from Jewel!

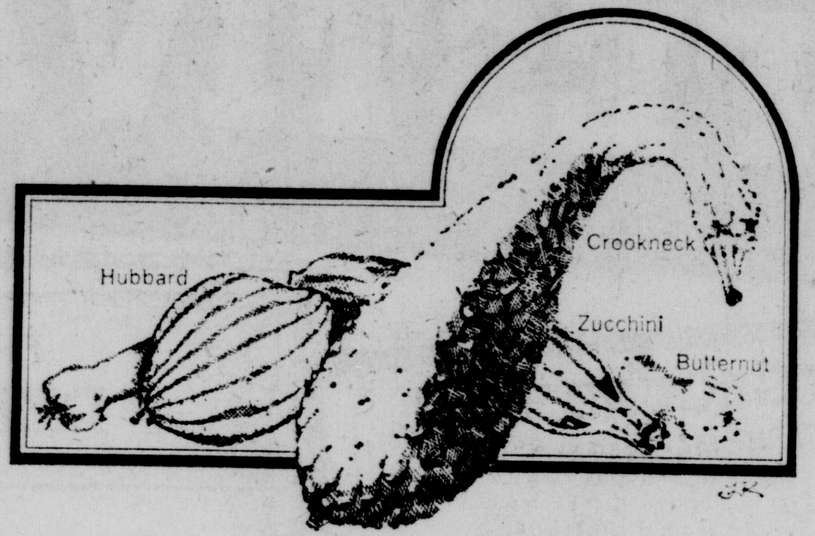
There's much you may not know

Some facts about squash



Fresh approach

How many kinds of fresh squash do you know? There is a wide range of squash in the market and here are tips on how to select, store and serve them.

ZUCCHINI: Sometimes referred to as "Italian" squash, handsome green squash, slender, striped with pale yellow or white with a delicate flavor.

CROOKNECK SQUASH: Easy to identify at market by crooknecked shape. There is also a straight neck squash. Both are bright yellow with slightly nubby peel. Skin has flavor and cooks tender in water quickly, so don't peel this flavorful squash.

STORAGE: All above squash should be stored in the refrigerator.

Turn now o the hard-shelled squash, which are stored and in some cases cooked differently.

BUTTERNUT SQUASH: Cylinder-shaped squash flaring into a bulb at base. Orange-tan color. Flesh inside is yellow or orange, fine-grained, has really delicious, old-fashioned taste. Especially good cut into halves or large pieces and baked with a bit of butter or margarine.

ACORN SQUASH: As name implies, it's acorn-shaped, with a deep-green ridged surface with brilliant orange flesh inside. Seeds and stringy portions are scooped out just before cooking. More emphatic flavor than so-called soft squash such as zucchini.

Half an acorn squash just right for a portion as a vegetable. Baked with a bit of margarine or butter and brown sugar or honey. Also good to stuff with meat and bake for main dish.

HUBBARD SQUASH: A winter squash, giant size, with warty skin. Cut into serving size pieces and bake, or peel, boil and mash. Robust vegetable full of flavor.

STORAGE: Above hard-shelled squash can be stored outside the refrigerator. Ideal storage temperature is about 50 degrees; will keep well for at least a couple of weeks.

Best buys

Cuts of pork and beef continue to top the list in savings at area meat counters this week. Pork chops and roast are good choices for a hearty autumn meal. For a protein-packed alternative, choose chuck, standing or rolled beef roasts. And with the leftover roast, you are ready to pack the brown bag lunches for the coming week. When the leftovers are gone, consider luncheon meats or weiners for sandwiches or a quick snack.

Now's the time to fill your pantry with canned vegetables on sale this week. If fresh produce is a must, look for winter squash, broccoli and cabbage. Acorn squash with a touch of brown sugar and butter is often served with pork, a best buy this week. For the meat and potatoes meal, look for red and white potatoes. Pears, bananas and honeydrew melon are also plentiful.

Other items advertised include flour, sherbet, frozen orange juice, detergent and breads.

Old as civilization

Red or white wine will stay

From prehistoric man to today's connoisseur, people have enjoyed wine for fun and formality. References to wine appeared in the hieroglyphics of Egyptians 5000 years ago and the Chinese people were making wines in 2000 B.C. And who would Julius Caesar be without his glass of wine in hand?

The use of wine continued into Biblical times and even today is used in religious services across the world. Europe dominated the wine production field from 500 to 1200 A.D. with France continuing the precedent today as the leading producer of wine.

But the treasured grape found its way to the United States via Franciscan missionaries by the late 1700s. And today, California is the leading state for grape growing.

MOST PEOPLE look for a wine with good taste — be it an imported or native variety. And wines, as the grapes, appear in colors and tastes suited for any need.

An elegant touch to any meal, table wines lend themselves flavors of dry and sweet with a host of choices in between. Red wines, usually served with red meats and seasoned foods, include burgundy, rose, claret and chianti. Usually a lighter beverage, the white wine complements chicken or fish. Rose makes a good all-purpose wine with the richer dessert wines perfect after dinner or alone.

With the variety of flavors, wine tasting becomes an art for the expert and a necessity for the amateur. As the popularity of wines increases, — there was a 2.3 per cent growth in consumption during 1976 — the taste test is no longer reserved for the experts.

The Brookside Winery and Tasting Room, 1013 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights, brings a bit of the West Coast to the Midwest with a tasting bar stocked with 107 California wines. Customers may taste the variety of wines before making their choice — with pieces of crackers and cheese in between.

"The purpose of the cracker is to clear your palate after each taste of wine," says Klein, who runs the tasting bar. And wine buffs who enjoy cheese with their favorite chablis or sherry soon will be able to taste and buy Wisconsin cheeses at the store.

EXPERIENCE THE tingle of a sparkling burgundy or the richness of a chocolate dessert wine. As Tom Klein, store manager, explains, "Most have tasted some kind of wine before and sometimes it's only a vague notion that needs reinforcing."

How to speak lingo of wine

Judging wine means using the wine vocabulary both in tasting and in reading labels.

Aroma: The part of wine fragrance originating from the grapes.

Body: Consistency.

Bouquet: the Part of the wine's fragrance originating from fermentation and aging.

Clear: No cloudiness.

Dry: The absence of sweetness.

Fruity: A wine with distinct flavor from the grapes.

Mellow: A wine with some sweetness, usually a red table wine.

Nutty: The characteristic flavor of sherry.

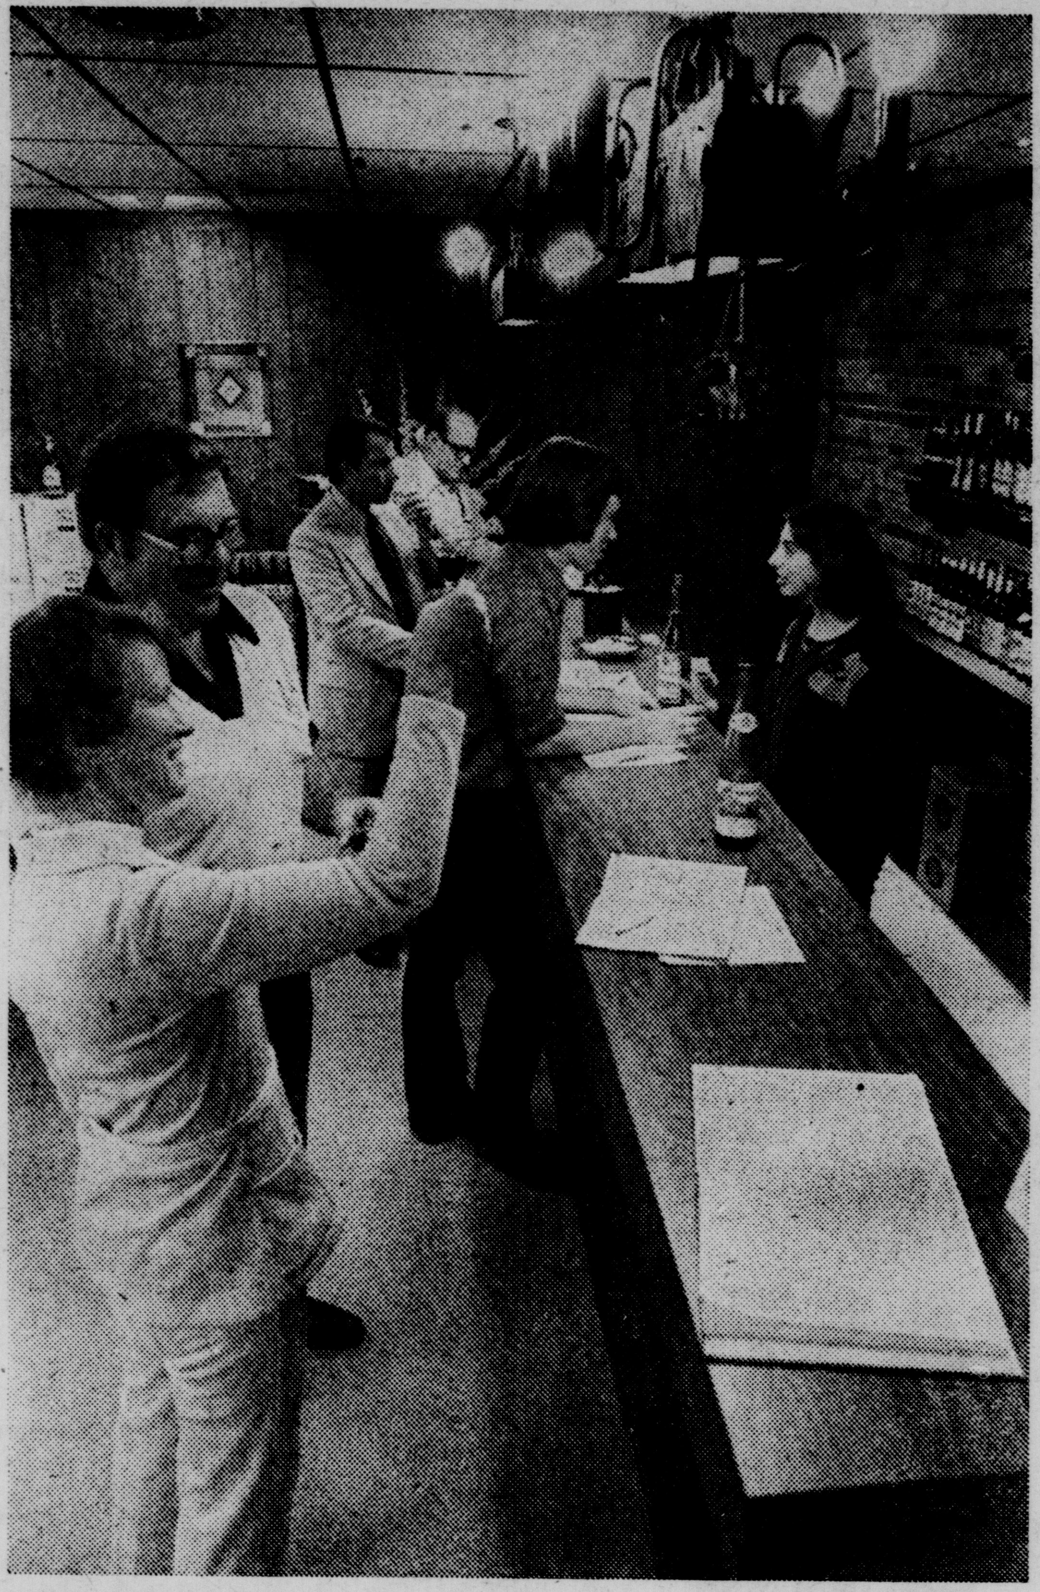
(Terms from the Wine Advisory Board)



WHEN TASTING wine, notice the color and aroma of the wine in the glass. Take a sip and notice the flavor — at the Brookside Winery and Tasting Bar.

Tomato soup for fall lunch

Creativity is the key for lunchtime specialities. And for hungry youngsters, a bowl of hot soup with a sandwich and fruit makes a hearty lunch for a cool fall day.

Try a homemade soup with extra tomatoes left from the summer garden. A rich blend of tomatoes and milk, homemade tomato soup gives soup lovers of any age a new experience in eating.

HOMEMADE TOMATO SOUP

6 or 8 medium size tomatoes cut into pieces
1 small onion, sliced
1 bay leaf
3 whole cloves
¾ teaspoon salt
Dash white pepper or 4 peppercorns
¼ teaspoon soda (to be added after cooking)

Mash tomatoes slightly, add other ingredients, except soda, and cook over low heat, stirring until tender and volume is reduced to about two-thirds.

Press through a sieve or a food mill to remove skins and seeds. Reserve small pieces of tomatoes for garnish. Heat strained mixture thoroughly; add soda and stir until it stops foaming. Keep hot in a double boiler over low heat.

In the meantime, make a simple white sauce as follows:

4 Tablespoons butter melted
4 Tablespoons four
2 cups milk

Cook briefly, blending the butter and flour together. Add 2 cups milk gradually, stirring constantly, until smooth and thickened.

While both are hot, combine slowly by adding the tomato mixture into the white sauce, stirring well to avoid curdling. Do not cook further, but you may keep the soup hot in a double boiler on low heat.

Before serving, add pieces of raw tomato-flesh or peeled cherry tomatoes to each bowl. Peel first by immersing in boiling water for a few minutes. Top with crisp cheese croutons. Serves 6.

Thanks Neighbors, A Quarter Billion Thanks

FOR HELPING OUR ASSETS GROW TO $250 MILLION

There's a magic in numbers. And a quarter billion in assets represents an accomplishment in which many can take pride. Not just the officers, directors and staff members at Lincoln Federal's five offices but you, the neighbors that made it happen!

Fifty thousand dollars in assets in 1916, $5 million in 1949, $50 million in 1963 and $100 million seven years ago. That is a growth pattern admired by an entire industry.

But we don't intend to stand at a "Quarter Billion." There is much more to do. Increased performance, broadened facilities, and greater service to our neighborhoods. Keeping in mind, constantly, proper and safe investment of your funds.

A balanced diet can help heart disease prevention

About half of the men and women who die this year will die of heart disease.

But there is something we can do about this grim statistic. Modern nutrition is among several hopeful factors in the effort to improve heart health.

To begin, knowledge of the terms used by nutritionists is important in your effort to make nutrition work for you. Cholesterol, for example, is not well understood.

"MANY MEN and women do not understand that cholesterol and animal fat are not the same thing. Cholesterol is a definite element. In the blood stream it is called serum cholesterol. In foods it is called dietary cholesterol. The body manufactures cholesterol itself. We also eat foods that add extra cholesterol to the body. When the correct balance is exceeded, in many cases cholesterol obstructs the blood flow through the arteries. It may also stop the flow and cause a heart attack.

"Cholesterol is a lipid, meaning that it can be handled, is greasy and soluble in fat solvents," explains Dr. D. Mark Hegsted of the Harvard Nutrition Dept.

"Some foods contain both animal fat and cholesterol. Egg yolks are heavily charged with cholesterol and fat. So are the red meats. The idea that only the visible fat of red meats contain cholesterol is erroneous. The lean or muscle also contain some.

"Remember that dietary cholesterol is found only in animal fats. That means whole milk and many cheeses, eggs, butter and cream, as well as in beef, lamb, pork, etc. Most of these meats contain both saturated fats and cholesterol.

"I AM NOT recommending that men past forty and, in fact, most people cut out all these delicious foods. No, eat and enjoy them. But eat less of them. This form of self-discipline may pay off handsomely — in longer life.

"On the other hand, the so-called polyunsaturated fats — safflower oil, corn oil, and to a lesser degree some of the oils such as cotton seed, and soy bean, as well as such foods as grains, vegetables and fruits, contain no destructive elements for the heart, including no cholesterol. You cannot substitute these polyunsatured foods for all the others, but do use more of them in your daily diet. They will pay you excellent dividends.

"There are animal foods that have no — or little — cholesterol. These include fish, many types of shell fish and fowls. Include them two or three times a week in your meals," states the Harvard nutrition researcher.

Make nourishing snacks available for after-school

When youngsters come bounding home from school, are there nourishing snacks available? There better be if you want to set a good pattern for between-meal breaks. After all, the habits could last a lifetime.

Shiny apples, grapes, homemade cookies and chilled mugs of milk. Wouldn't that appeal to a hungry youngster?

If you want to add a bit of sophistication to the picture, why not miniature kabobs of apple squares threaded with cubes of Cheddar and Swiss cheese and grapes?

KABOBS ALSO MIGHT be made of those leftover sliced wieners alternated with cheese cubes, cherry tomatoes and cucumber chunks. Or make a cheese spread soft enough for dunking celery and carrot sticks. The same spread also can be used on crackers or sandwiches.

With the new, fast burger-makers in many homes, they can make a grilled cheese in just moments. If that's not available, a heavy skillet can do the job. Spreading the sandwich on the outside with butter helps to brown it attractively and makes it taste better.

Nutritious shakes are fun when made with icy cold milk, fruit-flavored powdered soft drink mixes and even a scoop of ice cream for special treats.

A balanced diet can help heart disease prevention

About half of the men and women who die this year will die of heart disease.

But there is something we can do about this grim statistic. Modern nutrition is among several hopeful factors in the effort to improve heart health.

To begin, knowledge of the terms used by nutritionists is important in your effort to make nutrition work for you. Cholesterol, for example, is not well understood.

"MANY MEN and women do not understand that cholesterol and animal fat are not the same thing. Cholesterol is a definite element. In the blood stream it is called serum cholesterol. In foods it is called dietary cholesterol. The body manufactures cholesterol itself. We also eat foods that add extra cholesterol to the body. When the correct balance is exceeded, in many cases cholesterol obstructs the blood flow through the arteries. It may also stop the flow and cause a heart attack.

"Cholesterol is a lipid, meaning that it can be handled, is greasy and soluble in fat solvents," explains Dr. D. Mark Hegsted of the Harvard Nutrition Dept.

"Some foods contain both animal fat and cholesterol. Egg yolks are heavily charged with cholesterol and fat. So are the red meats. The idea that only the visible fat of red meats contain cholesterol is erroneous. The lean or muscle also contain some.

"Remember that dietary cholesterol is found only in animal fats. That means whole milk and many cheeses, eggs, butter and cream, as well as in beef, lamb, pork, etc. Most of these meats contain both saturated fats and cholesterol.

"I AM NOT recommending that men past forty and, in fact, most people cut out all these delicious foods. No, eat and enjoy them. But eat less of them. This form of self-discipline may pay off handsomely — in longer life.

"On the other hand, the so-called polyunsaturated fats — safflower oil, corn oil, and to a lesser degree some of the oils such as cotton seed, and soy bean, as well as such foods as grains, vegetables and fruits, contain no destructive elements for the heart, including no cholesterol. You cannot substitute these polyunsatured foods for all the others, but do use more of them in your daily diet. They will pay you excellent dividends.

"There are animal foods that have no — or little — cholesterol. These include fish, many types of shell fish and fowls. Include them two or three times a week in your meals," states the Harvard nutrition researcher.

Body tells all private eye discovers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Private investigator Andrea Forrest once asked a trucker if he had ever received stolen property and he suddenly stopped tapping his foot on the rug.

It turned out he was wearing stolen socks.

Reading "body language" — the gestures and mannerisms that often reveal more about someone than what he says — is Andrea Forrest's specialty for prying into people's pasts.

Diamond importers, banks, restaurant chains and other security-minded organizations send job hunters to her Manhattan office to undergo grueling interviews and lie detector tests aimed at uncovering criminal tendencies or just expensive habits, like drinking and gambling.

"People love to tell you about their past," the attractive 30-year-old said. "One fellow was so eager for me to believe a story about a forgery he once committed he gave me his parole officer's phone number."

OTHERS ARE more tightlipped, but Miss Forrest tries to coax them along by "just smiling and being friendly" and taking a casual attitude to whatever misdeeds they mention.

"I always offer an avenue of escape," she said. "One man confessed to an unsolved murder. I just said, 'Well, it wasn't a cop, was it?' and he said, 'Oh, no, it wasn't a cop.' "

She later relayed details to police.

In her conversations, Miss Forrest listens very carefully not only to what people say, but to how they say it. And she scrutinizes their smallest movements.

"Pauses mean a lot," she said. "I asked one fellow if he ever committed an armed robbery. He was silent for a few seconds and finally said no. He was thinking about the unarmed robbery he had pulled off."

Other clues people give, she said, include "feigning deafness" to stall for time, rubbing their noses to show some sort of inner conflict, closing their eyes to blot out unpleasant memories and uncrossing their legs just before telling a lie.

"if they uncross one leg and then cross the other over the first, it's known as a double-cross, and that means they're about to come up with a real whopper," she said.

SOMETIMES, she said, she asks people to describe the wall behind them. The assertive ones stand up and turn around, the exacting ones ask if they may stand up and the lazy ones just glance back, she said.

On occasion, alertness to such signals tips her off to the joking ways of her friends. "One guy who likes to tell tall tales always begins by scratching the back of his neck and tugging on his ear," she said.

In fact, she said, she's learned so much about body language a major publisher has asked her to write a book on the subject.

Miss Forrest began her career in investigative work four years ago as a department store detective and says she "made more apprehensions than they'd ever seen."

Soon, she was security director for a big clothing chain and helped reduce theft losses by 80 per cent. A few months ago she joined the Greenburg Protection and Investigation Agency and her boss says she's already tripled business.

The female private eye attributes her success to her love of people.

"I genuinely like everybody I meet," she said. "Even those I have to nail to the wall."

Body tells all private eye discovers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Private investigator Andrea Forrest once asked a trucker if he had ever received stolen property and he suddenly stopped tapping his foot on the rug.

It turned out he was wearing stolen socks.

Reading "body language" — the gestures and mannerisms that often reveal more about someone than what he says — is Andrea Forrest's specialty for prying into people's pasts.

Diamond importers, banks, restaurant chains and other security-minded organizations send job hunters to her Manhattan office to undergo grueling interviews and lie detector tests aimed at uncovering criminal tendencies or just expensive habits, like drinking and gambling.

"People love to tell you about their past," the attractive 30-year-old said. "One fellow was so eager for me to believe a story about a forgery he once committed he gave me his parole officer's phone number."

OTHERS ARE more tightlipped, but Miss Forrest tries to coax them along by "just smiling and being friendly" and taking a casual attitude to whatever misdeeds they mention.

"I always offer an avenue of escape," she said. "One man confessed to an unsolved murder. I just said, 'Well, it wasn't a cop, was it?' and he said, 'Oh, no, it wasn't a cop.' "

She later relayed details to police.

In her conversations, Miss Forrest listens very carefully not only to what people say, but to how they say it. And she scrutinizes their smallest movements.

"Pauses mean a lot," she said. "I asked one fellow if he ever committed an armed robbery. He was silent for a few seconds and finally said no. He was thinking about the unarmed robbery he had pulled off."

Other clues people give, she said, include "feigning deafness" to stall for time, rubbing their noses to show some sort of inner conflict, closing their eyes to blot out unpleasant memories and uncrossing their legs just before telling a lie.

"if they uncross one leg and then cross the other over the first, it's known as a double-cross, and that means they're about to come up with a real whopper," she said.

SOMETIMES, she said, she asks people to describe the wall behind them. The assertive ones stand up and turn around, the exacting ones ask if they may stand up and the lazy ones just glance back, she said.

On occasion, alertness to such signals tips her off to the joking ways of her friends. "One guy who likes to tell tall tales always begins by scratching the back of his neck and tugging on his ear," she said.

In fact, she said, she's learned so much about body language a major publisher has asked her to write a book on the subject.

Championship to give Kremlin chess pains

NEW YORK (UPI) — This autumn Viktor Korchnoi will sit across a chess board from Boris Spassky to determine who will play Anatoly Karpov for the world championship, but all those Russian names carry little cheer for the Kremlin.

Korchnoi is a defector living in the Netherlands. Spassky is on a year's leave of absence from the Soviet Union living in Paris with his French wife.

Karpov, though living in Russia, has been derided by some as a champion by default. Bobby Fischer, who won the title from Spassky in 1972, refused to defend it on anybody's terms but his own and Karpov was automatically named champion.

In the Soviet parlance that portrays every competition with the rest of the world — from space shots to potato digging — as a battle, things look bleak on the chess front.

And with chess a national passtime in the Soviet Union, the candidates' final between such black sheep as Korchnoi and Spassky cannot be fobbed off when they meet in October or November. A date is still to be set.

"THEY CAN GET away with ignoring the performances of (ballet defector Rudolf) Nureyev but they have to publish the results of the candidates' matches," said a member of the Manhattan Chess Club.

Probably the worst scenario for the Kremlin would be for defector Korchnoi, scorned by the Soviet newspapers as a "petulant" excuse-maker, to crush Spassky and then destroy Karpov.

Only slightly more palatable would be non-resident Spassky's toppling the defector Korchnoi and then smashing the Kremlin's "shining white knight" Karpov.

Spassky, whose loss to Fischer ended a 26-year Russian stranglehold on the title, was allowed to skulk off to Paris on condition he not enter the candidates series.

But when Fischer sulked in Pasadena, Calif., Spassky took his place and entered the contest, "breaking" his word with his Kremlin masters.

After two years of competition and hundrrds of matches, Spassky and Korchnoi are left to play in an ironic pas de deux — with every move studied by chess-crazed Russians.

Soviet chessmen live in a goldfish bowl.

AT THE MANHATTAN Chess club recently, Korchnoi lifted the veil on the world of the privileged Soviet chess player and the pressures and prejudices from the top.

"I ran away because I could not continue my chess career," said Korchnoi who defected after a match in the Netherlands in July, 1976. "I was not a dissident. I was a very privileged person."

Korchnoi blamed his loss to Karpov for what turned out to be the championship in 1974, when Fischer wouldn't defend his title, on the Soviet preference for the younger Karpov, who is "100 per cent Russian," a "member of the working class" and "gives good interviews."

Soviet chess champions have "unfortunately" not been "pure" Russian, Korchnoi jibed.

"SPASSKY IS PART gypsy, and I am a percentage Jew and from Leningrad. Karpov was born in the Urals," Korchnoi said. Spassky, too, is from Leningrad, thought of as too cosmopolitan by some Soviets.

Korchnoi charged that Karpov had the best trainers and they were sent to spy on him.

Korchnoi said he even received an anonymous letter saying it might be best for him not to win (against Karpov) . . . and that they would "deal with me."

Everything in the press was about Karpov, so "I couldn't listen to the radio or read the papers," Korchnoi said.

After his defeat, Korchnoi gave an interview to the Yugoslav press saying Karpov was not as strong as Fischer.

KORCHNOI, WHO is trying to arrange a match with Fischer as a tune-up for playing Spassky, is even more adamant in his opinion today. "Karpov is not a bad player," he said. "But Fischer is a genius." The results of a match between the two?

"Karpov would be crushed after 15 games."

'Jews for Jesus' to visit churches

A Gospel music group and representatives of the Chicago chapter of Jews for Jesus are scheduled to appear at five Northwest suburban churches in October and November.

Olive St., Arlington Heights; and 6 p.m. Nov. 13 at Prospect Christian Church, 302 E. Euclid Ave., Prospect Heights.

Tuvya Zaretsky, leader of the Skokie-based Chicago Chapter of Jews for Jesus, will speak at 7 p.m. Sunday at Cumberland Baptist Church, 1500 E. Central Rd., Mount Prospect.

Moishe Rosen, national chairman of the San Rafael, California-based Jews for Jesus, will speak at 6 p.m. Sunday at the Village Church of Barrington, 70 E. County Line Rd., Barrington.

Flexitime shows staggering benefits

Marlene Fulton was just a little apprehensive when she accepted a clerical job in United Airlines' sales reporting division nine months ago. After all, it would be tough to adjust to a 9 to 5 routine after the relative luxury of a teacher's hours.

The Mount Prospect mother of two need not have worried. Under her department's "flexitime" program, Mrs. Fulton can start work anytime between 7 and 9 a.m. Like 90 per cent of her colleagues, she's at her desk by 7 and out by 3:30 p.m. — a schedule that suits her just fine.

"It's one of the best benefits we have here," Mrs. Fulton says. "My husband's still at home when I leave, and I'm just walking in the door when my kids get home at 3:45. It's great!"

MRS. FULTON'S enthusiasm is shared by a growing number of workers operating under a flexible hours program, one of the most popular — and successful — alternatives to a conventional workday. Flexitime, as it's often called, permits workers to start anytime between predetermined hours such as 7 and 9 a.m. and leave as soon as they've completed a full day. While some companies allow day-to-day scheduling and the chance for employes to "build up" extra hours, most employers operate on a fixed basis, with workers required to be in the office during specified "core" times.

Flexitime got its start in Germany during the '50s and '60s, when a surplus of jobs resulted in a recruiting effort to attract housewives and mothers. A flexible hours program did just that, and today four million German workers (about 17 per cent of the work force) are under flexitime.

FLEXITIME IS becoming increasingly popular in the rest of Europe as well, but the Civil Service Commission estimates only one million of the 93 million workers in the United States have flexible work schedules.

"I'd be surprised if there were more than two dozen companies here that are even experimenting with flexible hours," said Marilyn Thompson of Flexible Careers, a Chicago firm providing career counseling. "It's a completely different way of looking at work, and most employers are afraid of deviating from that regular schedule."

THOSE THAT aren't include the metropolitan area's United Airlines, Sears, Montgomery Ward. R. H. Donnelley and Universal Oil Products, to name a few. Nationally, such employers as Metropolitan Life Insurance, Exxon, Control Data and General Motors Corp. have all or part of their work force on flexitime.

The federal government is getting into the act, too. A General Accounting Office study shows 140,000 workers in 90 government agencies are on flexitime, an increase from 0 to 5 per cent of the 2.8 million government work force in four years.

Two President Carter-supported bills permitting experimentation with flexible hours are now under discussion in the House and Senate, and in Illinois, the Commission on the Status of Women has voted to sponsor a study on the effects and advantages of flexitime.

According to a 1975 Business and Professional Women's Foundation study of 19 companies using flexitime, those advantages are several. They include easier commuting, improved employe morale, reduced absenteeism and tardiness, decreased turnover and increased productivity.

FLEXIBLE CAREERS' Ms. Thompson agrees with the findings: "We found that absenteeism often declines, and tardiness is virtually eliminated," she said. "If someone who lived in the suburbs and worked in the city had a dentist appointment at 10 a.m., many times he'd just take the day off. (Under flexitime) you don't have that problem."

Flexitime is particularly appealing to working mothers, added Tony Chaitin, a United vice-president whose 770-member clerical force is predominantly women.

"They have other responsibilities and interests, and a 7-3:30 schedule allows extra time to shop or prepare dinner," he said. "It doesn't cost the company anything, and it makes our employes very happy. The benefits of the system far outweigh any disadvantages."

And there have been disadvantages to flexitime. At United, a program of "take it when you want to" lunch and coffee breaks was discontinued because the flexitime breaks were causing confusion. While management now accepts flexitime, their work load increased because there was more scheduling and production work involved.

THOUGH GENERAL Motors Corp. has experimented with flexitime on the assembly line, most companies exempt such departments that depend on employe interaction.

"Our computer room is open on a 24-hour basis, and has to be manned continuously," said Carol Carr, personnel director at R. H. Donnelley in Oak Brook, one of the first companies in the Chicago area to experiment with flexitime.

Similarly, R. H. Donnelley's employes in telephone sales "have to serve the public . . . we have to have the coverage during normal working hours," she said. And for the most part, management secretaries are confined to a conventional workday because their bosses are, too.

But for the 350 employes in research and accounting now working under flexitime, the opportunity to tailor their own working hours is a definite, and workable, advantage.

Unlike most companies using flexitime, R. H. Donnelley offers its employes daily flexibility. The Oak Brook office is open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., and employes msut be at their desks during the core time of 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. But as long as they put in a 7¼-hour day, they're on their own. If a worker has supervisor approval, he or she can even come in late one day and make up the lost time the next.

At R. H. Donnelley, as at most companies, the employe himself keeps track of arrival and departure times. Cheating under the honor system has been negligible, thanks in part to peer pressure from coworkers who don't want to lose the extra benefit.

Experience at R. H. Donnelley, United and other companies shows that workers don't treat flexitime as carte blanche to stay out late and recuperate the next morning. Most employes quickly fall into a routine; the 7-3:30 shift can become just as regular as a 9-5. Still, the knowledge that "I can choose" does make a difference.

"When you come right down to it, it's just treating employes as individuals instead of machines," Ms. Carr said. "It works."

Reference books—best introduction to learning

by RICHARD ARMOUR
(Last of four parts)

If your child gives any indication of having made use of a reference work, such as an encyclopedia, you are entitled to a burst of parental pride.

Learning there is such a thing as an encyclopedia may come as early as the fourth grade (or even earlier with exceptional students and exceptional teachers), although most fourth-graders are busy with that word-reference book, the dictionary.

It usually is in the fifth grade, and certainly in the sixth, students will begin to write simple reports that involve the use of an encyclopedia.

Or let us hope so, since this opens up a new world of learning. It is a revelation that in that row of, say, 14 volumes, from A to WXYZ, is the answer to almost any question. This awareness may be the beginning of the reference-book habit, a valuable habit that some, alas, never get.

TEACHERS GO ABOUT the introduction to the encyclopedia and other reference works in many ways. Sometimes the reading text used will have an accompanying workbook or a section of provocative questions or projects. If not, the teacher may raise a question in connection with the reading that will require use of a reference work to get the answer.

A few days ago I talked with a fifth-grade teacher who told me that when a special day is approaching, such as Halloween or Thanksgiving or Christmas, she has her students read in an encyclopedia about the day and then write a short report on what they found most interesting.

Some students, she said, find it easier to get the information than to write about it, since they still are having trouble with writing sentences and paragraphs. But at least now they know what an encyclopedia is and how useful it can be.

By the way, I am referring not to such an erudite and compendious encyclopedia as the Britannica but to the more simply written but quite adequate World Book Encyclopedia, New Standard Encyclopedia or Britannica Junior.

I START WITH such encyclopedias myself. Often I finish with them as well, having found all the information I need.

This same teacher told me of her way of leading students from a story they were reading to a report that required using more than one volume of an encyclopedia.

When they ran across a reference to an hourglass, she asked about other means of telling time. That brought up "clock," "sun dial" and "water glass." The students were asked to write a brief note on each of these, and that led to using several volumes of the encyclopedia.

Discussion of what students found led to Big Ben and grandfather clocks, and caused some students to head back to the encyclopedia for facts about these. The encyclopedia became their friend and helper. With many of them the encyclopedia habit had begun.

Most school libraries are small and the librarian is not a professional but a volunteer, perhaps recruited by the PTA. From the sixth grade up, and perhaps earlier, students should begin to explore the wider world of reference works in the public library — and get to know the reference librarian.

Old Chicago to host get-together of world-famous Hummel 'kinder'

Collecting

Once I bought a darling little Hummel figurine at a garage sale (where else?) depicting a boy with a toothache, and I saved it knowing it would come in handy some day. And sure enough, it did — for a shower gift for a young friend who married a dentist. I refrained from my natural impulse to ask if getting him to pop the question was comparable to pulling teeth.

The Hummel children are VIP around the world; little German children come to life in the drawings of Sister Maria Innocentia Hummel, whose artistic ability so captured the hearts of the populace that in 1935 Franz Goebel, the Goebel Factory, acquired permission to develop the drawings into ceramic figurines. In less than 50 years, the popularity of these innocently delightful "kinder" has risen to include millions of collectors in almost every nation.

TO DATE THERE are about 450 different three-dimensional "M. I. Hummel" motifs including holy water fonts, madonnas, ashtrays, boxes and lamps. A work force of 1,500 operates the Goebel factory at Rodental and the process of one figurine involves more than 700 hand operations and 25 quality control checks. Sister Maria Innocentia's "children" now grace the homes of many American families.

One such family is the Robert Millers of Eaton, Ohio. The Millers began collecting Hummels in 1964 and now own the largest and most complete collection known. Their home includes a Hummel room where the figures line cabinet shelves in regimented order, by size. Many of the figures, such as "The Happy Wanderer," were made in several sizes. The Millers have also acquired the rarest of all, The Hungarian Hummels, which, until this year, were not even known or recognized.

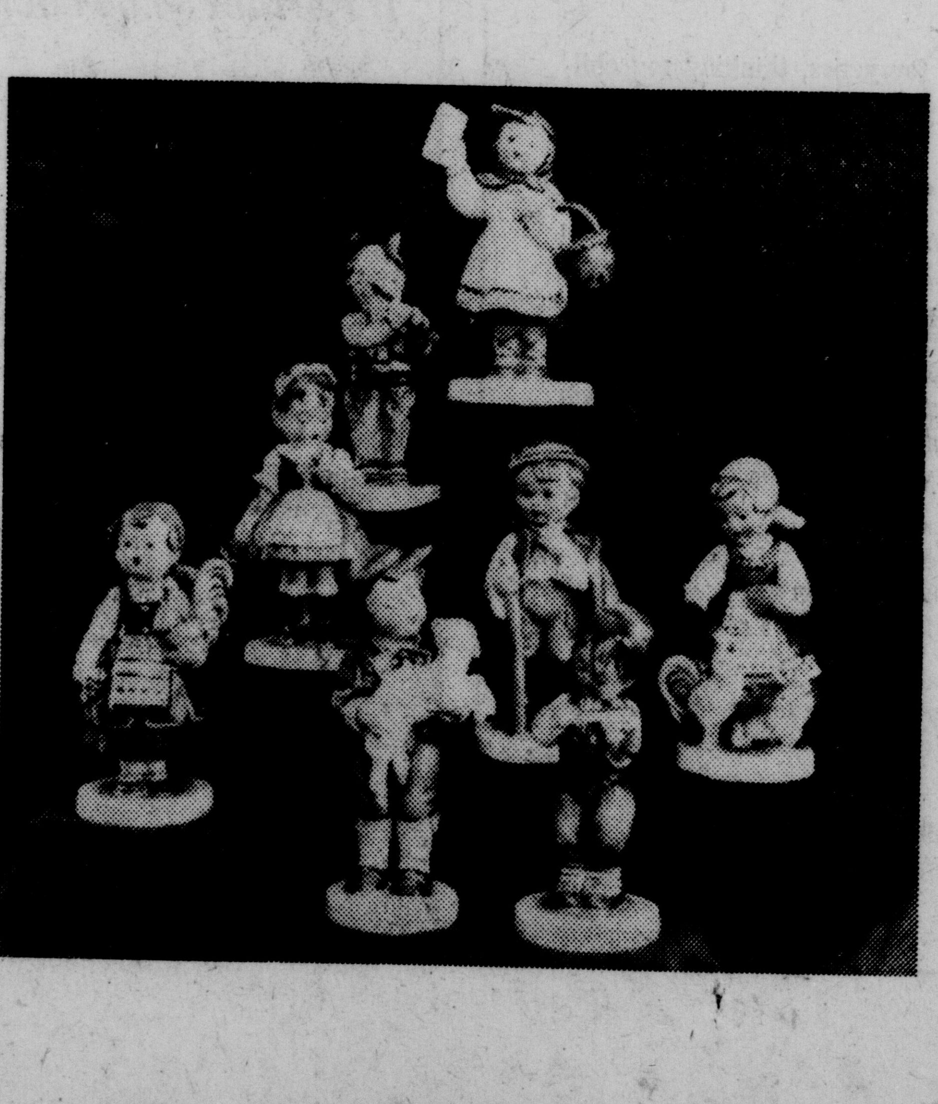
THESE EIGHT Hungarian Hummels, four boys and four girls, were acquired in a gift shop in Vienna, which had obtained them from an elderly lady in Budapest. The Vienna shopkeeper saw Miller's ads requesting Hummels in a hobby publication and mailed him a list. Included in the list were some "unusual" pieces that Miller decided to chance, and he bought them for about $500. They are now valued at $200,000.

The original finder, the Budapest lady, had acquired them piecemeal at markets in her area. She could be called the Budapest Picker. Records at the Goebel factory do not list them, but do indicate that before World War II a set was made as samples but never went into production. The costumes are bright hued in green, red and white of the Hungarian style, unlike the subdued colors of most Hummels.

THE HUNGARIAN Hummels as well as many others will be exhibited at the Old Chicago Collectors' Market Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the Old Chicago Shopping Mall in Bolingbrook.

In addition to the Millers' collection, many other local collectors will exhibit it and sell. The market will also feature plates, poreclains, lithographs and steins. On Sunday at 3 p.m., children 12 years and under will participate in a Hummel figurine Look-Alike Contest. Entries will be judged on costumes they have designed to represent an authentic Goebel Hummel. Also on Sunday at 7 p.m. some 200 figurines will be auctioned. (Preview of these at 6 p.m.)

The Collector's Market is free and open to the public. The Old Chicago Shopping Mall, located at the intersection of I-55 and Route 53 in Bolingbrook, will be open 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day. For more information you may call 312-759-1895. The picture of the Hungarian figurines described above is by courtesy of Old Chicago.



IF YOU HAVE one or a collection of the famous Hummel "kinder," this is a good opportunity to learn more about them, for many knowledgeable persons will be on hand at the market, and you can get an idea of the going rates. But as far as is known, the Hungarian Octet is one of a kind and a treasure unlikely to be repeated.

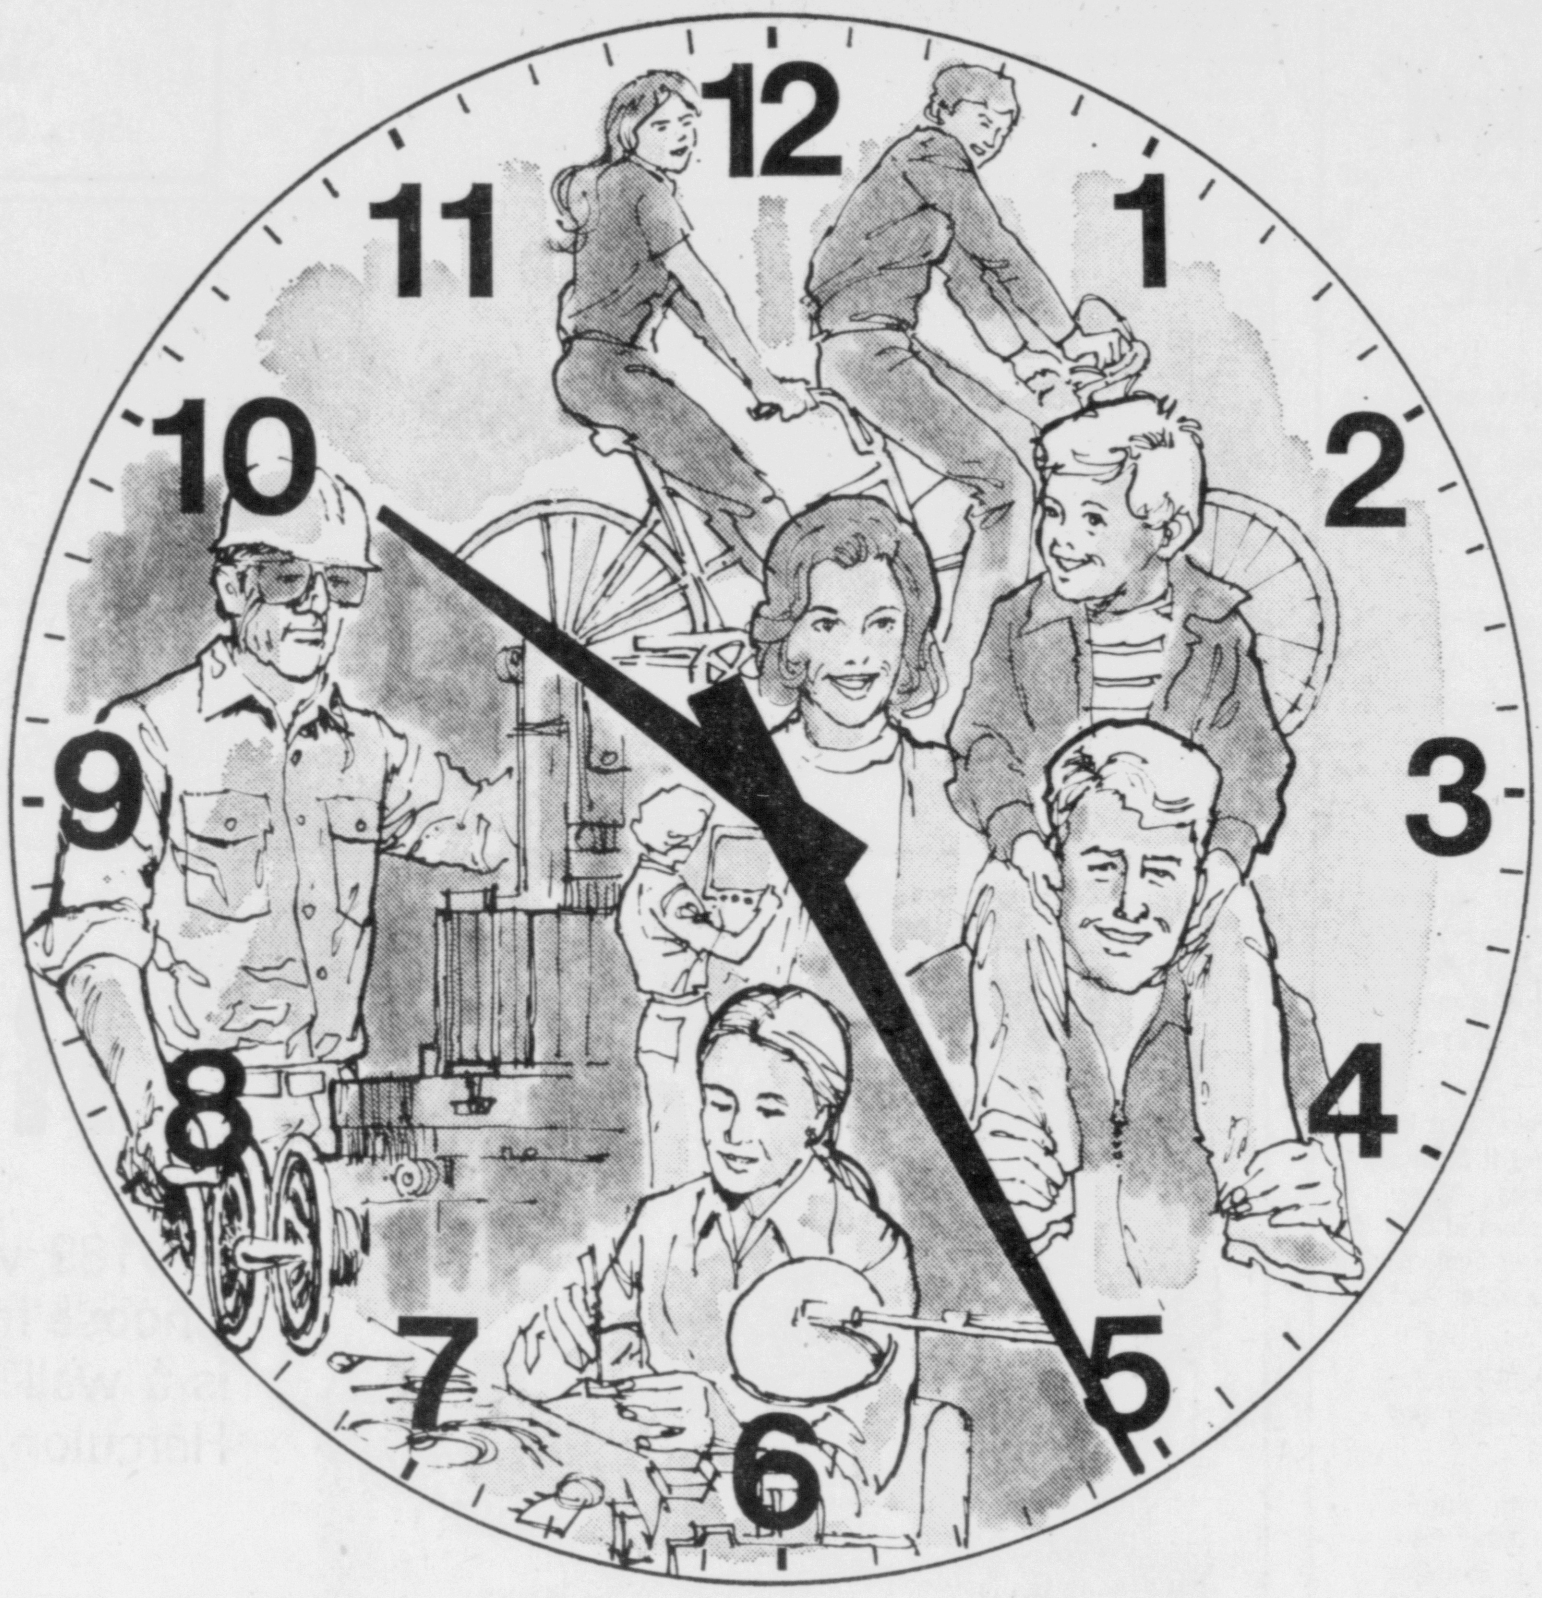
Flexitime shows staggering benefits

by LAURA SCHMALBACH



Marlene Fulton was just a little apprehensive when she accepted a clerical job in United Airlines' sales reporting division nine months ago. After all, it would be tough to adjust to a 9 to 5 routine after the relative luxury of a teacher's hours.

The Mount Prospect mother of two need not have worried. Under her department's "flexitime" program, Mrs. Fulton can start work anytime between 7 and 9 a.m. Like 90 per cent of her colleagues, she's at her desk by 7 and out by 3:30 p.m. — a schedule that suits her just fine.

"It's one of the best benefits we have here," Mrs. Fulton says. "My husband's still at home when I leave, and I'm just walking in the door when my kids get home at 3:45. It's great!"

MRS. FULTON'S enthusiasm is shared by a growing number of workers operating under a flexible hours program, one of the most popular — and successful — alternatives to a conventional workday. Flexitime, as it's often called, permits workers to start anytime between predetermined hours such as 7 and 9 a.m. and leave as soon as they've completed a full day. While some companies allow day-to-day scheduling and the chance for employes to "build up" extra hours, most employers operate on a fixed basis, with workers required to be in the office during specified "core" times.

Flexitime got its start in Germany during the '50s and '60s, when a surplus of jobs resulted in a recruiting effort to attract housewives and mothers. A flexible hours program did just that, and today four million German workers (about 17 per cent of the work force) are under flexitime.

FLEXITIME IS becoming increasingly popular in the rest of Europe as well, but the Civil Service Commission estimates only one million of the 93 million workers in the United States have flexible work schedules.

"I'd be surprised if there were more than two dozen companies here that are even experimenting with flexible hours," said Marilyn Thompson of Flexible Careers, a Chicago firm providing career counseling. "It's a completely different way of looking at work, and most employers are afraid of deviating from that regular schedule."

THOSE THAT aren't include the metropolitan area's United Airlines, Sears, Montgomery Ward. R. H. Donnelley and Universal Oil Products, to name a few. Nationally, such employers as Metropolitan Life Insurance, Exxon, Control Data and General Motors Corp. have all or part of their work force on flexitime.

The federal government is getting into the act, too. A General Accounting Office study shows 140,000 workers in 90 government agencies are on flexitime, an increase from 0 to 5 per cent of the 2.8 million government work force in four years.

Two President Carter-supported bills permitting experimentation with flexible hours are now under discussion in the House and Senate, and in Illinois, the Commission on the Status of Women has voted to sponsor a study on the effects and advantages of flexitime.

According to a 1975 Business and Professional Women's Foundation study of 19 companies using flexitime, those advantages are several. They include easier commuting, improved employe morale, reduced absenteeism and tardiness, decreased turnover and increased productivity.

FLEXIBLE CAREERS' Ms. Thompson agrees with the findings: "We found that absenteeism often declines, and tardiness is virtually eliminated," she said. "If someone who lived in the suburbs and worked in the city had a dentist appointment at 10 a.m., many times he'd just take the day off. (Under flexitime) you don't have that problem."

Flexitime is particularly appealing to working mothers, added Tony Chaitin, a United vice-president whose 770-member clerical force is predominantly women.

"They have other responsibilities and interests, and a 7-3:30 schedule allows extra time to shop or prepare dinner," he said. "It doesn't cost the company anything, and it makes our employes very happy. The benefits of the system far outweigh any disadvantages."

And there have been disadvantages to flexitime. At United, a program of "take it when you want to" lunch and coffee breaks was discontinued because the flexitime breaks were causing confusion. While management now accepts flexitime, their work load increased because there was more scheduling and production work involved.

THOUGH GENERAL Motors Corp. has experimented with flexitime on the assembly line, most companies exempt such departments that depend on employe interaction.

"Our computer room is open on a 24-hour basis, and has to be manned continuously," said Carol Carr, personnel director at R. H. Donnelley in Oak Brook, one of the first companies in the Chicago area to experiment with flexitime.

Similarly, R. H. Donnelley's employes in telephone sales "have to serve the public ... we have to have the coverage during normal working hours," she said. And for the most part, management secretaries are confined to a conventional workday because their bosses are, too.

But for the 350 employes in research and accounting now working under flexitime, the opportunity to tailor their own working hours is a definite, and workable, advantage.

Unlike most companies using flexitime, R. H. Donnelley offers its employes daily flexibility. The Oak Brook office is open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., and employes msut be at their desks during the core time of 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. But as long as they put in a 7¼-hour day, they're on their own. If a worker has supervisor approval, he or she can even come in late one day and make up the lost time the next.

At R. H. Donnelley, as at most companies, the employe himself keeps track of arrival and departure times. Cheating under the honor system has been negligible, thanks in part to peer pressure from coworkers who don't want to lose the extra benefit.

Experience at R. H. Donnelley, United and other companies shows that workers don't treat flexitime as carte blanche to stay out late and recuperate the next morning. Most employes quickly fall into a routine; the 7-3:30 shift can become just as regular as a 9-5. Still, the knowledge that "I can choose" does make a difference.

Red nose aggravated by alcohol, caffeine

I read a column of yours about the reader whose nose turned red. My nose has gradually turned red but it has no enlarged veins. I stopped using cleansing cream but now I would like to know if it is alright to use Crisco vegetable shortening as a cleansing cream. I use cold cream or babyoil as a night cream and a face lotion under by makeup during the day.

Should I stop using these also or what should I do? I am 65 with very dry skin and will do what you say.

One of the things the skin does as it gets older is to stop producing as much oil from the sebaceous glands and it gets dry. Unfortunately the nose and sometimes the forehead may even get more oily.

The red nose with dilated blood vessels is called rosacea or acne rosacea. I am sorry to say we do not know what causes it but we do know that it can be aggravated by anything that increases flushing of the skin. This includes heat, saunas, some facial packs, medicines that are used for increasing the circulation, alcohol, wines, spices and caffeinated beverages such as coffee, tea and colas.

If you ever have eaten a spicy meal you may have broken out in a sweat later. The spices may cause the face to flush and it is this action that leads to their aggravating acne rosacea. Many people do not realize that coffee, tea, and spieces are factors in this disorder but have only heard that it is caused by drinking alcoholic beverages. I might add it occurs to many people who never had a drop of alcohol in their lives.

Some dermatologists give a course of tetracycline antibiotics for it. The treatment takes about four weeks before noticeable improvement is seen.

While this is not the same condition that we see with simple acne with blackheads, whiteheads and pimples, it is probably best to avoid greasy substances on the skin of any type. This includes the Crisco, vegetable oils of all types and greasy face lotions. If you have very dry skin why not use a very small amount of baby oil just over the dry areas and be careful not to get it on the nose area. After you have applied it, then carefully wipe it off and only a thin film will remain. That should be enough to help the skin stay moisturized.

Also, most cosmetics are really hard on skin. They look nice but when the show is over carefully clean your entire face with good soap and water and then use your baby oil on the dry areas only.

Small veins in the nose can often be treated with electrolysis. The small electric current collapses them. You would need to ask a dermatologist about this. If the nose is enlarged from the acne rosacea – and it can become quite disfigured — cosmetic surgery is sometimes necessary to improve the appearance and stop the process.

Mudpack takes basic recipe, easy to make

Dear Roberta: Why do women buy packaged "facials" at pharmacies when one can make one's own excellent mudpack from very simple ingredients? After cleaning the face thoroughly, mix one-eighth cup of fuller's earth (also available in pharmacies) with a drop of lemon juice and enough water to make a thick paste. Smear the pack over the face, and relax until it is quite dry. Wipe off with warm water or washcloth. Leaves skin feeling tingly, fresh, and glowing, as well as closing pores. —Hermine DeLeon.

Catherine Studer–John Rennau

Listen to Marian

Dear Marian,

I went on vacation this summer to Hawaii with my aunt and her family. While I was there I met a guy whose name is Tony. He is 17, a year older than me, but he is super nice. We got along great together.

While we were talking one day, I found he lived in the Chicago area, too. When I left Hawaii, Tony gave me his phone number and told me to call him some time. The problem is I lost his number. How can I contact him since he doesn't have my number?

Lost and lonely

Dear Lost,

There are four possibilities. The first three assume you know his last name.

First, you could go to the library and look up his name in phone books of all the Chicago suburbs and call everyone with that name. If he has an unlisted number or a last name such as Smith or Johnson, that won't work too well. If the library doesn't have phone books, go to the phone company office.

Second, if you know what day he left here or came back and also know what airline he flew, you could call the airline and ask them to check their passenger list.

Third, if you know what hotel he stayed at in Hawaii, you could write him a letter there in care of the hotel and writte on the envelope "please forward."

Fourth, if you don't know his last name or none of the other suggestions work, you could place an ad in the personal column of the newspaper.

Dear Marian,

I have a problem. I like basketball but it is very hard to concentrate on basketball and get good grades in school at the same time. Please help me.

Confused

Dear Confused,

It is really a matter or organizing your time. Do you do homework in study hall or do you find something else to do? After dinner do you start right in doing your homework or do you watch TV or go out with friends? Almost everybody spends a part of their day doing nothing. If you consider what you do at every part of the day, you will surely discover that there is time killed that you could be spending on homework.

Dear Marian,

There's this guy who I have liked for a long time. He liked me once before and everything was great. Since then we have slowly drifted apart. He doesn't know that I still like him, but I don't know whether it really matters any more. Because you see, there's this problem. His father remarried and not only gained a new wife but three extra kids as well. And one of them just happens to be the girl that this guy used to date a couple of years ago. So now she's his stepsister and they're back together again better than before. And to top it off the entire family moved to California about four months ago.

I haven't been able to get this guy out of my mind for a minute. I've been dying to see him and talk to him, but he hasn't come back to visit the old neighborhood. I don't know if I should write to him and find out what's happening or just leave him and his stepsister be. Please help if you can.

T.R.

Dear T.R.,

My advice to you is to do your best to forget this guy. Even if there weren't the complication of the stepsister, the distance problem is just too much. Do your best to keep busy and go out with other guys. In time, you'll find someone who is a little more accessible to occupy your mind.

Reference books introduce kids to knowledge about what he or she is reading now and whether reports are being written, you will very likely hear about use of encyclopedia.

Your child is fortunate if you have a not-too-difficult encyclopedia in your home. Better still if you accompany your child to the local public library and roam the stacks of reference works.

In our town there is a retired army officer who believes in continuing education. He wants to broaden his field of knowledge and also pursue some pet projects. So he goes to the local library almost every afternoon.

He is happiest when one of his grandchildren asks for a ride to the library with him, on a Saturday afternoon, and he has a chance to lead an expedition into the rich land of reference works.

GRANDFATHER and grandchild come home excited about what they have discovered, the grandchild especially eager to impart newly gained knowledge. Ideally the father and mother will show interest and ask for more. Conversation at the dinner table will be lively and informative.

I myself am a lover of reference works, from the Britannica to the Guinness Book of World Records. But although my personal library is crammed with books, and especially reference books, I go to the public library two or three times a week — and head straight for the reference section.

It pleases me that our librarian son began his career as a reference librarian and that our daughter helps the school librarian as an aide. It also pleases me that our son and daughter both have a good encyclopedia in their homes. It was the best birthday present I ever gave them — and, through them, our grandchildren.

Teachers, students, encyclopedias and interested parents together make a great educational team.

Comedy team returns to Sunday night

JOHN ALDERTON AND PAULINE COLLINS

Great Britain's greatest contribution to American television may well be its endearing version of George Burns and Gracie Allen.

They are John Alderton and Pauline Collins whose zany strain of comedy has largely been showcased on public broadcasting stations in this country in serials like "Upstairs, Downstairs" and "No Honestly."

In "Upstairs, Downstairs," Miss Collins played Sarah, the underhouse parlor maid and Alderton portrayed the chauffeur, Thomas Watkins.

THE HUSBAND AND wife team's participation in the early episodes of that series opened the door for their own series, "No Honestly," which followed the absurd and comical relationship of two English lovers who eventually married.

Up until last spring, the 30-minute series preceded WTTW's presentation of "Monty Python's Flying Circus" Sundays at 10:30 p.m., making for one of the most enjoyable and witty combinations of comedy on television.

Sundays just haven't been the ame without the quick and complimentary comic interchange of Alderton and Miss Collins, but there is new hope for Sunday nights.

Beginning this Sunday at 7:30 p.m., the Aldertons will star in a new public broadcasting series, "Wodehouse Playhouse," which will be 13 weekly 30-minute adaptations of short stories written by the late British humorist Sir Pelham G. Wodehouse.

THERE IS A SIMILARITY to the old C. D. and Clara characters from "No Honestly" in the varied roles the couple takes on in the bone-tickling Wodehouse shorts.

But, the new series actually appears to turn the two comedians loose in a Wodehousian never-never land where the character possibilities and humorous situations are endless.

In this weekend's opener, entitled "Strychnine in the Soup," Alderton and Miss Collins portray Cyril and Amelia, who share a passion for novel thrillers and each other. The complication in their romance is that Amelia's mother, an adventuress with predominantly masculine traits, doesn't want her daughter marrying an interior decorator.

The half hour is packed with terrific scenes: Cyril, filling up on liquor at a dinner party in preparation to approach Amelia's mother with the idea of marriage, instead becomes intoxicated.

BY THE TIME he's collected his wits, the party is over and everyone's gone to bed, but he pursues Amelia's mother after hours with the question of marriage.

Part of the nonsensical conversation between the two goes like this:

Cyril: "I love Amelia," in a slur, on his knees at the mother's bedside.

The mother: "What did you say?" frowning beneath her nightcap while smoking a stogie in bed.

Cyril: "When?" His eyes roll and he passes out on the floor.

JUST LIKE WHEN the Marx Brothers were in motion, you have to keep your eyes and ears on every utterance and movement in these Wodehousian works, some of which the author himself introduces in short messages that were taped before his death earlier this year.

In some of the short stories included in the series, Alderton will portray a boring, lunatic politician on the rise, a stammering romantic unable to declare his love, a diffident young man transformed into a tyrant by taking a correspondence course in "How to acquire an iron will" and a fortune hunter.

Miss Collins also tackles a wide variety of parts that include an enterprising screen goddess, a headstrong poet and, of course the thing she's best at, the flaky woman in love.

The two do not always portray the hero and heroine in the Wodehouse short stories which are vaguely set in the 1920s and 1930s in England but universally deal with the follies and foibles of love.

One thing is for certain, however, the couple will definitely keep you laughing and remind you of how delightful the comic partnerships, like those that were so bountiful in American television of the 1950s, can be.

TV NOTES:

The Ali-Shaver fight last week was an absolute knock-out in the ratings which proves that a good boxing match between two true power-punchers can still draw them to the tube. The match was the top-rated show of last week with a 37.3 rating and 53 per cent of the national viewing audience. ABC's ludicrous two-part movie, "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald," and its insulting comedy "Soap" didn't even make it into the top 10 rated shows, which means there is still hope. The shows that were in last week's top 10 behind the Thursday match were: No. 2, "Laverne and Shirley"; No. 3, Happy Days"; No. 4, "Charlie's Angels"; No. 5, "All in the Family"; No. 6, "Three's Company"; No. 7, "Alice"; No. 8, "Baretta"; No. 9, "In the Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan"; and No. 10, "What's Happening."

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- Tonight is a night for television movies. Steve McQueen and Dustin Hoffman star at 7 p.m. on Channel 2 in "Papillion," which reveals the inside horror of Devil's Island, one of the infamous French Guiana penal colonies of the past century. The two actors portray criminals who mastermind their escape in this excellent film.
- James Caan is a good-natured sailor who loses his heart to a prostitute in "Cinderella Liberty" at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

YOU MAY THINK inviting Gregory Peck, Charlton Heston or Henry Fonda to a party would assure you of success. But actually the three superstars are bereft of small talk and considered "dampers."

They're flops at parties

by VERNON SCOTT

There's no better way to put a damper on a Hollywood party than to invite Charlton Heston, Gregory Peck and Henry Fonda to the festivities.

Chuck, Greg and Hank fail to lend a devil-may-care flavor to any congregation. All three are hampered by legendary characteristics, partly their own, partly the accumulation of the roles they've played and the honors that have befallen them.

To be sure, none of the three accept all that many invitations else they'd be going out three or four times a night.

But they are as misplaced at a typical swinging Hollywood soiree as redwoods in a bonzai garden.

FONDA IS MORE socially active than Heston and Peck. But then his wife, Shirley, is young and popular with the party-giving set. Both Lydia Heston and Veronique Peck are immense assets to their husbands socially.

When Hank Fonda does attend a private party he generally can be found alone in the library or den inspecting the host's book collection. Peck usually stands in a corner looking self-conscious and flushed of face.

Heston tries to circulate but generally fidgets on the periphery of groups eavesdropping rather than participating.

Their presence at a party does nothing to encourage the open snuffing of cocaine or firing up of pot. Not a soul remembers seeing any of the trio tipsy, much less roaring drunk.

ALL THREE superstars are bereft of small talk. Oh, they'll discuss show business and arts, but they are strangers to gossip and trivia.

They have excellent analytical minds and communicate brilliantly on a one-to-one basis. But put them in the swirl of a cocktail party or a cattle call buffet and they die on the vine.

Their Herculean reputations intimidate some people, but the bottom line is that they are born gentlemen and all three suffer terminal shyness.

Heston, his famous face wreathed in a grin, said, "My son, Fraser, told me the other day he'd finally discovered I was shy. That took some insight. I thought I'd concealed it behind a cool and collected facade of professionalism.

"HE SAID I do better at parties at which I'm not supposed to have fun. Those would be the banquets and formal affairs I attend for the Motion Picture Producers Assn., the Screen Actors Guild, The American Film Institute, the Motion Picture Academy and the Center Theater Group.

"No matter how square and uncomfortable Greg and Hank and I are at parties, we go when asked. It goes with the franchise.

"They don't give you a percentage of the gross just to make a picture. You have to sell it too. You're not just promoting your own films. You have a vested interest in the on-going success of all movies.

"My criticism of some of the young stars today is that they feel they're compromising their integrity if they do an interview. They feel burdened if they attend an academy function. That's self-indulgent and deceiving.

"I don't attend many private parties because I'm involved in five or six industry events a month. And, to be honest, I really do feel uncomfortable at a social gathering unless I've known the people for 20 years."

HANK, CHUCK and Greg are great front men, heavyweights to adorn a dais for visiting VIPs. Inevitably they are called to participate when visiting firemen are being feted.

Henry Kissinger visited Hollywood recently and for three nights in a row Heston was present at dinners honoring the ex-secretary of state.

"I'm sure Henry was sick and tired of seeing me," Heston said, laughing. "And I was tired of him. But it is part of my work.

"Prince Charles of England is coming to town soon. There will be a formal dinner and lunch given in his honor. I was called to attend both.

"With all this activity, I can't be called a social recluse. But like Greg and Hank, I'm not a social butterfly either.

"I CAN HARDLY wait to become a full-fledged character actor professionally. Then I can become a curmudgeon and sit in a corner and have the host bring me drinks.

"Then when people come up with the tentative questions I can poke them with a walking stick and say, 'You young 'uns, what do you know?

Heston cackled like an old man and polished off a glass of noonday wine.

He will soon be seen in "The Last Hard Men," his first horse opera since "Will Penny" back in 1968.

"I like doing westerns," he said, "and I'd like to work in more of them. I'll tell you one thing, the social amenities were a lot simpler in those days."

Comedy team returns to Sunday night

JOHN ALDERTON AND PAULINE COLLINS

Great Britain's greatest contribution to American television may well be its endearing version of George Burns and Gracie Allen.

They are John Alderton and Pauline Collins whose zany strain of comedy has largely been showcased on public broadcasting stations in this country in serials like "Upstairs, Downstairs" and "No Honestly."

In "Upstairs, Downstairs," Miss Collins played Sarah, the underhouse parlor maid and Alderton portrayed the chauffeur, Thomas Watkins.

THE HUSBAND AND wife team's participation in the early episodes of that series opened the door for their own series, "No Honestly," which followed the absurd and comical relationship of two English lovers who eventually married.

Up until last spring, the 30-minute series preceded WTTW's presentation of "Monty Python's Flying Circus" Sundays at 10:30 p.m., making for one of the most enjoyable and witty combinations of comedy on television.

Sundays just haven't been the ame without the quick and complimentary comic interchange of Alderton and Miss Collins, but there is new hope for Sunday nights.

Beginning this Sunday at 7:30 p.m., the Aldertons will star in a new public broadcasting series, "Wodehouse Playhouse," which will be 13 weekly 30-minute adaptations of short stories written by the late British humorist Sir Pelham G. Wodehouse.

THERE IS A SIMILARITY to the old C. D. and Clara characters from "No Honestly" in the varied roles the couple takes on in the bone-tickling Wodehouse shorts.

But, the new series actually appears to turn the two comedians loose in a Wodehousian never-never land where the character possibilities and humorous situations are endless.

In this weekend's opener, entitled "Strychnine in the Soup," Alderton and Miss Collins portray Cyril and Amelia, who share a passion for novel thrillers and each other. The complication in their romance is that Amelia's mother, an adventuress with predominantly masculine traits, doesn't want her daughter marrying an interior decorator.

The half hour is packed with terrific scenes: Cyril, filling up on liquor at a dinner party in preparation to approach Amelia's mother with the idea of marriage, instead becomes intoxicated.

BY THE TIME he's collected his wits, the party is over and everyone's gone to bed, but he pursues Amelia's mother after hours with the question of marriage.

Part of the nonsensical conversation between the two goes like this:

Cyril: "I love Amelia," in a slur, on his knees at the mother's bedside.

The mother: "What did you say?" frowning beneath her nightcap while smoking a stogie in bed.

Cyril: "When?" His eyes roll and he passes out on the floor.

JUST LIKE WHEN the Marx Brothers were in motion, you have to keep your eyes and ears on every utterance and movement in these Wodehousian works, some of which the author himself introduces in short messages that were taped before his death earlier this year.

In some of the short stories included in the series, Alderton will portray a boring, lunatic politician on the rise, a stammering romantic unable to declare his love, a diffident young man transformed into a tyrant by taking a correspondence course in "How to acquire an iron will" and a fortune hunter.

Miss Collins also tackles a wide variety of parts that include an enterprising screen goddess, a headstrong poet and, of course the thing she's best at, the flaky woman in love.

The two do not always portray the hero and heroine in the Wodehouse short stories which are vaguely set in the 1920s and 1930s in England but universally deal with the follies and foibles of love.

One thing is for certain, however, the couple will definitely keep you laughing and remind you of how delightful the comic partnerships, like those that were so bountiful in American television of the 1950s, can be.

TV NOTES:

The Ali-Shaver fight last week was an absolute knock-out in the ratings which proves that a good boxing match between two true power-punchers can still draw them to the tube. The match was the top-rated show of last week with a 37.3 rating and 53 per cent of the national viewing audience. ABC's ludicrous two-part movie, "The Trial of Lee Harvey Oswald," and its insulting comedy "Soap" didn't even make it into the top 10 rated shows, which means there is still hope. The shows that were in last week's top 10 behind the Thursday match were: No. 2, "Laverne and Shirley"; No. 3, Happy Days"; No. 4, "Charlie's Angels"; No. 5, "All in the Family"; No. 6, "Three's Company"; No. 7, "Alice"; No. 8, "Baretta"; No. 9, "In the Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan"; and No. 10, "What's Happening."

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- Tonight is a night for television movies. Steve McQueen and Dustin Hoffman star at 7 p.m. on Channel 2 in "Papillion," which reveals the inside horror of Devil's Island, one of the infamous French Guiana penal colonies of the past century. The two actors portray criminals who mastermind their escape in this excellent film.
- James Caan is a good-natured sailor who loses his heart to a prostitute in "Cinderella Liberty" at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

YOU MAY THINK inviting Gregory Peck, Charlton Heston or Henry Fonda to a party would assure you of success. But actually the three superstars are bereft of small talk and considered "dampers."

They're flops at parties

by VERNON SCOTT

There's no better way to put a damper on a Hollywood party than to invite Charlton Heston, Gregory Peck and Henry Fonda to the festivities.

Chuck, Greg and Hank fail to lend a devil-may-care flavor to any congregation. All three are hampered by legendary characteristics, partly their own, partly the accumulation of the roles they've played and the honors that have befallen them.

To be sure, none of the three accept all that many invitations else they'd be going out three or four times a night.

But they are as misplaced at a typical swinging Hollywood soiree as redwoods in a bonzai garden.

FONDA IS MORE socially active than Heston and Peck. But then his wife, Shirley, is young and popular with the party-giving set. Both Lydia Heston and Veronique Peck are immense assets to their husbands socially.

Preemptive bid lucks out

The Unlucky Expert has been around more than usual these fall days. Not that all his results are bad luck. On many occasions he contributes to his own downfall.

Here is his sad story. "I elected to open the deuce of hearts. South played low from dummy and my partner's jack forced South's ace. He cashed dummy's ace and king of spades and led a club. I was back in with the jack and played my deuce of diamonds. Dummy's king fell to my partner's ace. He returned the three of hearts. I took my king, gave him a ruff with his jack of trumps. We still had to get a diamond trick to set him one trick. Believe it or not we got a bottom score for plus 100."

He was unlucky, but he might well have tried a takeout double of that three-spade opening. In that case his partner would either have played in four or five clubs, making that contract or North and South might have played at four spades doubled down one or maybe two.

Where was his bad luck? We checked and found out that no other South had opened three spades.

Ask Andy

House members each represent 465,000 people

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Donna Kahn, 12, of Fountain Valley, Calif., for her question:

HOW MANY PEOPLE DOES A HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MEMBER REPRESENT?

The Constitution of the United States gave Congress the power to decide exactly how many representatives there would be in the House of Representatives. It also spelled out a number of other requirements for the elected members: each would have to be at least 25 years old, a citizen of the United States for at least seven years and a resident of the state from which he or she is elected.

Congress must follow these steps in deciding exactly how many representatives there would be: members of the House of Representatives are to be apportioned among the states according to their population; each state must have at least one representative; and there shall not be more than one representative for every 30,000 persons.

Today there is about one representative for every 465,000 persons.

When the first House of Representatives was called to order, a total of 65 members were present. Then, through the years, the number started to grow. Congress passed a law in 1929, however, that set a maximum membership of the House at 435. That number increased temporarily to 437 after Alaska and Hawaii were admitted as states in the late 1950s.

But after each census is held, the U.S. Bureau of the Census reports on the number of seats each state should have and then the seats are reapportioned. After the 1960 census, a new alignment of the House membership was made and in 1962 the number of members went back down to the maximum number of 435.

In the early days of the nation, each state could determine how the members of the House were to be elected, and many decided the people of the entire state could elect the entire group in an at-large election. In 1842, however, Congress passed a law that made it necessary for all states to elect their representatives from congressional districts. All districts were to be as nearly equal as possible in population.

There was much unfair activity in making some of the states' congressional district divisions through a practice called gerrymandering. In 1964, however, the Supreme Court ruled that all districts within a state must have about the same population. And the court in 1969 added the demand that congressional districts be precisely equal. It has been called the "one-man, one-vote" principle.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Gayle House, 11, of Muncy, Pa., for her question:

WHAT IS A DULCIMER?

A dulcimer is an ancient musical instrument that probably was invented in either Arabia or Persia. It is made up of a flat box with metal wires stretched across the top. The wires are attached to adjustable tuning pegs on one side of the instrument.

You play a dulcimer by striking the strings with small wooden or cork-covered mallets. It can also be played by using sticks wrapped in cloth.

In later years, a keyboard was substituted for the hammers and the result was an instrument called the clavichord.

A still-later descendant of both the dulcimer and the clavichord, as you have probably already guessed is the piano.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Illinois 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Preemptive bid lucks out

The Unlucky Expert has been around more than usual these fall days. Not that all his results are bad luck. On many occasions he contributes to his own downfall.

Here is his sad story. "I elected to open the deuce of hearts. South played low from dummy and my partner's jack forced South's ace. He cashed dummy's ace and king of spades and led a club. I was back in with the jack and played my deuce of diamonds. Dummy's king fell to my partner's ace. He returned the three of hearts. I took my king, gave him a ruff with his jack of trumps. We still had to get a diamond trick to set him one trick. Believe it or not we got a bottom score for plus 100."

He was unlucky, but he might well have tried a takeout double of that three-spade opening. In that case his partner would either have played in four or five clubs, making that contract or North and South might have played at four spades doubled down one or maybe two.

Where was his bad luck? We checked and found out that no other South had opened three spades.

Ask Andy

House members each represent 465,000 people

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Donna Kahn, 12, of Fountain Valley, Calif., for her question:

HOW MANY PEOPLE DOES A HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES MEMBER REPRESENT?

The Constitution of the United States gave Congress the power to decide exactly how many representatives there would be in the House of Representatives. It also spelled out a number of other requirements for the elected members: each would have to be at least 25 years old, a citizen of the United States for at least seven years and a resident of the state from which he or she is elected.

Congress must follow these steps in deciding exactly how many representatives there would be: members of the House of Representatives are to be apportioned among the states according to their population; each state must have at least one representative; and there shall not be more than one representative for every 30,000 persons.

Today there is about one representative for every 465,000 persons.

When the first House of Representatives was called to order, a total of 65 members were present. Then, through the years, the number started to grow. Congress passed a law in 1929, however, that set a maximum membership of the House at 435. That number increased temporarily to 437 after Alaska and Hawaii were admitted as states in the late 1950s.

But after each census is held, the U.S. Bureau of the Census reports on the number of seats each state should have and then the seats are reapportioned. After the 1960 census, a new alignment of the House membership was made and in 1962 the number of members went back down to the maximum number of 435.

In the early days of the nation, each state could determine how the members of the House were to be elected, and many decided the people of the entire state could elect the entire group in an at-large election. In 1842, however, Congress passed a law that made it necessary for all states to elect their representatives from congressional districts. All districts were to be as nearly equal as possible in population.

There was much unfair activity in making some of the states' congressional district divisions through a practice called gerrymandering. In 1964, however, the Supreme Court ruled that all districts within a state must have about the same population. And the court in 1969 added the demand that congressional districts be precisely equal. It has been called the "one-man, one-vote" principle.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Gayle House, 11, of Muncy, Pa., for her question:

WHAT IS A DULCIMER?

A dulcimer is an ancient musical instrument that probably was invented in either Arabia or Persia. It is made up of a flat box with metal wires stretched across the top. The wires are attached to adjustable tuning pegs on one side of the instrument.

You play a dulcimer by striking the strings with small wooden or cork-covered mallets. It can also be played by using sticks wrapped in cloth.

In later years, a keyboard was substituted for the hammers and the result was an instrument called the clavichord.

A still-later descendant of both the dulcimer and the clavichord, as you have probably already guessed is the piano.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Illinois 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.
